US indicts hackers in biggest cyber fraud case in history

New Jersey Attorney Paul J Fishman speaks to the media during a news conference in Newark, on 25 July, 2013.—REUTERS

NEWARK, NJ/BOSTON, 26 July — Federal prosecutors said on Thursday they have charged five men responsible for a hacking and credit card fraud spree that cost companies more $300 million and two of the suspects are in custody, in the biggest cyber crime case filed in US history. They also disclosed a new security breach against Nasdaq, though they provided few details about the attack. Other companies targeted by the hackers include a Visa Inc licensee, J C Penney Co, JetBlue Airways Corp and French retailer Carrefour SA, according to an indictment unveiled in New Jersey.

Authorities have been pursuing the hackers for years. Many of the breaches were previously reported, though it appeared the one involving Nasdaq OMX Group Inc was being disclosed for the first time. Prosecutors said they conservatively estimate that the group of five men from Russia and Ukraine helped steal at least 160 million payment card numbers, resulting in losses in excess of $300 million. Authorities in New Jersey charged that each of the defendants had specialized tasks: Russians Vladimir Drinkman, 32, and Alexandr Kalinin, 26, hacked into networks, while Roman Kotov, 32, mined them for data. They allegedly hid their activities using anonymous web-hosting services provided by Mikhail Rytikov, 26, of Ukraine.

Russian Dmitriy Smilani, 29, is accused of selling the stolen data and distributing the profits. Prosecutors said he charged $10 for US cards, $15 for ones from Canada and $50 for European cards, which are more expensive because they have computer chips that make them more secure. The five hid their efforts by disabling anti-virus software of their victims and storing data on multiple hacking platforms, prosecutors said. They sold payment card numbers to resellers, who then sold them on online forums or to “cashers” who encode the numbers onto blank plastic cards.”—Reuters

Pakistani Taleban claim responsibility for attack in Sindh

ISLAMABAD, 26 July — A Pakistani Taleban group claimed responsibility on Thursday for the suicide attack on the Pakistani intelligence agency office in Sukkur, Sindh Province, on Wednesday evening.

The Jandola group of Tehreek-e-Taleban Pakistan claimed the attack was carried out to avenge the death of TTP Commander Wali-ur Rehman who was killed in a drone attack in the North Waziristan tribal area on 29 May. In a telephone call, spokesman Ahmad Marwat told local media in Peshawar that four suicide bombers were sent out because the Inter-Services Intelligence and the army are working for the United States.

At least two ISI personnel were killed and 35 people, including women and children, were wounded when a suicide bomber rammed an explosive-laden vehicle into the ISI office in Jinnah Colony. The vehicle was followed by three suicide bombers who ransacked the office compound, officials said. Wednesday's incident was the first militant attack on an ISI office in Sindh since militancy arose in Pakistan's tribal areas in the wake of the war on Afghanistan.

Abe, Biden agree to strengthen Japan-US alliance

SINGAPORE, 26 July— Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and US Vice President Joseph Biden agreed Friday to strengthen the security alliance between the two countries, with Abe stressing his efforts to improve Tokyo's security posture by reviewing its defence guidelines.

During a meeting in Singapore, where the two happened to be at the same time, Biden noted the importance of Japan's strategic role as the United States moves to “rebalance” its military assets toward the Asia-Pacific region, a Japanese official said.

The vice president also said he sees it as important for the ongoing Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade negotiations, in which both Japan and the United States are involved, to succeed given the growing importance of the region.

Biden also stressed the importance of moving forward expeditiously toward a high-standard agreement to deepen trade and investment ties bilaterally as well as across the region, the White House said.

Abe asked Biden to urge US senators to appropriate or unfreeze sufficient funds to enable the planned transfer of US Marine personnel to Guam from Okinawa prefecture, according to the Japanese official.

Abe noted that Japan is working to strengthen its security apparatus, including his government's legislative efforts to establish an institution similar to the US National Security Council.—Kyodo News

Syrian rebels kill dozens in offensives in north and south

BEIRUT, 26 July — Syrian rebels say they have overrun army positions in the north and south of the country this week, including an offensive in which a rights monitoring group said 51 soldiers were executed.

Insurgents have focused on taking isolated army outposts, mostly in rural areas while forces loyal to President Bashar al-Assad have made gains in recent months around the capital Damascus and the central city of Homs.

One video, posted on YouTube on Wednesday by a rebel group calling itself the Supporters of the Islamic Caliphate, shows around 30 bodies of young men piled up against a wall. Blood is splattered on the wall and one corpse is smoldering.

“Tens of Assad's (militia) killed,” says a man off camera. He said the footage was filmed in the area of the northern town of Khan al-Assal which was taken by rebels last week.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, an anti-Assad monitoring group, cited activists on Friday in Khan al-Assal who said that more than 150 soldiers were killed on Monday and Tuesday in and around the town.

Scientists implant false memories in mouse brain

WASHINGTON, 26 July—US researchers reported Thursday they have successfully implanted false memories in the brains of mice for the first time.

Researchers hope that the study, published in the journal Science, will uncover why humans recall memories of experiences that never occurred.

“We have created a false memory in mice for the first time,” Liu Xu, research scientist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and co-author of the study, wrote in an email. “Our study demonstrated that it’s possible to artificially modify the contents of memories.”

Memories are stored in assemblies of neurons, called engram-bearing cells. When we recall a sequence of events, our brains reconstruct the past from these bricks of data, but the mere act of accessing a memory modifies and distorts it, the researchers said.

In previous work, the researchers had detected a single memory in the brain, genetically tagged the brain cells housing that memory with a light-sensitive protein called channelrhodopsin, and flickered pulses of light to “turn on” the memory at any given moment.

For the new study, the researchers used the same optogenetic technique to create a false memory in genetically modified mice.

They manipulated engram-bearing cells in the hippocampus, a seahorse-shaped part of the brain known to play a role in forming and storing memories of experiences.

First, the researchers placed the mice in a novel chamber, A, but did not deliver any shocks. As the mice explored this chamber, their memory cells were labeled with channelrhodopsin.

The next day, they placed the mice in a second, very different chamber, B, and pulsed light into their brains to reactivate the memory of chamber A.

They then gave the animals mild foot shocks, creating a negative association between the light-reactivated memory of chamber A and the foot shocks, which mice find highly aversive.

When the animals were placed back in chamber A, the researchers found that the animals now displayed heightened fear responses. In addition, after placing the animals in yet another new environment while shining light on the hippocampal cells that had been artificially associated with fear, the researchers found they could reactivate the false fear memory at will.

“Humans are highly imaginative animals. Just like our mice, an aversive or appetitive event could be associated with a past experience one may happen to have in mind at that moment, hence a false memory is formed,” Susumu Tonegawa, professor of biology and neuroscience and senior author of the study, said in a release.

Ariane 5 launches two satellites on 3rd mission in 2013

PARIS, 26 July—Heavy-lift launcher Ariane 5 took off on Thursday in French Guiana, launching two satellites into orbit, including Europe’s largest mobile telecommunication satellite.

The liftoff took place at 4:54 pm local time (1954 GMT) at the French and European spaceport Guiana Space Centre near Kourou in French Guiana, said Arianespace, the French company undertaking production and operation of the rocket launcher.

The nearly 33-minute flight was the third launch of Ariane 5 in 2013 and marked the launcher’s 56th consecutive successful mission.

