Strict adherence to road signs needed to reduce road fatality on Dawnataung-Thingan Nyinaung road

YANGON, 6 July — Dawnataung-Thingan Nyinaung road linking between Myawady and Kawkareik is one of the major roads contributing to smooth and speedy flow of commodities in Myanmar.

The road linking with Myawady, a border exit of Myanmar-Thai trade relations, serves as an important route in transportation of goods and passengers. It was learnt that road works were being implemented to repair damage on the road caused by heavy rainfall and a number of traffic volume. Moreover, road signs calling on road users not to overtake at narrow places had already been set up along the road by the Ministry of Construction. Up and down vehicles shuttling between Myawady and Kawkareik are allowed to use the road on alternate days.

It was learnt that traffic came to a halt when some vehicles broke down on the road and mechanical failures of some vehicle and due to small vehicles trying to overtake the 12-wheeled trucks. Although the road allowed vehicles to be parked for repair at wide turns, even regular drivers have to take special attention to drive at narrow turns. It is usual to take three and half or four hours for the journey from Myawady to Kawkareik, but vehicle crashes or broken-down cars make traffic halt for long hours and drivers annoyed, resulting in road fatalities while overtaking each other.

That's why, it is required for road users to have a strict adherence to traffic measures written on road signs so that loss of life and injuries caused by road accidents will be reduced.

Myanmar exports rice (Hsinthwelatt) to Japan for first time in 45 years

YANGON, 6 July — Myanmar's Hsinthwelatt and Hmawby (2) paddy strains have access to the rice market of Japan that needs to import over 600 tons of rice from foreign countries including the US and Thailand, it is learnt.

A Myanmar-Japan business meet took place at the hall of Myanmar Rice Federation on 13 December 2012. Those present held talks on the Japanese invitation of rice tender at the meeting.

shortly after winning the tender. Then, raw rice, packed rice and sample of rice were under scrutiny at the every stage to meet Japanese standards and they were allowed to transport to warehouses in Japan after passing a final check before unloading them from the ship.

Two Koreas open talks on suspended industrial zone

SEOUL, 6 July—North and South Korea began working-level talks Saturday at the truce village of Panmunjeom to discuss issues related to a joint industrial complex in the North's border city of Kaesong, at which operations have been suspended for three months.

Each side has sent a three-member delegation to the talks, which are being held on the North Korean side of Panmunjeom, located in the middle of the Demilitarized Zone between the two Koreas.

The South had proposed the meeting on Thursday after North Korea said the previous day it would allow South Korean businessmen and government officials to visit the Kaesong industrial zone.

Operations at the zone, which has long been a symbol of inter-Korean cooperation, came to a halt on 9 April after Pyongyang, amid heightened tensions on the Korean Peninsula, withdrew its 53,000 workers employed by more than 100 South Korean companies there. Pyongyang had cut off communication links with Seoul in March in response to joint South Korea-US military exercises and the South's condemnation of the North's third nuclear test in February in defiance of UN Security Council resolutions.

On Friday, South Korea's Unification Ministry spokesman Kim Hyung Seok said Seoul wants to discuss "constructive normalization" of the Kaesong complex at the Panmunjeom talks.

"The government has pointed out on numerous occasions that Kaesong must be developed as an area that follows international standards and where common sense prevails," he was quoted as saying by Yonhap News Agency, suggesting Seoul seeks safeguards to prevent work stoppages caused by arbitrary actions taken by Pyongyang.

Venezuela offers asylum to US fugitive Snowden

CARACAS, 6 July—Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro offered asylum to former US intelligence contractor Edward Snowden on Friday in defiance of Washington, which is demanding his arrest for divulging details of secret US spy programmes.

"In the name of America's dignity ... I have decided to offer humanitarian asylum to Edward Snowden," Maduro told a military parade marking Venezuela's independence day. "He is a young man who has told the truth, in the spirit of rebellion, about the United States spying on the whole world." The 30-year-old former National Security Agency contractor is believed to be holed up in the transit area of Moscow's Sheremetyevo international Airport.

Russian officials have kept Snowden at arm's length since he landed from Hong Kong on June 23, saying the transit area where passengers stay between flights is neutral territory and he will be on Russian soil only if he goes through passport control.

It was not immediately clear how Snowden would react to Maduro's offer, nor reach Venezuela if he accepted. There are no direct commercial flights between Moscow and Caracas, and the usual route involves changing planes in Havana. It is not clear if the Cuban authorities would let him transit. Given the dramatic grounding in Vienna of the Bolivian president's plane this week over suspicions that Snowden was onboard, using European airspace could prove problematic.

One alternative flight plan would involve an aircraft taking off from Moscow, refuelling in Vladivostok, and then continuing east over the Pacific to South America.

Highly radioactive water found in another well at Fukushima plant

TOKYO, 6 July—Tokyo Electric Power Co said on Friday it has detected highly radioactive water in a well newly built to check the spread of underground contamination at the crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant.

The well is only several metres from a pit from which highly radioactive water was found seeping into the adjacent sea in April 2011, shortly after the nuclear crisis commenced at the plant. According to TEPCO, a water sample collected Monday from the well, around 25 meters from the sea, contained about 900,000 becquerels per liter of radioactive substances such as strontium that emit beta rays.

TEPCO spokesman Masayuki Ono told a Press conference that the company will check whether the water leak more than two years ago has affected the contamination level of water inside the well.

Meanwhile, to improve the reliability of the cooling system for the crippled

Nos. 1 to 3 reactors, TEPCO started using a 3-kilometer-long water circulation route that is 1 km shorter than previously.

Water once used to cool the damaged reactors is currently recycled as coolant after the level of radioactivity has been lowered in a water-processing facility. —Kyodo News

Islamist protests hit cities across Egypt, at least 24 dead

CAIRO, 6 July—At least 24 people died across Egypt on Friday as Islamists opposed to the overthrow of President Mohamed Mursi took to the streets to vent their fury at what they say was a military coup.

Fierce clashes in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria left 12 dead and 200 injured, while in Cairo, five people were killed as pro- and anti-Mursi protesters ran amok in central areas and armoured personnel carriers rumbled among them to restore calm.

Five police officers were gunned down in separate incidents in the North Sinai town of El Arish, and while it was not clear whether the attacks were linked to Mursi's ouster, hardline Islamists there have warned they would fight back. Tens of thousands of people marched across the country in what Mursi's Muslim Brotherhood movement called a "Friday of Rage" to demonstrate against his overthrow and the army-backed interim government being set up to prepare for new elections.

A new prime minister could be named as early as Saturday. Egypt's first freely elected president was toppled on Wednesday, the latest twist in a tumultuous two years since the fall of Hosni Mubarak in the Arab Spring uprisings that swept the region in 2011.

The events of the last week have aroused concern among Egypt's allies in the West, including key donors the United States and the European Union, and in neighbouring Israel, with which Egypt has had a US-backed peace treaty since 1979.

Friday's fatalities added to the dozens of deaths in a month of unrest. Last Sunday, huge rallies in Cairo and other cities called for Mursi's resignation, venting anger over economic stagnation and perceptions of a Brotherhood power grab. His overthrow was greeted with wild scenes of celebration but infuriated supporters who fear a return to the suppression of Islamists they endured under generations of military rule.

It has deepened Egypt's crisis. With its supporters enraged by Mursi's removal from power, the Brotherhood says it wants nothing to do with what the army has billed as an inclusive transition plan, culminating in fresh elections. The military has given scarce details — its road map gave no timeframe for a new ballot — adding to political uncertainty at a time when many Egyptians fear violence could polarise society even further.

