NAY PYI TAW, 9 Aug— President U Thein Sein met Union ministers, region/state chief ministers, and deputy ministers at the hall of the Presidential Palace here this morning.

The meeting was also attended by Vice-Presidents Dr Sai Mauk Kham and U Nyan Tun, the Union ministers, the Union attorney-general, the Union auditor-general, the chairman of Union Civil Service Board, the region/state chief ministers, deputy ministers, deputy attorney-general and deputy auditor-general, members of Union Civil Service Board, members of Nay Pyi Taw Council and guests.

The President said in his address:

The following are major purposes of meeting between Union ministers, region/state chief ministers and deputy ministers working in each sector and region for the development of the country socio-economic development of the people:-

* The first 30 months of five-year term of our government is the period we laid foundations for remarkable democratic transitions to create a new democracy. We have created better political environment inside the country, improved international relations and continued dialogue for national reconciliation in this period. We have made a host of changes and relaxations in laws and rules and regulations in economic and social reforms and have started to integrate into the global market.

* During the second 30 months, we have to give the basic needs of the people higher priority and ensure the socio-economic profits reach them. We need to give high priority to the people-centered development approach. We have to draft and implement Integrated Action Plan for the remaining 30 months. The need to draft the plan in cooperation so as to cover fundamental needs of the people avoiding overlap of tasks between the Union ministries and region/state governments.

The government initiated four reforms— political reforms, economic and social reforms, administration mechanism

“No doubt” in sincerity of Obama’s words on visit to Hiroshima: Roos

TOKYO, 9 Aug—US Ambassador to Japan John Roos said on Thursday he has “no doubt” in the sincerity of President Barack Obama’s words regarding the possibility of his visiting Hiroshima and Nagasaki, which suffered US atomic bombings in World War II.

“Obviously, there are tremendous demands on the president’s time, and I think that scheduling and everything is up to the president and the White House. But I have no doubt in the sincerity of his words that he would be honoured to do so during his presidency,” Roos said in an interview with Kyodo News and other media when asked if he would advise the president to visit the cities.

In November 2009, Obama said just before his first visit to Japan, “I would be honoured to have the opportunity to visit those cities at some point during my presidency.”

As for the ambassador’s past attendances at ceremonies to commemorate the atomic bombings of the cities in 1945, Roos said, “The president was fully supportive of my going to Hiroshima and Nagasaki.” Roos, whose term will end shortly, attended an annual ceremony in Hiroshima on Tuesday and will go to Nagasaki’s ceremony on Friday. He became the first US ambassador to attend the Hiroshima ceremony in 2010, which fell on the 65th anniversary, and attended the ceremony in Nagasaki last year.

“My personal view is that not only all Americans, but I think everyone in the world should visit Hiroshima and Nagasaki,” Roos said.

“I strongly believe in the president’s goal of eliminating nuclear weapons,” he said, referring to Obama’s speech in Prague in April 2009 in which he expressed his desire to create “a world without nuclear weapons.”

Israel, Palestinians to resume talks in Jerusalem on 14 August

WASHINGTON, 9 Aug—The Israelis and Palestinians will have their second round of peace talks in Jerusalem on 14 Aug and then a third in Jericho of the West Bank, the US State Department said on Thursday. “Negotiations between the Israelis and Palestinians will be resuming 14 Aug in Jerusalem, and will be followed by a meeting in Jericho,” spokeswoman Jen Psaki told reporters at a daily Press briefing.

She said US peace envoy Martin Indyk and his deputy Frank Lowenstein will travel to the region to “help facilitate” the negotiations, and Secretary of State John Kerry will not make any announcement after the talks. The Palestinians and Israelis agreed to meet further to discuss all the final status issues — Jerusalem, security, the Jewish settlements, borders and refugees, after their chief negotiators met late last month in Washington for two-day initial talks. Kerry said after the initial talks that the United States and the parties seek to “achieve a final-status agreement over the course of the next nine months” through direct negotiations. He also highlighted that he would be the only one authorized to comment publicly on the talks, as the parties had agreed to keep the content of the negotiations confidential.

Nagasaki urges gov’t to do more to eliminate nuclear weapons

NAGASAKI, 9 Aug—Nagasaki Mayor Tomihisa Taue criticized the government on Friday for its recent inaction in opposing nuclear weapons and urged it to show leadership as the world’s only atomic-bombed country, as Prime Minister Shinzo Abe vowed to push for the abolition of nuclear weapons on the 68th anniversary of the US bombing of the city.