The rocket carried two satellites: Europe’s Alphasat telecommunication satellite as its upper payload, and India’s INSAT-3D meteorological satellite as the lower one.

According to Arianespace, Alphasat was deployed into the target orbit 28 minutes after launch, and INSAT-3D was successfully separated from the rocket five minutes later.

As Europe’s largest telecommunication satellite ever manufactured, Alphasat is loaded with a new-generation L-band geo-mobile communications relay system that will provide voice and data transmission services across Europe, Africa and the Middle East.

Google, FICCI study highlights Web’s big impact on SMEs in India

NEW DELHI, 26 July—Google and FICCI have released new research that showed the Web makes a big impact on small to medium enterprises (SMEs) in India. The report, compiled and presented by Nathan Associates, showed that SMEs, who use the Web, fare much better than those that do not. On an average, Web-enabled SMEs boasted revenues 51% higher, 49% more profit, and customer bases 7% broader than their offline-only counterparts.

The study revealed significant opportunities both for India’s booming SME sector, where fewer than 5% of all businesses even maintain a Web presence, and for India’s economy: small medium enterprises are critical to the economic growth in India, where 47 million SMEs employ about 100 million people and contribute more than 8% of India’s GDP. According to the report, only 51 percent of online SMBs use the Web to advertise a mere 27 percent use it for e-commerce. But with 95% of businesses yet to even establish a website, there’s a lot of room for growth.

Speaking about the key findings from the report, Mr. Sanjay Bhatia, Chairman, FICCI MSME Committee and Chairman and Managing Director, Hindustan Tin Works Limited said, “The Internet will play a vital role in narrowing the gap between Indian SMEs’ potential and their aspirations. India has all that it takes to compete with other developing and fast growing economies. With the success of e-commerce companies like Makemytrip and Flipkart in India, we believe that more Indian SMEs can benefit from the Internet and e-commerce. While the government has introduced policies that stress upon the development of SMEs, with this report we would like to highlight how Internet can play an instrumental role in driving growth of the SMEs in the country.”—PTI

Australian woman electrocuted while using iPhone

MUMBAI, 26 July—A 20-year-old Australian woman has been hospitalised in Sydney after she got a shock from her iPhone, according to media reports.

The woman from Sydney’s north was taken to Royal North Shore Hospital in a stable condition, the spokeswoman of New South Wales (NSW) Ambulance was quoted as saying in reports. It is not known if the phone was plugged in to a charger at the time, she said, adding that the paramedics had responded to a number of shocks from mobile phone chargers this year.

Inspector John Brotherton said it only took a small shock to interfere with your heart.

“Basically, if the jolt moves you, if it takes your breath away or if it’s at all a cause for concern, you need to get it checked out,” he said.

The incident comes a week after technology giant Apple announced it will launch an investigation into claims that an iPhone electrocuted a Chinese flight attendant who was making a call while charging her iPhone.

NSW Ambulance attended 232 Triple Zero calls for electric shocks between 1 January and 30 June this year, reports said.

Lower drug prices expected following GSK China investigations

Photo taken on 25 July, 2013 shows GlaxoSmithKline (GSK) China company at the Tianjin Economic and Technological Development Area in Tianjin, north China. As investigations into GSK China deepen, expectations are rising that the company's drug prices can be further lowered. —XINHUA

BEIJING, 26 July — As investigation into GlaxoSmithKline (GSK) China deepens, expectations are rising that drug prices can be further lowered.

The Ministry of Public Security (MPS) announced late Thursday that police investigations into GSK China's suspected bribery were being progressed with the GSK's cooperations.

Some senior executives of GSK China colluded with affiliated companies to offer large bribes to push up drug prices, expand sales and seek illegal profits, an MPS statement said on Sunday.

GSK said earlier it planned to restructure its operations so as to cut down operational costs.

According to current investigations, the costs of GSK China's commercial bribery account for nearly 30 percent of its drug prices, which means prices could drop by 30 percent.

GSK said on 22 July that savings made as a result of proposed changes to its operational model will be passed on in the form of price reductions, ensuring medicines are more affordable to Chinese patients.

At the beginning of this month, the National Development and Reform Commission (NDRC) carried out probes into dozens of drug makers, including GSK China, concerning drug companies' production costs.

The NDRC, the country's top economic planning body, has also ordered price supervisors to keep a close eye on drug prices, conducting investigations and handing down punishment if the price for a drug is unreasonably high. —Xinhua

Israel's SciVac eyes global expansion of 3G hepatitis B vaccine

REHOVOT, 26 July — Israeli drug company SciVac is seeking US approval for a widely used hepatitis B vaccine as part of a push for increased global sales of a product which it says could stem global growth in the disease.

Some 1.2 million people die each year from HBV, 100 times more than HIV, while as many as 400 million people are carriers.

SciVac — 45 percent owned by Opko Health, which is controlled by Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Chairman Phillip Frost — has applied to the US Food and Drug Administration for distribution of its vaccine to dialysis and HIV sufferers in the United States. It is about to embark on a clinical trial in the United States that will take a year and a half. Should it get FDA approval, SciVac will then seek similar confirmation in Europe.

SciVac's Sci-B-Vac, already given to the majority of Israeli children just after birth, comprises all three native proteins of the virus, compared with just one protein in an older vaccine from GlaxoSmithKline's called Engerix-B and cheaper copycats from China. Dosage of Sci-B-Vac is just a quarter that of Engerix. SciVac also says 10 percent of newborn babies and 25 percent of adults over 40 do not respond to the older products.

"It (Sci-B-Vac) looks the same as the virus itself. The immune system cannot ignore it, so it gives full protection," Michal Ben-Attar, chief executive of SciVac, told Reuters, adding that Sci-B-Vac is virtually 100 percent effective against HBV in newborns.

SciVac has distributed more than a half-million doses of its vaccine since 2009. It is also registered for use in India, Hong Kong, Vietnam, the Philippines and some African countries.

Ben-Attar said SciVac is on the verge of signing a distribution agreement for the product in India. Although HBV is most prevalent in developing countries, Ben-Attar said it is tough to sell in such markets because they prefer cheaper alternatives.

She said Sci-B-Vac is being sold at prices that are competitive with Engerix despite it being expensive

Gold scores first gain in three sessions

CHICAGO, 26 July — Gold futures on the COMEX division of the New York Mercantile Exchange ended higher on Thursday, after statistics showed that more Americans filed for unemployment benefits last week, boosting investors' hope that the US Federal Reserve may maintain its stimulus measures to spur economic growth.

The most active gold contract for August delivery rose 9.3 dollars, or 0.70 percent, to settle at 1,328.8 dollars per ounce. Gold prices for the August contract had tallied a two-session loss of 1.2 percent, according to MarketWatch.

Market analysts said that gold trading in the day was mainly about US data and the Fed, with the latest jobless numbers supporting gold prices. Statistics from the Labour Department showed that US jobless claims rose by 7,000 to 343,000 in the week ended on 20 July, compared with market estimates of about 340,000.

According to market reports, gold rallied 7.9 percent this month through Wednesday, heading for the biggest monthly gain since January 2012, after Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke said it was still too early to decide whether to begin scaling back the central bank's bond purchases in September.

The ICE dollar index slipped to 82.118 from 82.285 late on Wednesday. A weaker US dollar is good for gold.

Silver for September delivery also rose 13.4 cents, or 0.67 percent, to close at 20.154 dollars per ounce.