Leftist former presidential candidate Hamdeen Sabahi told Reuters he hoped the transition could last only six months. And, in common with allies on the liberal left, he insisted there had been no military coup. He called the idea an insult to Egypt. In an early incident that raised tensions in Cairo, three protesters were shot dead outside the Republican Guard barracks where deposed Mursi is being held, security sources said.

The army denied blame for the shootings. An army spokesman said troops did not open fire on the demonstrators and soldiers used blank rounds and teargas to control the crowd.

Myanmar History in Decisive Dates

The following is an reproduction of an article published in Myanmar Hotels and Tourism Guide 2013.—Ed

The earliest civilisations were those of the Pyu people, who flourished after the 3rd century BCE, and the Rakhine, whose kingdom was established in the 4th century BCE. The Pyu kingdoms were destroyed in the 9th century by invading Nan Ch'ao forces from China's present-day Yunnan province and the remainder of the race century Bagan fell to the invading hordes of Kublai Khan. Of the four thousand temples of the time, only over two thousands remain as living places of worship. Smaller kingdoms were founded by descendents of the Bagan kings.

They include the 16th century kingdom of Taunggoo. King Tabin Shwe Hti,

The Third Myanmar Empire was founded by King Alaungpaya in 1752 in upper Myanmar. His Konbaung dynasty the last of Myanmar's monarchies, ended with the invasion of British colonialists in 1885. The last monarch, King Thibaw, was sent into exile in India with his family.

After mounting nationalist fervour against the British that began in the 1920s, a harsh period of war and Japanese occupation, Myanmar finally regained its independence in 1948. A short and chaotic period of democratic government followed, during which insurgencies broke out throughout the country.

In 1962, the military seized power in a coup and introduced austere socialist policies that doomed what had been one of the richest countries in the region to the status of one of the poorest. As insurgencies raged throughout the country, economic mismanagement – including demonetisations that rendered peoples' savings worthless – led to a mass uprising in 1988, with an initial demand for greater economic opportunity being overtaken by calls for a return to multi-party democracy.

The military took power the same year and ruled first as the State Law and Order Restoration Council and then as the State Peace and Development Council. During its tenure the military government made peace with most of the insurgent groups, a development that brought law and order to vast areas of the country and provided opportunities for Myanmar and foreigners to visit areas containing historical and natural wonders to which access had previously been restricted.

General elections were held in November 2010 and the State Peace and Development Council handed over power on 30 March 2011 to the elected government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, under President U Thein Sein. History has much impact on the present and this is never truer than for Myanmar, a country strongly rooted in traditions, culture and proud memories of a centuries-old civilisation.

Over 30,000 Tibetan antelopes give birth in Hoh Xil

XINING, 6 July—About 35,000 pregnant Tibetan antelopes have given birth or are expecting on the Hoh Xil National Nature Reserve on the Qinghai-Tibet Plateau. Marching across grasslands and mountains, the pregnant antelopes finished a long journey from their habitats in northwest China's Qinghai Province and Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region and the Ngari prefecture and Changtang area of Tibet Autonomous Region, southwest China, to arrive at the bank of Zonag Lake in Hoh Xil to give birth.

Xiao Penghu, deputy chief of the reserve's management bureau, said the bureau has sent special teams out to prevent the antelopes from being poached.

Five conservation stations have been set up to monitor the antelopes' migration and ensure their safety while traveling across the Qinghai-Tibet

Railway and Qinghai-Tibet Highway, Xiao said.

Songamge, a ranger at the reserve, said they have asked passing vehicles to slow down so that the antelopes can cross the highway smoothly. When pregnant antelopes come over in large groups, rangers close some sections of the road temporarily to make way for the antelopes, Songamge added. Over 60 percent of the 35,000 antelopes have already given birth, said Zhao Xinlu, Director of Zonag Lake's conservation station.

The number of Tibetan antelopes in or near the reserve has increased from about 20,000 in 1998, when the reserve was established, to 60,000 at present, according to Xiao.

The antelopes have been targeted by poachers since the 1980s. Armed poaching led to a sharp decline in the antelope population in the 1990s.

Japan's DoCoMo holds out to iPhone mania, but at what cost?

Tokyo, 6 July—NTT DoCoMo Inc, Japan's largest mobile provider and a pioneer of the mobile Internet, is one of just a few holdouts among the world's big mobile carriers not offering Apple Inc's iPhone to its 60 million customers. It is paying heavily for that obstinacy—with a net 3.2 million users jumping ship to its two domestic rivals over the last 4-1/2 years—but is determined to protect the walled garden of services it has built around its own smartphones.

"We're trying to develop a lifestyle system," NTT DoCoMo CEO Kaoru Kato told Reuters in an interview this week. While customers and even some executives increasingly clamor for it to relent and sign an iPhone deal, DoCoMo is showing no signs of softening towards Apple. "The biggest problem is the impact on the services that we offer," Kato said.

DoCoMo's broad offering of exclusive features, however, is no longer attracting what has become the iPhone generation. It is expected eventually to either reach a deal with Apple or risk losing its crown at the top of its industry. "Unit sales are doing quite well this year but they're still losing customers to other networks," said Hiroshi Yamashina, senior telecoms analyst at BNP Paribas. "If that's the case then they really have no choice but to go for the iPhone."

Japanese consumers favoured DoCoMo's mode of integrated system back when it launched the world's first large-scale mobile web access service and introduced streamed TV to cellphone users. But its wide array of features — while retaining its share of fans — is not considered sufficient to counter the appeal of the iPhone. "Its photo service, for example, is very difficult to use and I'm not sure anyone still bothers in the age of Instagram and Flickr," said Yamashina.

Rivals to loom large over HTC sales, third-quarter growth seen flat

HTC smartphones are displayed in a mobile phone shop in Taipei on 8 April, 2013. —REUTERS

TAIPEI, 6 July—HTC Corp may not sustain sales growth into the third-quarter as the glow around the Taiwanese smartphone maker's flagship model is likely to be eclipsed by new products from bigger rivals Apple Inc and Samsung Electronics Co Ltd. Strong sales of the latest version of the HTC One, as well as the colourful Butterfly range, boosted HTC's second-quarter net profit surged to T$1.25 billion ($41.63 million) from a record low in the previous quarter when a shortage of camera components delayed its product launch.

The profit figure, however, lagged forecasts and analysts said the sales growth was likely to be short-lived. Sales for the July-September quarter are expected to remain little changed from the previous quarter and few new products are in the pipeline. The company has also cut back on component orders for the quarter, which traditionally sees higher sales, several analysts said. BNP Paribas, in a recent research note, said it expected overall third-quarter orders to remain flat from the second-quarter.

"HTC may have new products in Q3, but competition from Apple and other Chinese brands are fierce," said Taipei-based analyst

Peter Liao of Nomura Securities. "It'll be hard to keep the growth." Analysts said the almost 25 percent drop in HTC's June sales compared to the same year-ago period also boded ill for the next quarter. "The big drop on June sales likely proves the HTC One sales momentum slowdown and 3Q may be only flattish as is the market expectation," Goldman Sacks analyst Michael Shieh said.