“I call on the Japanese government to consider once again that Japan is the only country to have suffered a nuclear bombing,” Taue said twice in his latest Peace Declaration delivered at a ceremony in the city’s Peace Park, attended by representatives of 44 countries.

He also said Tokyo’s

failure to sign a statement rejecting the use of nuclear weapons under any circumstances at an international meeting in April is “betraying the expectations of global society” and “implies that the government would approve of their use under some circumstances.”

Taue also expressed worries over the resumption of Japan-India negotiations for a nuclear cooperation agreement, saying such cooperation with India, a de facto nuclear power which has not signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, would render “meaningless” the NPT regime and give North Korea “an excuse to justify” its nuclear development.

Snowden case not worth hurting Russia-US relations

MOSCOW, 9 Aug—Russia’s granting of temporary amnesty to former US spy agency contractor Edward Snowden should not be allowed to affect Moscow-Washington ties, a Russian lawmaker said on Thursday.

“Snowden’s activity isn’t worth cooling relations between our countries,” Mikhail Margelov, head of the International Committee of the Federation Council (upper house of the parliament), said.

Margelov said, even during the Cold War, neither Soviet dissidents flying to the West nor US dissidents supported by Moscow hampered summits.

Great powers understood their responsibility over nuclear arms control, regional conflicts, militarization of space and other global issues, the politician told Interfax news agency.

“Now there are no fewer global problems requiring face-to-face meetings of the US and Russian leaders than it used to be during the Cold War,” Margelov said.

He added the upcoming so-called “2+2” meeting of the two countries’ defence and foreign ministers due in Washington on Friday could “hopefully” minimize the damage incurred by the US pulling out of next month’s scheduled summit between US president Barack Obama and Russian counterpart Vladimir Putin.

According to Margelov, the value of these summits lie not only in the decisions made but in the very fact that they take place.

“They send signals to the international community that dialogue between two leading powers remains ongoing,” the senator said.

DAR ES SALAAM, 9 Aug—Men riding a motorbike threw acid at two British teenage girls in Tanzania’s semi-autonomous Zanzibar region, leaving them with facial, chest and back injuries, a senior police official said on Thursday.

The pair, both 18 and from England’s northern city of Manchester according to police in the Indian Ocean archipelago, were flown to Tanzania’s commercial capital Dar es Salaam.

They had been volunteering at a local school in Zanzibar, an island that is popular with international tourists but has suffered a wave of deadly protests last year as supporters of an Islamist group repeatedly clashed with the police.

NSA to cut system administrators by 90 percent to limit data access

WASHINGTON, 9 Aug—The National Security Agency, hit by disclosures of classified data by former contractor Edward Snowden, said on Thursday it intends to eliminate about 90 percent of its system administrators to reduce the number of people with access to secret information.

Keith Alexander, the director of the NSA, the US spy agency charged with monitoring foreign electronic communications, told a cybersecurity conference in New York City that automating much of the work would improve security.

“What we’re in the process of doing — not fast enough — is reducing our system administrators by about 90 percent,” he said.

The remarks came as the agency is facing scrutiny after Snowden, who had been one of about 1,000 system administrators who help run the agency’s networks, leaked classified details about surveillance programmes to the Press.

Before the change, “what we’ve done is we’ve put people in the loop of transferring data, securing networks and doing things that machines are probably better at doing,” Alexander said.

SpaceX adds German satellite network to launch calendar

CAPE CANAVERAL, (Florida), 9 Aug—Privately owned Space Exploration Technologies won a two-flight contract to launch a radar satellite network for Germany, the company announced on Thursday.

German satellite manufacturers OHB-System AG and Astrium GmbH selected the California-based firm, also known as SpaceX, to launch a trio of spacecraft that comprise a radar reconnaissance network for Germany's defence department.

The OHB-System's two smaller radar satellites will ride together aboard a SpaceX Falcon 9 rocket, while Astrium's larger spacecraft will solo on a second Falcon booster. The launches are targeted for 2018 and 2019. The contract award is SpaceX's first for a European government.

"We appreciate their confidence in SpaceX to reliably deliver these satellites to orbit," SpaceX President and Chief Operating Officer Gwynne Shotwell said in a statement. The three-satellite constellation will replace a current OHB-built, five-satellite orbital network.

The new contracts boost SpaceX's launch manifest to more than 50 missions. The company's Falcon 9 rocket so far has flown five times — all successfully — including three missions to launch cargo capsules to the International Space Station for NASA.