Samsung to invest in chips, panels as smartphone outlook dims

SEOUL, 26 July — Samsung Electronics Co Ltd (005930.KS) announced a $1 billion increase in investment on Friday, hoping a strong recovery in semiconductors will make up for weakening smartphone growth as it faces mounting pressure to produce eye-catching new gadgets.

The high-end smartphone market, which Samsung dominates along with Apple Inc (AAPL.O), is slowing and the South Korean giant is struggling to convince investors it can crack the rapidly growing low-end segment, where its rivals include China's Huawei Technologies Co Ltd HWT.UL and ZTE Corp (000063.SZ).

Samsung on Friday reported a 47.5 percent rise in April-June operating profit of a record 9.53 trillion won ($8.54 billion), in line with its estimate.

But profits at its mobile division, which generates two thirds of its total earnings, slipped 3.5 percent from the previous quarter even with the launch of its flagship Galaxy S4 in late April, sparking concerns its mobile growth momentum may have stalled as competition intensifies.

Executives offered little to give investors hope that a new market-shifting breakthrough in high-end smartphone technology is around the corner, fueling uncertainty over a segment which appears to have peaked in the first quarter after driving a series of record profits for Samsung in recent years.

Mobile division profit was still up 52 percent from a year ago but even that fell short of expectations, as slower sales of old models like the S3 and the marketing bill for the S4 took their toll. —Reuters

UNITED NATIONS, 26 July — UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon on Thursday urged all the parties in Egypt “to act with maximum restraint” and called on “the interim authorities to ensure law and order along with guaranteeing the safety and security of all Egyptians.”

“The secretary-general is following closely, and with growing concern, developments in Egypt,” said a statement issued here by Ban’s spokesman.

“The secretary-general once again urges all sides to act with maximum restraint,” the statement said. “He supports the rights of all Egyptians to hold peaceful protests.”

Ban’s statement came as tensions were again rising in Egypt ahead of rival rallies by followers of ousted president Mohamed Morsi and the army on Friday.

US Navy to recover bombs jettisoned in Great Barrier Reef

SYDNEY, 26 July — The US 7th Fleet said on Friday it will retrieve and dispose of four bombs unloaded by jets into Great Barrier Reef Marine Park off the coast of Australia during a training mishap, Australia, which angered environmentalists. In a press statement, the 7th Fleet said it “will take the lead in the safe retrieval and disposal” of the ordinance unloaded on 16 July by two US AV-8B Harrier jets into the World Heritage site during what it described as an “emergency situation.”

“We are fully committed to redressing any potential adverse environmental impact in a timely manner,” it said. The statement came a day after the 7th Fleet said the Harriers, which were launched from an amphibious assault ship ahead of the start of a US-Australia military training exercise, jettisoned the bombs “for safety reasons” after civilian vessels were detected inside the preapproved drop zone and the jets ran low on fuel.

There is no military solution to Syrian crisis

UNITED NATIONS, 26 July — US Secretary of State John Kerry said here on Thursday that there was no military solution in Syria, only a political one was possible, and he was stepping up dialogue with all involved in the Syrian conflict that has claimed over 100,000 lives over the past two years.

Kerry made the statement here as he was speaking to reporters here after his meeting with UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon.

Kerry came to UN Headquarters in New York for the first time as US secretary of states to preside over a ministerial level meeting on the Great Lakes region of Africa in the UN Security Council.

The United States is president of the 15-nation council for the month of July. Kerry and the UN secretary-general met later with reporters together to describe their discussion. “There is no military solution to Syria. There is only a political solution, and that will require leadership in order to bring people to the table,” he said, adding that he spoke with Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov on Wednesday.

“We remain committed to the effort to bring the parties to a Geneva 2 (conference on Syria) to implement Geneva 1, and we will try our hardest to make that happen as soon as is possible,” Kerry said.

For his part, Ban said “Military and violent actions must be stopped by all the parties and it is thus imperative to have a peace conference in Geneva as soon as possible, as initiated by Mr Kerry and Mr Lavrov,” adding that he and Joint Special Representative Lakhdar Brahimi would spare no effort to convene this meeting as soon as possible.

In May, following talks in Moscow between Lavrov and Kerry, the two countries announced they would work together to achieve a political so-

Bombings and shootings kill 28 across Iraq

BAQUBA, (Iraq), 26 July — At least 28 people were killed in bombings and shootings across Iraq on Thursday, police said.

In the deadliest attack, a bomb in a parked car exploded in a busy market killing 14 people in central Muqadadiya, 80 km (50 miles) northeast of the capital Baghdad, police said. “I was sitting in my neighbour’s shop when suddenly we heard a big explosion,” said eyewitness Salim Aziz.

“I had no time to see anything, and when I opened my eyes, I found myself at the hospital and I was injured in my right hand and left leg, surrounded by dozens of wounded people,” he added. Iraq has been rocked by daily attacks that have raised fears of a return to full-blown sectarian conflict in a country where Kurds, Shi’ite and Sunni Muslims have yet to find a stable way of sharing power. Sunni Islamist militants have been regaining momentum in their insurgency against the Shi’ite-led government in recent months, invigorated by the civil war in neighboring Syria, which has inflamed sectarian tensions in Iraq and the wider region.

A bomb placed in a garden where people were celebrating a wedding exploded killing four people the Amiriyah District of Baghdad on Thursday.

Gunmen using silenced weapons shot dead four young men in four separate incidents in Baghdad.

In Madaen, about 30 km (20 miles) southeast of Baghdad, a roadside bomb planted near a cafe went off, killing three people. Militants killed a police officer in the northern city of Mosul, while a child died in a roadside bombing, and a civil servant was also shot dead.

More than 750 people have been killed in militant attacks in Iraq so far in July, according to violence monitoring group Iraq Body Count. The steady deterioration of security in Iraq was highlighted by a mass jailbreak near the capital on Sunday when around 500 convicts, including senior al-Qaeda operatives, escaped after militants attacked two prisons.

The Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, which was formed through a merger between al-Qaeda’s Syrian and Iraqi branches, claimed responsibility for the raids and said it had freed its jailed comrades after months of preparation. One security official told Reuters on Tuesday that some of the escaped inmates were heading to Syria to join the ranks of the mainly Sunni rebels fighting to overthrow President Bashar al-Assad, whose Alawite sect derives from Shi’ite Islam.—Reuters

Turmoil hits Tunisia after secular politician slain

TUNIS, 26 July — Tunisian opposition politician Mohamed Brahmi was shot dead on Thursday in the second such assassination this year, setting off violent protests against the Islamist-led government in the capital and elsewhere. “This criminal gang has killed the free voice of Brahmi,” his widow, Mbarka Brahmi, told Reuters, without specifying who she thought was behind the shooting outside their home in Tunis.

Brahmi’s sister later accused the main Islamist Ennahda party of being behind the killing. “Ennahda killed my brother,” Souhba Brahmi said. Ennahda has condemned the killing. The politician’s wife said Brahmi had left the house after receiving a telephone call. She heard shots and found his body lying on the ground outside as two men fled on a motorcycle.

Brahmi belonged to the secular, Arab nationalist Popular Front party, whose then-leader, Chokri Belaïd, was killed in a similar way on 6 February. His death ignited the worst violence in Tunisia since President

Zine al-Abidine Ben Ali fell in 2011. Divisions between Islamists and their secular opponents have deepened since the popular uprising against Ben Ali, which unleashed unrest across the Arab world, unseating rulers in Egypt, Libya and Yemen, and leading to a civil war in Syria.