Growth in sales for smartphone market leader Samsung Electronics has also started to wane. The South Korean firm missed already modest expectations for its quarterly earnings guidance, deepening worries that its smartphone business may have peaked. HTC has embarked on a marketing campaign to boost its brand image, a strategy it said in May would squeeze operating margins for the rest of the year. The company is expected to launch the One Mini phone, which features a 4.3-inch screen and is targeted at the mid-market, in August, a month before both heavyweights Samsung and Apple are likely to release new and upgraded offerings. —Reuters

Dell shares fall as investors bet against higher buyout bid

NEW YORK, 6 July—Shares of Dell Inc fell more than 3 percent on Friday, as investors grew skeptical that founder Michael Dell and Silver Lake Partners will raise their $24.4 billion buyout bid in order to overcome growing opposition. A deteriorating outlook for the PC industry has made a deal more challenging, and the buyout group is currently not planning to increase its $13.65 per share offer to take Dell private, people familiar with the matter said on Wednesday. Bloomberg separately reported on Friday morning that Michael Dell and Silver Lake ruled out raising their bid, citing people with direct knowledge of the matter.

Shares of Dell were trading 3.1 percent lower at $12.89 on Nasdaq. Dell's board has grown skeptical of the prospects of Michael Dell's bid after recent meetings with major investors, and has advised Dell to raise the bid if he wanted the deal to go through, sources familiar with the matter previously said. Michael Dell did not commit to a new course of action and so far has not communicated his decision to the board one way or another, one of the sources said on Friday.

Several large Dell shareholders told the board that the bidders would need to increase the price or offer shareholders a chance to continue to own a piece of the company for them to approve the deal. Failing that, the investors said, they want the board to come up with a 'Plan B' for Dell. The shareholder pressure on Dell comes ahead of a key report expected next week by investment advisory firm Institutional Shareholder Services, and a July 18 shareholder meeting, when investors will vote on the Michael Dell-Silver Lake deal.—Reuters

Morningstar says clients' credit card data may have been leaked

BOSTON, 6 July—Investment research firm Morningstar Inc (MORN.O) said personal information, including credit card details, of about 2,300 users of its Morningstar Document Research service may have been compromised due to a security breach last year. The incident on 3 April, 2012 may also have led to the leakage of names, addresses, email addresses and passwords, the company said in a filing on Friday. Morningstar Document Research, formerly 10-K Wizard, provides a global database and search tool for company filings.

An additional 182,000 clients who had email addresses and user-generated passwords on the system may also have been affected, Morningstar added. "We have encouraged clients whose credit cards may have been compromised to monitor their credit reports and credit card accounts," the research firm said. The company has also sent notices to its clients asking them to reset their passwords.

Morningstar spokeswoman Margaret Cohen said the company became aware of the breach in late May and began informing clients in June. The matter became public on Friday when Morningstar released its 8K filing, which it does on the first Friday of every month, and uses as an opportunity to answer questions that have been posed to the company.—Reuters

WHO calls for action against obesity, excess weight

VIENNA, 6 July—The World Health Organization (WHO) on Friday urged member states to take stronger action against obesity and excess weight to lessen obesity-related diseases.

Representatives from 48 states at the European ministerial conference on nutrition and noncommunicable diseases signed the Viennese Declaration at the two-day meeting. "We reaffirm our commitment in the context of European and global initiatives to combat the major risk factors for non-communicable diseases, especially an unhealthy diet and physical inactivity," the declaration said.

Measures recommended include less fat, sugar, and salt consumption in diets along with an increase in physical activity, through which it is hoped to bring about a 25 percent reduction in premature mortality from the study said cultural differences between doctors and patients and a lack of time to closely evaluate each person in the emergency room may encourage unconscious stereotypes that affect doctors' treatment decisions. Lack of standardized guidelines on how to treat pain may also be a factor, Joynt told Reuters Health. He and his colleagues analyzed data from about 1,400 hospital ERs between 2006 and 2009. During that span, the ERs prescribed opioids to just over 50,000 people reporting moderate or severe pain.

Both race and income were linked to a patient's chance of being prescribed an opioid, or example, 46 percent of white patients with moderate or severe pain were given opioids, compared to 39 percent of black patients. And 45 percent of non-Hispanic people received the drugs, versus 40 percent of Hispanics.

WHO sets up emergency committee on MERS virus

GENEVA, 6 July—The World Health Organization is forming an emergency committee of international experts to prepare for a possible worsening of the Middle East coronavirus (MERS), which has killed 40 people, WHO flu expert Keiji Fukuda said on Friday. Fukuda said there was currently no emergency or pandemic but the experts would advise on how to tackle the disease if the number of cases suddenly grows. Most of the cases of MERS so far have been in Saudi Arabia, which hosts millions of Muslim visitors every year for the annual haj pilgrimage. "We want to make sure we can move as quickly as possible if we need to," Fukuda told a news conference.

"If in the future we do see some kind of explosion or if there is some big outbreak or we think the situation has really changed, we will already have a group of emergency committee experts who are already up to speed so we don't have to go through a steep learning curve."

The emergency committee is the second to be set up under WHO rules that came into force in 2007, years after the 2002 SARS outbreak. The previous emergency committee was set up to respond to the 2009 H1N1 pandemic.

Fukuda said MERS (Middle East Respiratory Syndrome) remained a patchwork of infections that had not yet swept through countries or communities as influenza can. The committee was partly being formed to consider big gaps in knowledge about the disease, he added.—Reuters

Murdoch belittled British police in secret recording by staff

LONDON, 6 July—Rupert Murdoch belittled a British police inquiry into bribes allegedly paid by his journalists in a secret recording made by his staff, in sharp contrast to the profuse public apologies he made to defuse anger at news gathering practices.

Murdoch told staff at his Sun tabloid in a private meeting in March that he had been wrong to help the police investigation into tactics he said reporters had used for decades, and promised unspecified support to reporters snared by the inquiry.

A News Corp spokeswoman defended Murdoch and the firm but did not question the accuracy of the recording, which was made by a member of staff at the meeting in London and obtained by the Exaro investigation website.

Murdoch, the head of News Corp and 21st Century Fox, had described himself as humbled and appalled by the revelations of illegality and phone hacking that forced the closure of his prized News of the World tabloid two years ago. But in the private meeting with staff the media mogul railed

Cameron wins symbolic vote on EU referendum

LONDON, 6 July—Prime Minister David Cameron won a parliamentary vote on Friday on making a referendum on Britain's European Union membership legally binding, but his victory is largely symbolic as it will not tie the hands of a future government.

Trailing in the polls before a 2015 election, Cameron hopes his support for the bill will end his Conservative Party's feuds over Europe, win back voters lost to anti-EU rivals and expose the opposition Labour Party's refusal to back a referendum.

MPs backed the bill, which legislates for an EU referendum by the end of 2017, by 304 votes to zero, in an exercise seen as a way to convince eurosceptic Britons that Cameron is serious about giving them an "in/out" EU vote.

Cameron's pro-EU coalition partner, the Lib

Dems, and most opposition Labour MPs abstained after dismissing the vote as a parliamentary "stunt" that wasted lawmakers' time.

Unable to put forward a referendum bill as a government due to Liberal Democrat opposition, Cameron threw his support behind the bill proposed by his party's youngest lawmaker, 29-year-old James Wharton. "It is about time we gave those millions of British people who want a say the chance to do so," Wharton told a charged session of the Commons.

Cameron, who wants Britain to stay inside a reformed EU, says upheaval in the EU since the euro zone crisis makes it the right time to give voters their first say on Europe since they opted to stay in the bloc in a 1975 referendum.

The bill could still be defeated as it passes through parliament. Even if it becomes law a future government could repeal it.