The privately owned firm, founded and operated by Internet entrepreneur Elon Musk, also is competing to provide flight services for NASA astronauts to and from the station, a permanently staffed research outpost that flies about 250 miles above Earth.

The company's customers also include the US military, Canada, Thailand, Argentina, Taipei and several commercially owned and operated communication satellite operators including Iridium, Intelsat SA, Orbcomm, Europe's SES, Hong Kong's Asia Satellite Telecommunications

16,000 computers suspected infected with virus to steal bank IDs

TOKYO, 9 Aug — At least 16,000 computer terminals in Japan may be infected with the same type of virus used in a series of on-line bank fraud in the past few years involving stolen user IDs and passwords, an investigative source told Kyodo News on Thursday.

The National Police Agency said it handled around 600 confirmed cases of unauthorized money transfers from 2011 through July this year. Investigators suspect that a single group may be responsible for many of about 400 cases reported this year.

"It is possible that the number of cases will increase," an NPA official in charge of the matter said. The virus, which has been spreading since early this year, is even programmed to steal one-time passwords that are issued by financial institutions for use in a single transaction. Computers may well have been infected after PC owners perused certain websites, according to investigators. After the police authorities analyzed the virus with the help of an anti-virus software company, the investigators found that the stolen IDs and passwords were sent to multiple servers located in the United States and Europe. The authorities identified computer terminals possibly infected by the virus from access records left in some of the servers, the sources said.

The NPA has provided information on affected terminals to Internet service providers, asking them to notify users of possible virus infection and to remove the virus. The perpetrators apparently used the IDs and passwords aggregated in the servers to unlawfully access online bank services, sending money to their bank accounts. — Kyodo News

China Unicom tests 4G network

BEIJING, 9 Aug — China United Network Communications Co Ltd, known as China Unicom, said on Thursday that it has started testing a TD-LTE 4G network, which it will use if the government doesn't allow it to use its favoured FDD-LTE technology in the upcoming 4G licensing process. China's second-biggest mobile operator by subscribers is said to have taken the preemptive action because it expects the government to follow a similar strategy as in its 3G auction, when it first awarded licenses for TD-LTE networks, a technology which is mostly backed by its arch-rival China Mobile Ltd, which has the most subscribers in the country. The government is widely expected to award 4G licenses before the end of the year. And if it licenses TD-LTE networks first, it will give China Mobile a big edge in the 4G market over its competitors. After reporting a 55 percent jump in its first-half profit, Chang Xiaobing, the company's chairman, said investment on TD-LTE technology has already started and testing will begin in major cities.

Funds will come from Hong Kong-listed China Unicom, rather than from its controlling company China United Network Communications Corp Ltd, which previously funded some of

China Unicom's network tests. "I expect Beijing to license TD-LTE first, so we have to prepare," Chang told a news conference in Hong Kong on Thursday. Beijing favors TD-LTE, or Time-Division Long-Term Evolution, because the network's core technologies are developed by Chinese companies. The technology was developed specifically for the Chinese market and is expected to serve a quarter of the global market by 2016. — Xinhua

LG G2 with 5.2-inch full-HD display, 2.26GHz Snapdragon 800 processor unveiled

NEW DELHI, 9 Aug — LG G2 comes with a 5.2-inch full-HD (1080x1920) display impressive 423 pixels-per-inch (PPI). It is powered by Qualcomm's quad-core Snapdragon 800 processor capable of speeds up to 2.26GHz. The device comes with 2GB RAM and offers 16GB and 32GB storage options.

The LG G2 comes with a 13.0-megapixel rear camera with Optical Image Stabilization and a 2.1-megapixel front shooter. LG's latest flagship runs Android Jelly Bean 4.2.2 and is powered by a 3,000mAh battery. LG G2 sports dimensions 138.5 x 70.9 x 8.9mm and will be available in Black and White colour options. next eight weeks starting in South Korea followed by North America, Europe and other key markets.

LG G2 comes with a unique design that features the power buttons and the volume rocker at the back of the phone, below the rear camera, instead of the sides of the phone, as is usually the case. LG believes this will work better on a large phone like the G2. It also comes with bezels as thin as 2.65mm. Commenting on the launch of the G2, Dr Jong-seok Park, President and CEO of the LG Electronics Mobile Communications Company, said, "Our definition of innovation today is technology that truly resonates with consumers. We have always listened to and learned from consumers in pursuit of innovation. We took these insights to new heights in developing LG G2, the most exciting and ambitious mobile phone in our company's history."