Brahmi, 58, was a critic of the Ennahda-led ruling coalition and a member of the Constituent Assembly that has drafted a new constitution for the North African nation of 11 million.

THE CONCEPT OF ANATTA

(In commemoration of the Anattalakkhana Sutta preached by the Buddha on the 5th waning day of Waso)

thereby making eyesight come into being. If one of these four conditions is absent, eye-consciousness can, by no means, arise. Consequently, we cannot see anything like a blind-man. This proves it evident that eye-sight is not created at all by any doer. Likewise, smelling, tasting, touching and thoughts are not created by anyone. They arise only due to the functioning of their respective conditions. In short, when the so-called being is analyzed in every detail, no soul or nothing substantial will be found, with the sole exception of the ever-changing particles of matter and processes of concomitants which are working side by side being dependent on one another. So it should be noted that beings do not dance to the tune of the creator. With regard to this, the following stanza is mentioned in the Digha Nikaya.

“..Just as a wooden puppet, though unsubstantial, lifeless, and inactive, may, by means of pulling strings, be made to move about, stand up, and appear full of life and activity, just so are mind or body, as such, something empty, lifeless and inactive, but by means of their mutual working together, this mental and bodily combination may move about, stand up and appear full of life and activity..”.

The Buddha professionally explained the idea of anatta in the Anattalakkhana Sutta that the five aggregates are not soul or one or one's own property, for one cannot exercise authority over them because they always lead to affliction. They are impermanent (anicca). What is impermanent is unsatisfactory (dukkha) and what is both impermanent and unsatisfactory should not be regarded by any means as soul or one or one's own property (anatta). Thus did the Buddha introduce his revolutionary idea.

Love Your Health

It has perhaps never been easier to contract an illness in this age of technological advancement which has but maintained the role of runner-up in each competition against growing number of dreadful diseases throughout successive periods. The globalization process has then acted as a travel agent for all kinds of diseases, regardless of its origin, posing grave threat to the global population.

Despite the sheer amount of funds being injected into medical research and experiment across the world, the birth rate of diseases seems has never been slower than that of medicines. Again, in spite of the huge amount of expenditure spent on treatment for common diseases like malaria and tuberculosis in developing countries, the target seems to be too challenging and the diseases appear too strong to be defeated.

Occupational diseases are prevalent among global working population, regardless of white-collar, pink-collar or blue-collar jobs. Despite the fact that technology is created to facilitate the works of humans, white-collar workers, the driving force of national economy, in most parts of the world seem to become slaves to technology rather than the master of it. Endless e-mail checks and replies, hourglass syndrome, marathon mouse miles, nomophobia, iPod oblivion—it is the Thousands and One Nights.

IT jobs can be categorized as well-paid jobs but prolonged sitting can increase health risks while reducing the lifespan. To contract a particular disease while working hard in the hope of Indian summer is not the option even to consider. Leaving the screen and walking for minutes at regular intervals during working hours would do a lot. But, most of us fail to do so once concentrated. In fact, things do happen without our notice.

Meanwhile, there needs to be a rethink in the way healthcare is delivered to people. Health education programmes should be launched on a wider scale across the country through all possible means that can draw public attention, increasing the budget for health care. Cure has never been better than prevention.

The Buddha’s denial of existence of atta through the exposition of the Anattalakkhana Sutta (Discourse on Soulessness) revolutionized whole history of man’s thoughts and ideologies. According to the teachings of the Buddha, so long as one cannot remove Sakayaditthi (personality belief), one will remain blind to the Truth. It is impossible to remove Sakayaditthi without the knowledge of anatta. Therefore, it stands to reason that understanding the nature of anatta is a must for our deliverance. The character of anatta can be evident to people only in the presence of and within the fold of the Buddha’s Sasana (Dispensation). All other religions base themselves on the idea of atta. So Donald Weston says, “Of the world’s major religions, only Buddhism denies or is agnostic about the existence of soul”. It is also the concept of anatta that popularized Buddhism and made it different from all other religions. However, this concept still remains a hard-nut to crack among philosophers, theologians and scholars.

Firstly, we should know what meaning the word “Anatta” conveys. Etymologically, the Pali compound “Anatta” is composed of two members: a negative prefix “An” meaning “not” plus “atta” corresponding to “atan” in Sanskrit which means “soul, self, ego, personality, etc.” So this Pali compound is literally translated as “No soul” or “Not-self”.

Some religions believe that there is a separate soul in every being. It is created by Supreme Being, Universal Soul, called Brahman. Like Brahman, the separate soul is immortal. When the body dies, the separate soul shifts to another body and makes it its new home, discarding the worn-out body. Liberation of this soul occurs only when it becomes completely purified, and finally united with Supreme Being or Universal Soul emanated. Dr. Walpola Rahula says that this idea is conceived by man for self-protection and self-preservation. The Buddha spurned this untenable idea flatly by preaching the Anattalakkhana Sutta five days after he had expounded his first discourse” Dhammacakkappavattana Sutta. His new teaching was in complete antithesis to those of the then prevalent religions which were founded on the idea of atta. Hence, Buddhism is known as being against man’s selfish desire. For this teaching, the Buddha was denounced as an iconoclast by the leaders of other contemporary religions.

According to the teachings of the Buddha, there is no doer apart from doing. There is no sufferer apart from suffering. There is no being called, “I”, “he”, “she” etc. Beings are just a combination of mind (nama) and matter (rupa) or five aggregate—corporeality (rupakkhandha), feeling (vedanakkhandha), perception (sannakkhandha), mental formation (sankharakkhandha) and consciousness (vinanakkhandha) which are in a state of constant flux, not remaining for two consecutive moments. No creator can bring this incessant arising and dissolution of corporeal and mental phenomena under control. Nothing permanent or substantial is there in a being, apart from this incessant arising and dissolution of corporeal and mental phenomena.

In the ultimate sense, our so-called body (rupa) is composed of particles of matter. Matter, in fact, is the visible complex of invisible qualities and forces known in Pali Mahabhuta, essential or great elements such as earth-element (pathavi), heat-element (tejo), water-element (apo) and wind-element (vayo). Depending on these four great elements, 24 derivatives also arise like a tree growing depending on the earth.

In addition, along with these four great elements, there also arise four secondary characteristics of matter, i.e. colour (vanna) smell (gandha), taste (rasa) and nutritional quality (oja). Our whole physical body can be experienced only in terms of these eight elemental properties of matter. According to the Abhidhamma, our physical body is conditioned by action (kamma), mind (citta), season (utu) and nutrient (ahara), not by any creator. When our physical body is minutely analyzed into ultimate realities, no soul except the qualities and forces of these four great elements and its 24 derivatives can be found.

The so-called mind (nama) is nothing but a series of successive momentary thoughts or processes of consciousness which are the products of the impact between sense organs and sense objects. For example, due to the contact between eyes and the visible object, there arises eye-consciousness and simultaneously along with it, there also arise mental concomitants called cetasikas such as feeling (vedana), perception (sanna), mental formations (sankhara), contact (phassa) etc. In this case, the eyes and the visible object are matter (rupakkhandha), to feel the visible object is feeling (vedanakkhandha), to remember the visible object is perception (sannakkhandha), to motivate actions is mental formations (sankharakkhandha) and to incline to the visible object is consciousness (vinnanakkhandha). Thus, in our every action, the five khandhas (mind plus matter) work collectively and mutually, depending on one another. Therefore, Arahant Vajira said thus,

“When all constituent parts are there,

The designation ‘cart’ is used.