The Lib Dems pointed out that Britain already has a law guaranteeing a referendum if the 28-nation bloc seeks treaty changes that would transfer more powers to Brussels.

Labour leader Ed Miliband refuses to back an EU vote, though media reports suggest the party might soon change tack, perhaps even seeking an early referendum.—Reuters

South American leftist leaders rally to Bolivia's side in Snowden saga

Bolivian riot policemen stand guard at the entrance of the French Embassy in La Paz, during a protest against the French government's ban of Bolivian President Evo Morales' plane in its airspace.—REUTERS

COCHABAMBA, (Bolivia), 6 July—South America's most outspoken leftist leaders gathered on Thursday to rally behind Bolivian President Evo Morales, whose plane was diverted in Europe this week on suspicions that fugitive US spy agency contractor Edward Snowden was aboard.

The summit in Cochabamba, Bolivia—where Morales began his political career as a leader of coca leaf farmers—is aimed at expressing outrage over his "virtual kidnapping" and the US pressure they believe spurred it.

"Europe broke all the rules of the game," Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro said shortly after arriving at the Cochabamba Airport. "We're here to tell President Evo Morales that he can count on us.

Whoever picks a fight with

Bolivia, picks a fight with Venezuela."

Ecuadorian President Rafael Correa said earlier that if any country had denied airspace to a US or European president, it "probably would've been grounds for war." Despite the rhetoric, no Latin American country has offered asylum yet to Snowden, who is wanted by Washington for disclosure of intelligence secrets. Two radical leftist governments—Venezuela and Cuba—are in a cautious rapprochement with the United States that would be jeopardized if they gave him sanctuary. Russia is growing impatient over Snowden's stay in a Moscow airport and officials have urged him to leave.

Bolivia said Morales was returning from Moscow on Tuesday when France and Portugal abruptly banned his plane from entering their airspace, and it was forced to land in Vienna. Austrian officials said they inspected his plane there, but Bolivia's defence minister denied this.

US State Department spokesman Jen Psaki, said: "We've broadly asked for Mr Snowden to be returned from any country where he may be, where he may land, where he may transit."

To allay the anger of allies over reported US spying that came to light in the Snowden scandal, US President Barack Obama has agreed to talks with the European Union, and also agreed to bilateral talks with Germany after speaking on Wednesday night with Chancellor Angela Merkel. "I made clear spying on institutions within the European Union is not how we would expect those we consider friends to treat us," Merkel said.—Reuters

Zero-tolerance to corruption

Corruption is an enormous obstacle to a nation's realization of politically, economically and administratively sweeping reforms to build a clean government in good governance. No matter what it comes in various forms, corruption is a breach of the Rule of Law. Any countries with young democracy and poorly-corrupted administrative mechanism have to face its crippling blows of a similar magnitude to genuine democracy and sustainable development.

Corruption and poverty can create a vicious circle. Developing countries with illicit financial flows, prolonged armed conflicts or fears of natural disasters are afflicted with the cancer of corruption. Stealing public money for private gain and siphoning foreign aid into private bank accounts have been called modern-day corruption.

When corruption takes root in the countries, only marginalized people suffer first and worst. Then infrastructure projects and financial resources needed to bolster economic growth and address social needs are paralyzed. Moreover, corruption can ruin reputation of a certain country, a race and a person, hamper foreign investment and international recognition of being a democracy and create public dissatisfaction with the incumbent government.

It is an excerpt from a speech by former Indian President Abdul Kalam that "if a country is to be corruption free and become a nation of beautiful minds, I strongly feel there are three keys societal members who can make a difference. They are the father, the mother and teachers". So, schools and homes are to serve as a good basis for good governance. A great responsibility rests with parents and teachers to instill good morals into their children to be deeply ashamed of committing corruption and firmly equipped with a culture that values ethical behaviors.

Being a global concern, cooperation with not international community but civil societies and media forces at home is needed in a fight against corruption. Officials with great determination to go after the big fish, prosecutors who embrace justice to expose frauds, whistleblowers who dare to speak out about embezzlements and the media with high credibility to probe into bribery and corruption are necessary as a drive to build a least corrupt country, showing a zero-tolerance to corruption. The most important force is public strength. Only with participation of all, will a certain nation with young democracy be built as a corruption-free country.

The sacred Museum of the Sixth Great Buddhist Council

With a view to perpetuating and propagating the Theravada Buddhism, a Sacred Museum commemorating the Sixth Great Buddhist Council of 1954 has been already built with support of multifarious Buddhist people and the Government of the State Peace and Development Council of the Union of Myanmar in the year 2000. The Sacred Museum is grandly situated on Sirimangala Kaba Aye Hillock close to the east of the Mahapasana Cave (Great Cave) in which the Sixth Great Buddhist Council was successfully held in the year 2498 of the Buddhist Era, 1954 AD. The Sixth Great Buddhist Council was attended by an assembly of (2500) venerable elders (Bhikkhus) and heads of states from five Theravada Buddhist nations, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Sri Lanka and Myanmar. At the Sixth Great Buddhist Council, an assembly of (2500) venerable elders (Bhikkhus) led by the most Venerable Revata recited and verified the scriptures which were later put into print.

We all Buddhists throughout the world know that altogether Six Great Buddhist Councils were held in order to recite and give authenticity of the whole body of the teachings of the Buddha and to preserve and propagate those sacred teachings after the noble demise of the Buddha in 544 BC.

Just three months and four days (in 544 BC) after the noble demise of the Buddha, the First Great Buddhist Council were held in the city of Rajagaha (India). The whole body of the teachings of the Buddha was recited and given authenticity by an assembly of five hundred Arahats presided over by the Venerable Mahakassapa at the First Great Buddhist Council which was held with the support of King Ajatasattu.

In the year (100) of the Buddhist Era, 443 BC, the second Great Buddhist Council was held in the city of Vesali (India). The ten indulgences that a sect of heretical monks were trying to add to the original teachings of the Buddha were dismissed by an assembly of seven hundreds Arahats led by the Venerable Yasa at the Second Great Buddhist Council which held with support of King Kalasoka.

In the year (235) of the Buddhist Era, 308 BC, the Third Great Buddhist Council was held in the city of Pataliputta (India). The doctrines of unlawful extraneous elements that some had tried to insinuate into it were cleared by an assembly of one thousand Arahats needed by the Venerable Mahamoggaliputtatissa at the Third Great Buddhist Council which was held with the support of Emperor Asoka.

In the year (450) of the Buddhist Era, the Fourth Great Buddhist Council was held in Ma-la-ya, Sri Lanka (Ceylon). An assembly of five hundred venerable elders (Bhikkhus) led by the Venerable Mahadhammarakkhita wrote the entire words of the Buddha's teachings on palm leaves at the Fourth Great Buddhist Council. The Fourth Great Buddhist Council was held with the support of King Vattagamini of Ceylon.

In the year (2415) of the Buddhist Era, 1871 AD, the Fifth Great Buddhist Council was held in Mandalay, Myanmar. An assembly of two thousand and four hundred venerable elders (Bhikkhus) led the Venerable Jagarabhivamsa recited and approved the scriptures at the Fifth Great

Ba Sein (Religious Affairs)

Buddhist Council, and then the scriptures were inscribed on 729 stone slabs. The Fifth Great Buddhist Council was held with the support of His Majesty, King Mindon of Myanmar.