Just so, where the five groups exist,

Of ‘living being’ do we speak”.

Four conditions—the eye, the visible object, light and attention—must be present to make eye-consciousness arise. Eye-consciousness cognizes the visible object,

It is very difficult to see the nature of anatta. Only those who have developed at least Namaruparicched-anana, Paccayaparigghanana and Udayabhayanana can clearly discern the separate working of the five aggregates, the causes which condition nama and rupa and the nature of three characteristics: anicca, dukkha and anatta. In actual fact, anicca is concealed by changing postures (while meditating) and anatta by compactness and solidity of things.

The heated debate on the concept of anatta between the Buddha and the great ascetic Saccaka makes it more clear that there is no atta. During the debate, Saccaka asked the Buddha if he had taught anatta. When the Buddha answered in the affirmative, Saccaka countered saying "No, there is atta. The five aggregates are atta." Then the Buddha cross-questioned him. "Do you really think that rupa is atta? If so, can you make your physical appearance (rupa) beautiful?" Thus Saccaka was finally forced to admit that rupa is not atta.

The following verse from the Patisambhida-magga Pali says that even Nibbana is anatta.

"...Sabbe sankhara

anicca;

Sabbe sankhara

dukkha;

Sabbe dhamma

The first line means "All conditioned things are impermanent, the second means "All conditioned things are suffering. The third, however, is different. Here, the Buddha does not use "Sankhara" but uses Dhamma. Dhamma here means all things—both conditioned and unconditioned. So the third line means that all things, conditioned and unconditioned, are anatta and void of self or soul.

This means that even Nibbana which is Asankhata, unconditioned, is not atta or is void of atta. Thus does this verse deny the existence of atta.

The Buddha did not agree to the idea that when the body dies, the soul moves to another new body and continues from life to life. According to him, people are reborn with Patisandhi (relinking consciousness), a rebirth consciousness which does not transmigrate from the previous existence, but which comes into existence by means of conditions included in the previous existences, conditions such as kamma, etc. Thus a reborn person is not the same as the one who has died nor is the reborn person entirely different from the one who has died. Most importantly, no metaphysical entity, no soul and no kind of spiritual self continues from one existence to another in the Buddha's teaching.

In conclusion, so profound is the concept of anatta that we cannot understand it easily. Only when we see the three characteristics—anicca, dukkha and anatta—clearly, we can comprehend the nature of anatta. Therefore, we should develop insight meditation (vipassana bhavana), the only practice which can guarantee us insight into the nature of the three characteristics.

Millions sing, pray for Mandela

JOHANNESBURG, 26 July —As former South African President Nelson Mandela turned 95 on Thursday, South Africans from all works of life came out in huge numbers to celebrate his birthday by spending 67 minutes of their time assisting the less privileged Mandela's birthday, which falls on 18 July, was declared in 2009 by the United Nations Assembly as the Nelson Mandela International Day. On this day, people from over the world are urged to spend 67 minutes of their time doing good things.

The call is made in honour of Mandela who spent 67 years of his life fighting for social justice, human rights and freedom of South Africans from the oppressive apartheid regime.

This year's celebrations took place with the theme of Take Action, Inspire Change and Make Every Day a Mandela Day with a focus on shelter, literacy and food security. Students in South Africa had a unique way of celebrating Mandela's 95th birthday. At exactly 8:00 am local time, all schools throughout the country sang happy birthday for Mandela. At a German international school in Johannesburg, about 972 students sang the birthday song in front of a big portrait on the podium, showing a smiling Madiba (Mandela's clan name).

Imaan Essop, a Grade 12 pupil at the school, said, "I just want to wish Madiba a very happy birthday and thank him so much for building (the country) and being the father of a beautiful nation in South Africa.—Xinhua

European court says Russia's Khodorkovsky case not political

STRASBOURG, 26 July—A European court ruled on Thursday Russia had a legitimate case against ex-oil tycoon Mikhail Khodorkovsky and business partner Platon Lebedev over alleged tax fraud, rejecting suggestions it had been political motivated.

But the European Court of Human Rights found that their trial had been unfair and that their 2005 sentencing to a remote jail near the Arctic Circle was unjustified.

Khodorkovsky, a staunch critic of President Vladimir Putin and once Russia's richest man, was arrested in 2003 and handed alongside Lebedev 13 years jail on charges of multi-million dollar tax evasion and money laundering.

"Charges against two Russian business executives had a sound basis, but the hearing of their case was unfair, and their placement in remote penal colonies unjustified," the Strasbourg-based court said.

Judges from the court ordered Moscow to pay 10,000 euros ($13,200) to Khodorkovsky in damages.

The punishment, which in December was reduced by two years allowing the two men to walk free in October 2014, was seen by supporters as a politically-motivated act of revenge.

Thirteen people have been freed so far as part of an amnesty for Russia's jailed entrepreneurs intended to correct failures in Russia's legal system, which has often seen entrepreneurs jailed on trumped-up charges.

Canada's crime rate drops to lowest level in 40 years

OTTAWA, 26 July—Canadian police services reported nearly 2 million criminal incidents in 2012, a 3 percent drop from 2011, or 36,000 fewer than in the previous year, Statistics Canada reported on Thursday. The crime rate is the lowest level since 1972, the report said.

The drop in the crime rate was due to decreases in non-violent crimes..

Among major urban centres, the Greater Toronto Area home to about 6 million people — reported a 7 percent decrease in its police-reported crime rate in 2012 and had the lowest crime rate in Canada for the sixth consecutive year.

Kelowna in the western province of British Columbia with a population of about 185,000 experienced a 6 percent surge in its crime rate and had the country's highest crime rate in 2012. Canadian police services also reported just over 415,000 violence incidents last year, a decrease of 9,000 from 2011, said Statistics Canada. In 2012, Canada's violent crime rate fell by 3 percent to its lowest level since 1987.

In 2012, police reported 543 homicides, or 55 fewer than in 2011. Canada's homicide rate of 1.56 homicides per 100,000 people was the lowest since 1966.

Statistics Canada said that beyond homicides, the police-reported crime rate fell for most violent crimes, particularly major sexual assault, robbery, and assault on a peace officer.

There were also more terrorism-related incidents last year — an increase by 55 compared to 2011. Statistics Canada reported that the increase was mainly the result of "an unusually high number of hoax terrorism incidents", most of which occurred in Quebec during the student demonstrations in the spring of 2012.

Four sides launch joint efforts to promote West Bank industrial park

RAMALLAH, 26 July—Officials from Palestinian territories, Israel, Jordan and Japan met on Thursday in the West Bank City of Jericho over removing obstacles that prevent the opening of an industrial park in the city.

Ministers from the four states agreed on "special arrangements" to operate the agricultural park within four months, said the Palestinian Minister of Planning Mohammed Abu Ramadan.

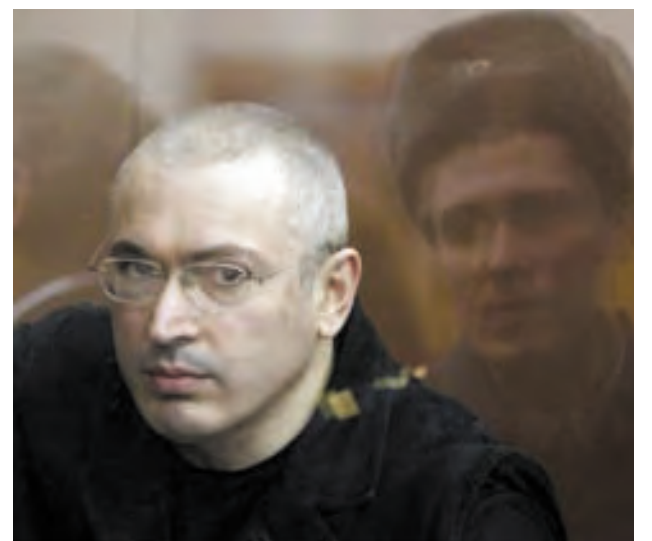

Nearly three years of standstill political talks between Israel and the Palestinians caused the 200 million US dollars project to enjoy little work on the ground.

This meeting came after the US Secretary of State John Kerry said he succeeded in reaching an agreement allowing Israeli and Palestinian negotiators to meet directly next week for the first time since 2010.

Israel's Regional Cooperation Minister Silvan Shalom, who participated in the Jericho meeting, said he saw that 30 July meeting in Washington may bear "a good chance" that will lead to renewing direct talks.

"I believe it is better to talk than to fight," Shalom said, adding "That doesn't mean economy is a substitute for the political track, the two should go together."

Pakistan's opposition party boycotts presidential elections

ISLAMABAD, 26 July — Pakistan's major opposition party on Friday announced boycott of the presidential elections as a protest against change in the election date.

The Election Commission of Pakistan had previously set on 6 August for the presidential elections, however, the Supreme Court ordered the elections to be held on 30 July on a request by the ruling Pakistan Muslim League (PML-N).

The PML-N had approached the apex court to change the polling date, arguing that many lawmakers will be in Saudi Arabia on August for worship in the Muslim Holy Month of Ramadan and would be deprived of their right of voting. The opposition Pakistan People's Party (PPP) objected the court verdict and said that the party was not heard in the case and that the court delivered "one-sided" decision.

The PPP presidential candidate, Senator Raza Rabbani, announced boycott at an emergent press conference at the party's central secretariat in the presence of top leaders.

"The one-sided court verdict left no option with us but to boycott the presidential elections and this electoral process," Rabbani said.

The opposition leader said that the court verdict made it impossible for him to run election campaign in few days.

The PPP candidate had earlier refused to appear before the Chief Election Commissioner for scrutiny of the nomination papers within the stipulated time.

Candidate of the PML-N, Mamnoon Hussain, and candidate of another key opposition party Pakistan Tehrik-e-Insaf justice (retired) Wajihuddin Ahmed, appeared before the Chief Election Commissioner in Islamabad during the scrutiny of their nomination papers.

The Chief Election Commissioner, Fakhru-din G Ebrahim, accepted nomination of the two candidates.

Rabbani said that he had filed nomination papers and had started campaign and also won support of some opposition parties but the ruling party knocked at the doors of the Supreme Court and accepted the date proposed by the ruling.

"It is mentioned in several courts verdicts that all stakeholders will be heard in cases but in this case the Supreme Court did not hear him and other presidential candidates," Rabbani complained. He also lashed out at the Election Commission of Pakistan for abdicating its right to the Supreme Court. The opposition boycott will be a huge embarrassment for the government as it could lead to political tensions between the ruling party and the opposition.—Xinhua

DPJ to suspend party membership of ex-PM Kan for 3 months

Former Prime Minister Naoto Kan

TOKYO, 26 July — The Democratic Party of Japan decided on Friday to suspend the party membership of former Prime Minister Naoto Kan for three months as he supported an independent candidate in Sunday's upper house election in defiance of a decision by the main opposition party.

DPJ President Banri Kaieda proposed the step at a meeting of the party's executive board, which immediately approved it, party lawmakers said. Kaieda had initially proposed earlier this week expelling the former leader from the party.

The DPJ suffered a major setback in the House of Councillors election, in which Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's ruling bloc wrested control of the chamber from opposition parties.

Kan supported a candidate who had lost the party's endorsement in the Tokyo constituency.

The DPJ had initially planned to field two candidates in the capital but revoked its backing of one of them only two days before official campaigning started, in view of the slim chance of securing two seats there.

Neither candidate was elected, due apparently to a split in the DPJ's vote amid the confusion.

Kan apologized to the party when the executive board met on Wednesday. Some of its members then voiced reluctance to expel Kan, saying the punishment would be "too severe," and the board instead opted to suspend his membership, the lawmakers said.

Singapore Q2 public housing resale prices register lowest growth since 2009

SINGAPORE, 26 July — Singapore's resale price index for public housing flats, which are built and sold by the government to local resident households, rose slightly by 0.5 percent in the second quarter after several rounds of cooling measures, the country's Housing Development Board (HDB) released on Friday.

The Q2 index is lower than the 1.3 percent growth in the previous quarter and the lowest quarterly growth since the first quarter in 2009. But resale transactions rose by 21 percent to 5,235 cases in Q2, up from 4,335 cases in Q1.

The city-state has introduced several rounds of cooling measures to curb high level growth in property market, including increasing extra stamp duty for foreigners, permanent residents and also the citizens, and a cap on the size of bank housing loans.

On the other hand, the government also ramped up the supply side by increasing the units of public housing flats. The HDB said on Friday that it is "on track to launch 25,000 Build-To-Order (BTO) flats for the whole of 2013."

In the first half of this year, the HDB offered 12,144 new flats under its BTO exercises.

Alibaba, e-concierge, soon at your service

BEIJING, 26 July — Chinese e-commerce giant Alibaba Group Holding Ltd plans to boost its presence in China's online market, and is adding services to ease consumers' daily lives, from ordering food to booking movie tickets.

The company expects the new business area to become a major revenue source in the future. Online shopping has become a new way of life for many Chinese consumers, said Zhang Jianfeng, vice-president of Alibaba Group. And the company has realized that customers are not satisfied with merely buying items on Internet. "Gradually, consumers are developing a strong demand for daily life services, in fields like catering, entertainment and travel," Zhang said at a Beijing news conference on Thursday.

Taobao Life, a platform owned by Alibaba that provides such services, has been receiving unprecedented attention from Alibaba's management since the beginning of the year. In March, Alibaba's chairman Jack Ma said that "amazing" things will happen if everyday activities are combined with mobile Internet services.

Ma compared the growing importance of e-commerce in people's lives to "the rising sun at 5 or 6 am", and Alibaba expressed its ambition to develop the new business to reach a scale similar to its booming Taobao Marketplace. If so, investors who are eyeing Alibaba's possible initial public offering will find another bright spot for the company's future profitability, analysts said.

Alibaba is said to be planning to include its e-commerce platforms — Taobao Mall, Taobao Marketplace and eTao — into the planned IPO package. Last year, Taobao Mall and Taobao Marketplace posted about 1 trillion yuan ($163 billion) in total transaction value. Zhang revealed that the Taobao Life platform has three strategic business sectors.

Pakistan's 1st commercial mango consignment heads to Japan

ISLAMABAD, 26 July — An initial consignment of 550 kilograms of Pakistani mangoes is on its way to Japan, an official of the Trade Development Authority of Pakistan has said.