The Sixth Great Buddhist Council

In the year (2498) of the Buddhist Era, 1954 AD, the Sixth Great Buddhist Council was held in the Mahapasana Cave (Great Cave) on the Sirimangala Kaba Aye Hillock, Yangon, Myanmar. The Sixth Great Buddhist Council had the collaboration and participation of the learned monks (Mathatheras) from Sri Lanka, Cambodia, Laos, Nepal, India and Pakistan. Five hundred Buddhist monks in Myanmar who were well-versed in the study and practice of the teachings of the Buddha took the responsibility of re-examining the Texts. The Sixth Great Buddhist Council was held by an assembly of twenty-five thousand venerable elders from five Theravada Buddhist nations (Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Sri Lanka and Myanmar) led by Adhidhajamaharathaguru, Nyaungyan Sayadaw, the Most Venerable Buaddanta Revata to recite and verify the scriptures (Pali texts, Athakatha and Tika) which were later put into print.

Aggamahapandita Mahasi Sayadaw, the Most Venerable Buddhanta Sobhana acted as a questioner and Tipitakadharadhamma-bhandagarika, Mingun Sayadaw, the Most Venerable Buddhanta Viccitasarabhivamsa as an examiner on recitation and verification of the scriptures at the Sixth Great Buddhist Council from the very beginning to the end. The Sixth Great Buddhist Council lasted two years from 2498 to 2500 Buddhist Era, (1954 to 1956 AD).

The Sixth Great Buddhist Council was held with the support of generous Buddhist peoples and the Five Theravada Buddhist nations, Myanmar, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Cambodia and Laos and other 25 nations.

The Theravada Buddhism consists of Tri-pitaka canons and five Nikaya treatises which have been verified and approved by the Six Great Buddhist Councils which were successfully held by the successive Mahatheras after the noble demise of the Buddha over 2557 years ago.

The Sacred Museum of the Sixth Great Buddhist Council

Members of Sangha, Buddhist people and successive Governments of the Union of Myanmar realized that a Sacred Museum commemorating the Sixth Great Buddhist Council should be established in which the significant and remarkable records, artifacts, religious objects, photographs, pictures and others related to the Sixth Great Buddhist Council are to be preserved and displayed at this Sacred Museum. According to the strong wish of members of Sangha, Buddhist people and successive Governments of the Union of Myanmar, the Sacred Museum commemorating the Sixth Great Buddhist Council of 1954, has been successfully already built. This Sacred Museum will stand forever as a significant and sacred symbol of Theravada Buddhism in the world so long as the Buddha Sasana exists.

Portugal PM says found formula for government stability

LISBON, 6 July—Portugal's Prime Minister has found a way to maintain government stability with the junior partner in the ruling coalition, but the full details still need to be agreed to end a political crisis that has threatened Lisbon's adjustment under a bailout.

Prime Minister Pedro Passos Coelho said a formula had been found after meeting with the leader of the rightist CDS-PP party three times in the past 24 hours to heal the most damaging political rift since the country received a bailout in 2011. "A formula was found to maintain government stability," Passos Coelho told journalists after a crisis meeting with the president to discuss the political situation.

The resignations this week of Finance Minister Vitor Gaspar and Foreign Minister Paulo Portas, who also heads the CDS-PP, have threatened to deprive the government of a majority in parliament as the country goes through its deepest slump since the 1970s.

Passos Coelho said the solution would involve a "way to guarantee the political support of the CDS-PP of the government," adding that the resignation of Portugal's Prime Minister Pedro Passos Coelho arrives for a news conference in Berlin on 3 July, 2013.

REUTERS

Portas had been a personal decision. Still, the prime minister gave no details of the agreement and the final outcome still depends on further negotiations with Portas in coming days. It is likely to include more ministerial positions for the CDS-PP, analysts said.

Any final agreement will also have to be approved by President Anibal Cavaco Silva, who will meet with all political parties starting on Monday.

Portuguese assets were highly volatile on the day but by the afternoon bond yields fell and stocks recovered most of their sharp losses from a day earlier as agreement appeared closer.

Syria's Assad says only foreign invasion can threaten him

BEIRUT, 6 July—Syrian President Bashar al-Assad said he and his government would survive the civil war having endured everything his opponents could do to topple him and only the distant prospect of direct foreign military intervention could change that.

After steady rebel gains in the first two years of civil war, Syria became stuck in a bloody stalemate lasting months until a June government offensive that led to the capture of a strategic border town. Momentum now looks to be behind Assad.

"This was their goal in hitting our infrastructure, hitting our economy, and creating complete chaos in society so that we would become a failed state," Assad said in an interview with Syria's official Thawra newspaper published on Thursday. "So far we have not reached that stage."

The only factor that could undermine the resilience of the government, he said, was direct foreign intervention. But he said that was a unlikely due to foreign powers' conflict—ing views of an opposition movement increasingly overtaken by radical Islamist militants.

"They have used every material, emotional and psychological means available to them. The only option they have is direct foreign intervention," he said.

"But there is hesitation and rejection (of intervention) from most countries so if we can overcome this stage with resoluteness and awareness, we have nothing more to fear."

Syria's two-year uprising against Assad, whose family has ruled Syria for more than four decades, began as peaceful protests but became militarised after an army crackdown.

The rebels remain strong in the north of Syria, but Assad has been slowly reinforcing his forces there in the hope of retaking territory. Fierce fighting is raging around several cities in central Syria and near the capital. Assad's counter-offensive led the United States to announce last month military support for the opposition, a move it said would restore the balance of power ahead of any peace talks.—Reuters

Cuba to launch 8th national audit in anti-corruption efforts

HAVANA, 6 July—Cuba will launch its Eighth Internal Control National Audit on 21 October as part of the government's fight against corruption, a senior official of the Comptroller General Office announced on Thursday.

The one-month audit campaign will look into programs including building materials sales in the provinces of Santiago de Cuba and Guantanamo, which were hit hard by Hurricane Sandy last October.

Other programmes to be audited involve export subsidies, the granting of land use permits, direct trade between farmers and tourism entities, the implementation of the 17 recently-adopted measures on agricultural coopera-tives and state payments to private entities. The Comptroller General Office was created by the government of Cuban leader Raul Castro in 2009 to fight corruption and strengthen law enforcement in the country. Qinghai-Tibet Railway expands its reach XINING, 6 July —Seven years after the Qinghai-Tibet Railway went into operation, the "roof of the world" is about to see more railways connecting it to other parts of China.

Several new railway lines are either under construction or being planned to form a rail network in the sparsely populated Qinghai-Tibet Plateau in western China, according to the Qinghai-Tibet Railway Company, the operator of the world's highest railway.

During China's 12th Five Year Plan (2011-2015) period, the Qinghai-Tibet Railway will branch out in all directions, ending the history of no railways in the southern part of Tibet Autonomous Region and strengthening its ties with neighbouring provinces.

The Qinghai-Tibet Railway, which spans 1,956 km from Xining, Qinghai Province, to Lhasa, regional capital of Tibet, carried 10.76 million people and 56.06 million tonnes of cargo in 2012. With these new extension lines in place, the company estimates that its passenger and cargo loads will increase to 14 million and 90 tonnes, respectively, in 2015.

The railway has led to a boom in tourism in Tibet. In 2012, more than 10 million tourists visited the autonomous region, up 21.7 percent year on year, and tourism revenue surged 30.3 percent to 12.64 billion yuan (2.06 billion U.S. dollars).

According to Zhu Jianping, the company's vice general manager, the railway network will bring major cities in western China closer.