Usman Narejo, the authority's director general, told reporters in Islamabad this is the first commercial export of mangoes from Pakistan to Japan after years of negotiations and would be followed by a second consignment of 1,500 kg in August.

The export of mangoes from Pakistan to Japan, a longstanding issue, had languished since 2011 when a token consignment was allowed into Japan to introduce the Pakistani variety there.

Now, Pakistan has a special processing and preservation centre for mangoes to be exported to markets in Europe, the United States, Asia, including Japan and South Korea, and to Australia.

Nepal government head refuses to resign from chief justice

KATHMANDU, 26 July — Despite the pressure from opposition parties, Chairman of Interim Election Government Khil Raj Regmi has refused to resign as chief justice. Regmi is holding the post of both government head and chief justice since 13 March but some opposition parties want his resignation from chief justice to ensure an appropriate environment for 19 November poll.

Furnishing a written reply to Supreme Court Thursday, Regmi argued that presidential decree to remove constitutional difficulties made new provision in the constitution, which states that the government would be headed by a sitting chief justice.

A case has been filed at Supreme Court (SC) demanding Regmi's resignation from chief justice. "If I resign from the post of chief justice, I will no longer remain as the Cabinet chairman, who in turn could lead to new constitutional complexities," read the reply.

Opposition parties Madhesi Janadhikar Forum Nepal (MJF-N), CPN-Maoist, a splinter group of UCPN (Maoist) and Federal Socialist party Nepal (FSP-N) are demanding Regmi's resignation from chief justice, saying that holding both posts by an individual will affect the principles of separation of powers.

South Africa wants Zimbabwe vote to reflect people's will: Motlanthe

PRETORIA, 26 July — With a big vested interest in the stability of Zimbabwe, South Africa is keen that next week's election in its northern neighbour should fairly reflect the people's wishes, Deputy President Kgalema Motlanthe said on Wednesday.

Hundreds of thousands of refugees fled into South Africa after violence in the last election, in 2008, landing it with an expensive humanitarian crisis. But since it helped to broker a unity government, the economy has been recovering, creating opportunities for South African business.

However, preparations for the 31 July elections have been far from smooth, with President Robert Mugabe's rivals in the Movement for Democratic Change alleging that his ZANU-PF party is making it hard for their voters to register. Washington has said it is not convinced the vote will be free and fair.

In an interview with Reuters, Motlanthe said Pretoria had no preference as to the result.

"Whatever the outcome of the elections, it should be a free expression of the will of Zimbabwe. That is how we view it."

But he also said political stability was a precondition for economic development. "We have a vested interest as a country in ensuring that there is peace and stability in Zimbabwe. We can only benefit from that."

South Africa's major banks, retailers and mining firms have operations in Zimbabwe and positioning themselves to expand if the economy, estimated by the International Monetary Fund to be worth $9.8 billion in 2012, continues to grow. Zimbabwe spends the equivalent of 20 percent of its GDP on imports from South Africa.

Why Jennifer Lawrence gave away her Oscar to parents

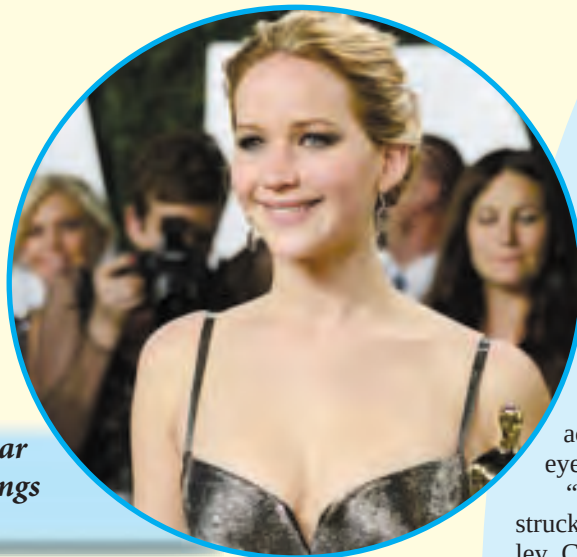

LOS ANGELES, 26 July—Actress Jennifer Lawrence has given away her Oscar award to her parents as she felt odd displaying the trophy in her house.

The 22-year-old actress, who won the best actress Oscar for her performance in the romantic comedy Silver Linings Playbook, which also had actor Bradley Cooper, struggled to find a suitable spot for the golden statuette in her house.

“My parents took it back to Kentucky, ‘cos I felt odd having it, like, on display in my house,” accesshollywood.com quoted Lawrence as saying.

“If anybody’s coming over to my house, I didn’t want them to remember that. Just kind of puts a weird energy out.

I put it in the hallway towards the bathroom, and my mum was like, ‘I’m taking it. It shouldn’t be here’. And now it’s on a piano in Kentucky!” she added.—PTI

Ronaldinho inspires Atletico Mineiro to first Copa Libertadores title

BELO HORIZONTE, (Brazil), 26 July— Former Barcelona, Paris Saint-Germain and AC Milan star Ronaldinho was instrumental in helping Brazilian side Atletico Mineiro defeat Paraguay's Olimpia in a penalty shoot-out on Wednesday to win the Copa Libertadores for the first time.

Trailing 0-2 from the first leg, Atletico opened the scoring through the tournament's leading scorer Jo in the 36th minute but had to wait until three minutes from time to snatch the equaliser through defender Leonardo Silva.

After a goalless extra-time, the final went to penalties which the Brazilians won 4-3 in front of 60,000 fans at the Mineirao Stadium.

A World Cup winner with Brazil in 2002 and Champions League winner with Barcelona in 2006, Ronaldinho returned to his home country in 2011 with his top ambition being to win the South American continental cup to go with his other honours.

"This is why I came back to Brazil," the two-time winner of the world player of the year award said. "Not long ago people were saying that I was done but we showed today that isn't the case."

Olimpia, aiming for their fourth Copa Libertadores title and first since 2002, were left rueing a host of golden goal opportunities.

"You can't miss so many chances in a Copa fi-

Federer stunned by Brands in Swiss Open

GSTAAD, 26 July — Top seed Roger Federer suffered a shock 6-3 6-4 defeat by Germany's Daniel Brands in his opening match at his home Swiss Open on Thursday - the latest setback for the former world number one.

The 17-times grand-slam champion was beaten in 66 minutes by the 55th-ranked Brands in the second round in Gstaad, a week after beating the same player in the Hamburg tournament.

"It helped that I already played him in Hamburg last week," Brands said on the ATP website (www.atp-worldtour.com).

"Of course you are very impressed when you face him on the court for the first time. It's completely different from what you see when you watch him on TV once you see him on the other side of the court." Federer, 31, slipped out of the world's top four for the first time since 2003 following a shock defeat by journeyman Sergiy Stakhovsky at Wimbledon and last week lost in the Hamburg semi-finals to then 114th-ranked Argentine Federico Delbonis.

Chelsea rout Indonesia All-Stars in friendly

JAKARTA, 26 July— Chelsea turned on the style in an 8-1 rout of Indonesia All-Stars on Thursday as they completed their Asian tour with a 100 per cent record under returning manager Jose Mourinho.

Two belters from Brazilian midfielder Ramires and another brace from back-from-loan striker Romelu Lukaku swelled the Chelsea scoreline, as Indonesia's lone score came from a late Tomas Kalas own goal. Belgian danger-man Eden Hazard got the opener with a penalty, captain John Terry nodded a trademark header, teenager Bertrand Traore scored a beauty and Demba Ba was also on the scoresheet.

The emphatic score, in front of 80,000 fans at Jakarta's Gelora Bung Karno Stadium, and the crowd-pleasing performance of his emerging team buoyed Mourinho as he plots the season ahead. "We are talking about some of the best players in Europe against an inexperienced team, so the result was not the most important thing," said Mourinho. "But I was very pleased with the attitude of my players, trying always to play, trying always to improve, trying always to score goals, trying always to please the crowd."—PTI

Pep Guardiola's Bayern Munich defeat Barcelona in friendly

MUNICH, 26 July—Pep Guardiola's Bayern Munich enjoyed a 2-0 win at home to his former employers Barcelona in Wednesday's friendly as the Spaniards only played their stars until the break.

Although Barcelona left new Brazil signing

Neymar at home, first-team regulars Javier Mascherano, Adriano, Alex Song and Alexis Sanchez, plus Argentina's Lionel Messi played the first-half in Munich.

Goals by Philipp Lahm and Mario Mandzukic either side of half-time was enough to give the Champions League winners victory over the Catalan giants at a sold-out Allianz Arena in front of 71,137 fans.

With the Uli Hoeness Cup on offer, in honour of Bayern's president, this was Munich's second pre-season title in four days having won Sunday's Telekom Cup final with a 5-1 win at hosts Borussia Moenchengladbach.

Barcelona had something to prove on their first return to Munich since their 4-0 drubbing in April's Champions League semifinal, which the Germans had backed up with a 3-0 win in Spain.

But with Gerardo Martino back in Spain, ahead of Friday's official unveiling as Barcelona new manager, caretaker coach Jordi Roura had no qualms about blood-ing his entire bench of juniors at half-time.

Likewise, with the Bundesliga season a fortnight away, Guardiola gave both Brazil centre-back Dante and Germany's Bastian Schweinsteiger, back from a minor ankle op, their first pre-season appearances.

Messi made a bright start with a run through midfield before blasting his shot wide, while at the other end, Germany's Toni Kroos forced Barcelona goalkeeper Jose Manuel Pinto into a diving save.

Tiger aims to regain winning ways at happy hunting ground

LOS ANGELES, 26 July— Frustrated after a wasted opportunity to win last week's British Open, Tiger Woods will be back in PGA Tour action for next week's WGC-Bridgestone Invitational at one of his favourite venues as he hunts a fifth victory this year.

American Woods has triumphed a record seven times at Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio where he will also be looking to build momentum for the season's final major, the PGA Championship to be played the following week.

"This is one of my favourite courses," world number one Woods said on his website (web.tigerwoods.com/) about the tree-lined venue for the elite World Golf Championships (WGC) event.

"There is nothing tricky about it; everything is right in front of you. And the fans do a great job of supporting the event."

Woods will aim to return to the PGA Tour winner's circle, having tied for sixth in last week's British Open at Muirfield in Scotland where his bid for a 15th major title unravelled in the final round as he closed with a three-over-par 74.

He was happy with his overall game at Muirfield, though he struggled with his putting, especially in the final round.

"I'm very pleased with the way I'm playing, there's no doubt. I'm right there. We have the World Golf Championship here at (Firestone) a golf course I like, and I've had a little bit of success on it. I'm looking forward to that."

Woods has not won a major title since his remarkable playoff victory at the 2008 US Open where he was severely hampered by a double stress fracture in his left shinbone.

However, he has displayed excellent form on the PGA Tour this year, winning four times in just 10 starts, and ranks first in FedExCup points, money earnings and scoring.

Pope scolds rich, demands social justice in visit to Brazil slum

RIO DE JANEIRO, 26 July— Pope Francis on Thursday issued the first social manifesto of his young pontificate, telling slum dwellers in Brazil that the world's rich must do much more to wipe out vast inequalities between the haves and the have-nots.

The pope also urged Brazil's youth, who have taken part in recent protests showing discontent with the status quo, to keep alive their "sensitivity towards injustice" and be a catalyst in the fight against corruption.

The first Latin American pope, who has rallied the Church on behalf of the poor and who lives more austere than his predecessors, called for a "culture of solidarity" to replace the "selfishness and individualism" prevailing in modern society.

"No one can remain insensitive to the inequalities that persist in the world," he told residents of Manginhos, a sprawling shantytown, or favela, of ramshackle brick dwellings that until recently was overrun by violence and controlled by drug lords.

His speech, under rains that have persisted throughout most of his first trip abroad as pope, came halfway through a week-long visit around World Youth Day, a gathering of young Catholics that is expected to attract more than a million faithful to Rio de Janeiro and nearby sites.

Despite the downpours and unusually chilly weather, tens of thousands of rapturous Brazilians and foreign visitors have turned out to welcome the pope. The World Youth Day events are an effort by the Vatican to inspire Catholics at a time when rival denominations, secularism and sexual and financial scandals continue to lead some to abandon the Church.

Brazil, home to the world's biggest population of Catholics with over 120 million faithful, is an apt locale for the pope to remind the world of inequality. A recent decade of economic growth in the country raised incomes for many, but tens of millions of Brazilians still live in poverty or with little more than the basics to get by.

In Manginhos, Francis, an Argentine known for frequent outings into the slums near Buenos Aires even as a cardinal, smiled and visibly enjoyed the chaotic close contact allowed with residents there.

Man of Steele in charge at Canadian Open

OAKVILLE, (Ontario), 26 July— American Brendan Steele took full advantage of ideal early scoring conditions to forge a one-shot lead after the opening round of the Canadian Open on Thursday.

Playing the back nine first on a calm, sunny morning at Glen Abbey Golf Club, Steele mixed eight birdies with a single bogey for a seven-under 65 that left him a shot clear of compatriots Matt Kuchar and Scott Brown and Australian Scott Gardiner.

As breezes stiffened and conditions toughened for the afternoon starters no one managed to come close to nudging Steele, 30, from the top of the leaderboard.

Steele, whose has just one PGA Tour win, had three birdies on his outward nine on the Jack Nicklaus-designed layout and picked up the pace after the turn with five birdies over seven holes before dropping his only shot of the day at the ninth.

Kuchar, the highest ranked player in the field at world number six, mixed an eagle with five birdies and a bogey while Brown turned in a flawless round with six birdies.

"It was perfect conditions," smiled Kuchar, who has made 20 consecutive cuts, including all 16 starts this season. "I feel like last week, conditions were so challenging and so difficult at the British Open to come here and play golf that is more friendly and more what we are use to

was great."

Gardiner, who has made the cut just twice in his last 16 events, began his day with a par then reeled off six consecutive birdies to race up the leaderboard.

The Australian's red-hot start cooled with seven consecutive pars before he picked up another birdie at 15 followed by his only bogey of the day at 16.

American Hunter Mahan and Swede David Lingmerth were a further shot back after returning 67s while Chez Reavie, whose only career PGA Tour win game at Glen Abbey in 2008, and former Masters champions Bubba Watson and Trevor Immelman were among a large pack three off the pace.

ing in the breezy conditions with former world number one Luke Donald of Britain (73), twice Canadian Open champion Jim Furyk (72) and 2010 US Open winner Graeme McDowell (76) all failing to break par. American