One of the first extensions to be completed will be a 253-km line linking Lhasa to Xigaze, a historical city in southwestern Tibet. Construction of the line began in September 2010, and is expected to finish at the end of this year, Losang Jamcan, chairman of the Tibet regional government, said during China's annual parliamentary session in March. The company is also considering a line between Lhasa to Nyingchi, a prefecture in the southeastern part of the autonomous region famous for its virgin forests.

Meanwhile, two new lines will extend from Golmud, a city in Qinghai that serves as an important junction on the Qinghai-Tibet Railway. One will run toward Dunhuang in northwest China's Gansu Province and the other to Korla, Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region. With 12.9 billion yuan in investment, construction on the Golmud-Dunhuang line was kicked off last October and is expected to be completed in five years, company spokesperson Wang Tao told Xinhua.—Xinhua JAKARTA, 6 July—Indonesian President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono and Australian Prime Minister Kevin Rudd met in Bogor town on Friday, discussing asylum seeker, trade issues and regional issues.

President Yudhoyono said that Indonesia and Australia in the near future would discuss the boat people issue involving all the countries where the people come from and the countries where the asylum seekers transit.

“We agreed that all parties have responsibility on the boat people, it is not only the responsibility of Indonesia or Australia, but also the other countries such as the origin countries,” Yudhoyono said after meeting the Australian Prime Minister at the Bogor Presidential Palace in West Java Province.

In recent years, asylum seekers from Afghanistan, Iran, Myanmar and other Middle East countries have transited to Indonesia, Malaysia and Thailand to continue to a long sea journey to Christmas island of Australia.

Indonesia and Australia have cooperated in handling the asylum seekers and have set up a deal so called “the Lombok Treaty.” On trade, President Yudhoyono said both leaders agreed to boost cattle trade.

Indonesia is Australia major cattle export destination. Indonesia’s suspension of cattle import from Australia in recent years has aroused complaints from cattle racers in Australia. Both leaders also discussed the latest developments in the region and the world as a whole, said Yudhoyono.

“Prime Minister Rudd and I have a commitment to look for new opportunities to step up this cooperation,” he said, quoted by Kontan online.

President Yudhoyono expressed congratulations to Rudd for his reelection days ago.

Abe still facing challenges regardless of election outcome

TOKYO, 6 July—Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe is likely to face challenges in pushing ahead with his economic policies dubbed “Abenomics,” even if his ruling Liberal Democratic Party wins control of the House of Councillors in the 21 July election.

Abe has been promoting his “three arrows” of drastic monetary easing, massive fiscal spending and a growth strategy to tackle Japan’s prolonged deflation, but a final decision on whether to implement a sales tax hike as well as a possible spike in long-term interest rates could prove to be significant obstacles, some analysts said.

As public support for Abe’s Cabinet has been relatively high since it was formed on 26 December, the election “is highly likely to put an end to the divided Diet,” where opposition parties control the upper chamber, said Tatsuhiko

Yoshizaki, executive vice president of the Sojitz Research Institute.

“No national election will be held for the next three years,” he said, “so unless there is a very big political blunder, Mr. Abe can stay in office” throughout that period.

Yoshizaki said that even though Abe’s growth strategy has caused disappointment due to its lack of detail on structural reform and deregulation, keys to boosting private-sector investment, his government “can accelerate economic reforms over the next three years.”

Abe’s administration has promised to draw up a medium-term fiscal reform plan in August, aiming to achieve its international pledge to halve the ratio of the primary balance deficit to the country’s gross domestic product by fiscal 2015 from the level in fiscal 2010 and turn the balance into a surplus by fiscal 2020.—Kyodo News

Japanese expats start voting in upper house election

NEW YORK, 6 July — Japanese expatriates on Friday began visiting embassies and consulates around the world to cast their ballots for the upcoming House of Councillors election set for 21 July in Japan.

Jun Makihara, 55, who cast his vote at the Consulate General in New York, said he supports Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and said, “If the Liberal Democratic Party scores a major victory and makes the Abe government a long-term administration, it will probably be a good thing.” In London, a 35-year-old male company employee, who has lived in the British capital for two years, said at the Japanese Embassy that he is not yet sure how much the prime minister’s economic policies, widely referred to as Abenomics, are having an impact.

At the Japanese Embassy in Seoul, a 33-year-old Japanese man who works for a South Korean company said, “I will feel relieved if Japan’s relations with neighboring countries will normalize and stabilize through this election.”

Singapore must get politics right first to remain competitive

SINGAPORE, 6 July—It is important for Singapore to get the politics right in order to remain economically competitive, Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong said on Friday.

“If the politics is wrong, you can’t get the economics right,” he said at a dialogue with bankers.

Singapore has been known for its achievements over the past decades to jump from being a third-world to a first-world economy and its rule of law, clean government and good environment. The government has given high salaries to attract talent to join politics to govern the city state, and the country has opened its doors to qualified immigrants.

Lee said the right politics will allow the government to implement policies to share the wealth broadly, and continue to attract the talent to join politics.

Several shots fired in clash during Cambodia’s election campaign

PHNOM PENH, 6 July — Several shots have been fired inside a luxury villa during an altercation between several hundred supporters of the opposition Cambodia National Rescue Party (CNRP) and residents in the villa, military police spokesman said on Saturday.

The dispute occurred at 8 pm on Friday when the CNRP election campaigners passed the villa and triggered verbal attacks and violent action on the residents having tendency to the ruling Cambodian People’s Party.

“We have checked security cameras installed at the villa already and found that opposition supporters triggered the violence and people in the villa, who are military police officer, fired into the air in order to defend themselves,” spokesman for the National Military Police Kheng Tito told Xinhua.

There were no reports of injuries.

He said after the incident, four people in the villa, including two military police officers, were detained for enquiries about the fire. But they were released later on Friday night after the prosecutor at the Phnom Penh Municipal Court found them not guilty for the shooting. “One of the military officers holds the rank of colonel, so he has rights to use weapons and his shooting was to defend himself only when rivals besieged the villa,” Kheng Tito said.

However, the CNRP

issued a statement on Saturday, claiming that the violence was triggered by people in the villa. “They threw stones at the CNRP election campaigners and fired between five and 10 shots,” said the statement. “The CNRP condemned the violence on the party’s peaceful election campaigning and appealed to the authority to investigate the case in order to arrest wrong-doers for legal punishment.”

Cambodia set to hold a general election for the 123-seat parliament on July 28 with eight political parties joining the contest.

The month-long election campaign kicked off Thursday last week and will complete on 26 July.

Portugal's coalition partners strike deal to heal rift

LISBON, 6 July — Portugal's Prime Minister Pedro Passos Coelho has reached a deal with his junior coalition partner, the CDS-PP party, to end a rift that had threatened the country's bailout programme, a government spokesman said on Friday. "The prime minister presented to President Anibal Cavaco Silva a political deal reached with the leader of CDS-PP," the spokesman said. Any deal will have to be approved by Cavaco Silva, who is due to meet political parties on Monday and Tuesday.

The spokesman did not provide details of the agreement but said the two parties would hold a meeting on Saturday, to be followed by a statement.

The political crisis began this week after a resignation request by Foreign Minister Paulo Portas, who heads the rightist CDS-PP. The political uncertainty has threatened to upset progress on Lisbon's 78-billion-euro bailout programme.

Portas said he disagreed with the appointment of Maria Luis de Albuquerque as finance minister to succeed Vitor Gaspar, who resigned from his post on Tuesday. The CDS-PP leader said the new minister was too close to the policies of her predecessor which have led to Portugal's big-

LOS ANGELES, 6 July—American rapper Wale grabbed the top spot on Wednesday on the US Billboard 200 album chart for the first time with his record “The Gifted,” while fellow rapper Kanye West’s “Yeezus,” last week’s No 1, fell to third place.

“The Gifted” sold 158,000 copies in its first week, according to figures compiled by Nielsen SoundScan.

‘Lone Ranger’ ambushed at box office, Disney may face loss

Cast member Johnny Depp poses at the world premiere of “The Lone Ranger” at Disney California Adventure Park in Anaheim, California on 22 June, 2013.

LOS ANGELES, 6 July—“The Lone Ranger,” Walt Disney Co’s (DIS.N) big-budget western starring Johnny Depp, performed below expectations on Wednesday night, raising the possibility that the movie could saddle the media giant with a loss on the film.

The film, which cost an estimated $225 million to produce, generated $9.7 million during Wednesday showings, falling well behind “Despicable Me 2” from Comcast’s (CMCSA.O) Universal Pictures, which sold $34.3 million at the domestic box office, according to studio estimates.

Both films opened with limited showings on Tuesday. For the two-day period, “Despicable Me 2” generated $39 million and “The Lone Ranger” saw $11.7 million.

Disney estimates “The Lone Ranger” will sell $45 million for the Wednesday through Sunday July Fourth holiday weekend, below industry experts’ initial forecasts of $60 million to $70 million over the five days.

“If it does end up grossing less than $50 million over the five-day stretch, it will most certainly go down as a misfire,” said Jeff Bock, senior box office analyst for Exhibitor Relations, which tracks movie box office prospects.

The film’s poor opening is a black eye for producer Jerry Bruckheimer, director Gore Verbinski and star Depp, the trio behind Disney’s ultra-successful “Pirates of the Caribbean” series.

Disney made their prior success a key part of marketing the current film, and Depp’s international appeal still could help the film’s overseas box office.

“The Lone Ranger” is an action remake of a 1930s radio show and television series in the 1950s. Armie Hammer plays John Reid, the lawman who dons a mask to fight injustice in the Old West. This time, though, it is the Lone Ranger’s Native American sidekick Tonto, played by Depp, who takes center stage.

‘Sugar Man’ Rodriguez opens Montreux Jazz Festival

American folk singer Sixto Rodriguez

MONTREUX, (Switzerland), 6 July—American singer-songwriter Sixto “Sugar Man” Rodriguez, virtually unknown a few years ago, opened the Montreux Jazz Festival on Thursday, which American producer and its former co-director Quincy Jones calls the “Rolls Royce of music festivals.”

Fresh from the Glastonbury festival in Britain last weekend, Rodriguez gave a Fourth of July concert in the Swiss resort, mixing songs from his two albums that never made the charts with borrowed tunes including the classic rock’n’roll hit “Fever.”

The Detroit-based singer, whose lyrics evoke the folksy sound of Bob Dylan, is the shy subject of “Searching for Sugar Man,” a film by Swedish director Malik Bendjelloul that tells the incredible story of his fame late in life. It won the Oscar for best documentary this year.

“I am a solid 70. I just received a doctorate from Wayne State University. I hear that I am going to receive the Legion of Honour from France,” Rodriguez told the sell-out crowd at the prestigious 47th edition, the first since the death of founder Claude Nobs in January.

Moyes says Rooney to stay at United

MANCHESTER, 6 July—New Manchester United manager David Moyes was adamant on Friday that striker Wayne Rooney was not for sale but stopped short of saying the player had changed his mind about wanting to leave.

The issue dominated the Scot's first news conference since he took over from the retired Alex Ferguson. His predecessor said in May that the England international had asked for a transfer.

"I've had a chance to speak to Wayne ... the fact of the matter is Wayne is not for sale," Moyes said at Old Trafford, home of the Premier League champions.

"He is a Manchester United player and will remain a Manchester United player. I've known Wayne since he was 16 ... he's training very well, he's come back in good shape and I really look forward to working with him."

Moyes was repeatedly asked about Rooney, including direct questions such as: "Has he told you he would like to stay at Manchester United?" but each time failed to give a 'yes' or 'no' answer.

"What we are doing at the moment is we are looking to see how we can get Wayne Rooney getting those goals which are going to challenge the likes of Bobby Charlton and Denis Law's (total) number," said the former Everton manager. "As far as I'm concerned, the way he's working I'm more than happy to work with him and make sure we get success."

Rooney has scored 197 goals in 402 United appearances, winning five Premier League titles, the Champions League in 2008 and two League Cups.

Charlton holds the club's all-time record of 249 with Law second on 237. Moyes's answers will have done little to extinguish the media speculation over the future of Rooney who suffered a dip in form following the arrival of Robin van Persie as United's leading striker last season. Often played out wide or in midfield, Rooney was left out of the United team for their biggest match of the season - the Champions League last-16 second-leg defeat by Real Madrid in March.

Rooney is no stranger to Moyes, with the striker having begun his career at Everton under the Scot.

From pets to Ryan Gosling, Lisicki and Bartoli uncovered

Sabine Lisicki of Germany

LONDON, 6 July—Sabine Lisicki laughs a lot, is allergic to grass, adores her Yorkshire terrier Happy and carries animal-shaped charms in her tennis bag.

Marion Bartoli hit rock bottom recently, enjoys painting, loves her two cats, and is rather partial to actors Pierce Brosnan and Ryan Gosling. The likes and dislikes of the two women who will battle it out in Wimbledon's women's final on Saturday have the media scrambling to find titbits on the players who started the tournament as outsiders.

Both Germany's fair-haired Lisicki and Bartoli, a dark-haired Frenchwoman, were coached by their fathers and both will rev up with music by French DJs ahead of the match with Lisicki listening to David Guetta's "Play Hard" and Bartoli opting for Bob Sinclar's "Summer Moonlight". But differences between the two have emerged as the public decide who to support in the absence of tournament favourites including Serena Williams, who left Wimbledon after her shock defeat to Lisicki and headed to Disneyland Paris for a break.

Lisicki, 23, nicknamed "Boom Boom" for her powerful serve, has won over the crowds at Wimbledon with her easy laugh, displays of emotion on the court and tears of joy at winning.

The 28-year-old Bartoli, meanwhile, known as "The Genius" after once saying she had an IQ of 175, has come across as more of a lone wolf who is intensely focused on success after admitting she hit rock bottom recently. "It is going to be interesting to see how these two players cope with this opportunity. There will be a lot of emotion in this," Tracy Austin, a former world number one, told Reuters.—Reuters

Murray holds nerve to tame big-serving Janowicz

Andy Murray celebrates after defeating Jerzy Janowicz of Poland in their men's semi-final tennis match at the Wimbledon Tennis Championships, in London on 5 July, 2013.—REUTERS

LONDON, 6 July—Andy Murray found himself in the crosshairs of a bullet-serving, net-smashing giant on Friday, but held his nerve to reach a second Wimbledon final and set up another meeting with great rival Novak Djokovic.

The second seed was a set down to the 6-foot-8

Jerzy Janowicz, but tamed the 140 mph serves that came hurtling out of the sky to move into Sunday's showpiece with a 6-7(2), 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 win that began in the afternoon sun and finished under the Centre Court lights.

Janowicz turned Wimbledon's hallowed turf into the scene of a naval battle as he launched a barrage of heavy duty cannon fire in his first grand slam semi-final.

Murray, however, showed why he is considered among the very best returners in the game and was not going to be bullied by the lofty Pole.

He subdued his fiery opponent with a forehand winner after two hours and 52 minutes of heated combat in which Janowicz had transformed himself into a comedy villain after taking his anger out on the net in the third set.

Murray was calm and collected.

There was none of the emotion that greeted his victory over Jo-Wilfried Tsonga at the same point 12 months ago, just a hefty fist pump and swift salute to the crowd.

Nearly man Zanotti leads French Open as favourites struggle

PARIS, 6 July—Paraguay's Fabrizio Zanotti, one of the nearly men of the European Tour, grabbed a one-stroke lead in the second round of the French Open near Paris on Friday while overnight leader Anders Hansen had a day to forget.

Zanotti, three times a runner-up on tour, the last time at the 2012 Irish Open, shot his second 68 to finish six-under-par and ahead of a group that included 42-year-old Dane Thomas Bjorn.

Overnight leader Hansen, another 42-year-old Dane, dropped four shots in his first 11 holes, following up his 66 with a 78 and was two over along with former world number one Martin Kaymer of Germany, who carded a 76. Zanotti, 30, ranked 391st in the world, had four birdies and a single bogey in his round at the testing Le Golf National course, venue for the 2018 Ryder Cup.

Defending champion Marcel Siem of Germany missed the cut and others who struggled were Luke Donald and Ian Poulter, the Britons both on two over. American Matt Kuchar was three over after a 75.

After fog delayed the start for an hour, one man in early contention was Northern Ireland's Graeme McDowell. The former US Open champion fired a second 69 to be four under. Djokovic wins another epic to set up Murray finale

Novak Djokovic of Serbia celebrates after defeating Juan Martin del Potro of Argentina in their men's semi-final tennis match at the Wimbledon Tennis Championships, in London on 5 July, 2013.—REUTERS

LONDON, 6 July—The Wimbledon that just keeps on giving reached new levels of generosity on Friday as Novak Djokovic added another episode to the box-set of tennis epics and Andy Murray survived a fright to co-star in Sunday's series finale.

World number one Djokovic needed all his dexterity and self-belief to fend off the brutal groundstrokes of eighth seed Juan Martin del Potro, winning the longest ever Wimbledon semi-final 7-5, 4-6, 7-6(2), 6-7(6), 6-3 in front of a spellbound Centre Court crowd.

Djokovic, whose career is littered with blockbusters against the likes of Murray, Rafa Nadal and Roger Federer, soaked up everything the burly Argentine threw at him for four hours and 43 minutes before coolly dispatching a backhand winner to reach his second Wimbledon final.

Home favourite Murray also reached his second final at the All England Club but put his legions of fans through the wringer again as fiery Pole Jerzy Janowicz threatened to incinerate his dream of becoming Britain's first male champion here since 1936. From the moment 6ft 8ins Janowicz, Poland's first ever grand slam semi-finalist, launched his first 140 mph grass-charring serve Murray knew he was in for a hairy evening.

Ultimately the experience of 12 previous grand slam semi-finals helped him stay calm under fire to win 6-7(2), 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 in a match that concluded under the Centre Court roof.

With Del Potro playing his best tennis since winning the US Open in 2009 and precocious 22-year-old Janowicz jumping the queue as the next big thing in men's tennis, the coming months look full of intrigue.

For now, though, it is all about Djokovic and Murray who, as predicted by many before a tournament laden with shocks and bizarre twists began, will face off for the 19th time on Sunday in their fourth grand slam final showdown. The 26-year-old Djokovic had not been seriously tested en route to his 13th consecutive grand slam semi-final but against Del Potro he was stretched to breaking point.

Even before the incredible sinew-stretching 25-stroke rally that Del Potro won to save the first of two match points in the fourth set tiebreak the match had already transcended anything seen at the tournament.

Aceh villagers still afraid to return to houses after strong quake

BLANG MANCUNG, (Indonesia), 6 July—Villagers that sought shelter in tents erected outside their houses and in wide open spaces in areas devastated by a strong earthquake in the center of Indonesia's province of Aceh are still worried about possible aftershocks as of Friday night.

The villagers have no option except to stay in the open after their houses collapsed or tumbled down from the impact of a 6.2 magnitude earthquake that hit their area on Tuesday.

Some villagers recounted to Xinhua their horrible experience when the earthquake struck in the afternoon.

Irwansyah, chief of Lorong Ayu neighborhood in Pondok Bale village located in Bener Meriah regency, said that people were on their way home after they buried a fellow villager when the earthquake struck.

"We frantically ran to get our children out of our houses and bring them outside. It was a school holiday, thank to Allah, that we have our children with us," the 38-year-old Irwansyah said.

He said that in their neighborhood, one person died and 10 others were injured.

The village chief said that it was the first powerful earthquake that hit their place since the strongest one in December 2004 that triggered a deadly tsunami. "But this time, the tremor was unusual because it seemed that the ground shook vertically, not horizontally like in the previous earthquakes in our area," Irwansyah said.

He said that the earthquake made the roof tiles of houses bounced back and forth before falling. "We had a strange feeling," Irwansyah added.

Irwansyah said that after the earthquake struck, some of the houses collapsed right away while the others fell during the aftershocks.

The villagers put up makeshift tents in front of their houses where they placed their belongings. They decided to stay in the open during the next few days.

In villages of Blang Mancung and Serempah in the regency of Aceh Tengah located about two kilometers from Pondok Bale, the condition was worse since most of the villagers' houses were flattened. Many people were injured when their houses collapsed at the height of the earthquake.

As of Friday afternoon, police and rescue teams have discovered 40 bodies and continued the search for seven villagers in Serempah village located in the valley area in the regency.

Those missing were believed to be living in houses that collapsed because of the landslide that followed the earthquake.

The office of the Aceh governor has declared the earthquake as provincial level disaster since it only affected two of its regencies, Bener Meriah and Central Aceh. The emergency response period was extended by the authorities from the original 9 July to 17 July. The emergency response period started on 3 July.

An evaluation is now being conducted to find out whether or not to extend the emergency period which would depend on the length of the rescue efforts and the condition of the refugees.

The extension is aimed at maximizing the search and rescue efforts, treating the injured and providing for the basic needs of the refugees, particularly food and medicines.

Tourists watch water gushing out from the Xiaolangdi Reservoir on the Yellow River during a sand-washing operation in Luoyang, central China's Henan Province, on 5 July, 2013. The on-going operation, conducted on Friday, works by discharging water at a volume of 2,600 cubic meters per second from the reservoir to clear up the sediment in the Yellow River, the country's second-longest waterway. Speeding currents would carry tons of sand into the sea. The Yellow River has been plagued by an increasing amount of mud and sand. Each year, the river bed rises as silt deposits build up, slowing the water flow in the lower reaches.

Homeless old man brought to Home for the Aged

An aged and homeless muslim man who slept at night under a shrine in Mingala Taungnyunt Township has been sent to “Hsi-sar-yeik” Home for the Aged on 2 July.

The 88-year-old man had taken shelter at night under the shrine in Kandawgalay (South)

Ward since one month ago and it seems that he is deaf as he can't reply to answer and his left eye is swollen and closed.

Residents of the ward donated food and water to him when he arrived at the shrine.

As he was not able to stand or move about one week ago and he could not clean and wash himself, residents contacted the Home for the Aged in Ward-12 in Dagon Myothit (East) Township to bring the helpless to the home.

“He will die from cold in this rainy season if he stays under the shrine,” said U Than Lynn Kywe who