LG G2 also comes with some software features like Answer Me, Plug & Pop, Text Link, Slide Aside, and a Guest Mode. Answer Me automatically answers the call after lowering the ringtone when the phone is raised to one's ear.

Plug & Pop recommends options or related features to choose from when the earphone or USB cable is detected. Text Link allows information embedded in text messages to be selected and easily saved in a memo or calendar and searched on a map or the Internet.

Slide Aside enables easier multi-tasking by simply "sliding" open apps off to the side using a three-finger swipe. — PTI

Researchers resurrect 4-billion-year-old fossil protein

WASHINGTON, 9 Aug — Spanish researchers reported on Thursday they had resurrected the structure of 4-billion-year-old proteins in the laboratory. The findings, described on Thursday in the US journal Structure, may offer novel insights into the evolution of proteins on this planet, researchers at the University of Granada said.

Modern proteins exhibit an impressive degree of structural diversity, which has been well characterized, but very little is known about how and when over the course of evolution 3D protein structures arose. "So far, attempts to understand protein structure evolution have been based on the comparison between structures of modern proteins. This is equivalent to trying to understand the evolution of birds by comparing several living birds," senior study author Jose Sanchez-Ruiz of the University of Granada said in a statement.

"But it is most useful to study fossils so that changes over evolutionary time are apparent. Our approach comes as close as possible to 'digging up' fossil protein structures," Sanchez-Ruiz added. In the study, the researchers recreated fossil proteins known as thioredoxins in the laboratory and characterized their features. Thioredoxins were chosen because they are found in organisms from the three domains of life including bacteria, archaea and eukaryotes.

By analyzing their X-ray crystal structures, they found that present-day thioredoxin structures are remarkably similar to those that existed at a time close to the origin of life, even though their amino acid sequences are very different. — Xinhua

Mitsui Fudosan to open major shopping mall in Shanghai in 2017

TOKYO, 9 Aug — Mitsui Fudosan Co will open a commercial complex housing roughly 200 shops, chiefly fashion outlets, and restaurants in Shanghai City's Pudong District in 2017, according to the Japanese real estate developer.

Construction of the planned facility, tentatively named Lalaport Shanghai Jinqiao, will start in December 2014, it said. The planned site is around 7 kilometres from the central Pudong New Area, close to upscale residential areas.

It is the firm's second project of its kind in China following a shopping facility in Ningbo, Zhejiang Province that opened in September 2011, the company said.

GSK plugs into bioelectronics with $50 million venture fund

LONDON, 9 Aug — GlaxoSmithKline raised its bet on using electrical signals in the body to target diseases on Thursday with the launch of a $50 million strategic venture capital fund. Britain's biggest drugmaker hopes to have the first medicine that effectively speaks the electrical "language" of the body ready for approval by the end of this decade. GSK said the new fund's first investment would be a $5 million stake in SetPoint Medical, a California company working on implantable devices to treat inflammatory diseases.

In all, SetPoint has secured $27 million in fresh financing. Aside from GSK, it has also received cash from Boston Scientific, the venture capital arm of Covidien and existing investors. As reported in April, GSK is also offering a $1 million prize to stimulate innovation in the new field, known variously as "bioelectronics" or "electroceuticals". These initiatives represent a long-term gamble on the promise of a novel kind of medicine that uses electrical impulses rather than the chemicals or biological molecules found in today's drugs. GSK believes it is ahead of rivals in the area.

By tapping into electrical signals that form the language of the body's nervous system, scientists hope to address a range of diseases from high blood pressure to breathing problems and, eventually, brain disorders. In the case of SetPoint, the research and development work is focused on new therapies for immune system disorders like rheumatoid arthritis and Crohn's disease. These autoimmune diseases are typically treated with immunosuppressant drugs, while SetPoint uses an implantable pulse generator to stimulate the vagus nerve, which runs from the head to the abdomen, producing a systemic anti-inflammatory effect.

The company presented positive results from a proof-of-concept clinical trial in rheumatoid arthritis last November, and believes its system could provide a more convenient and potentially safer alternative to drugs. The idea of treating serious disease with electrical impulses is not completely new. Large-scale electrical devices have been used for years as heart pacemakers and, more recently, deep brain stimulation has been applied to treat Parkinson's disease, severe depression and certain neurological movement disorders.—Reuters

Android's smartphone marketshare rises to nearly 80 percent

NEW YORK, 9 Aug — Smartphones powered by Google's Android software increased their global market share as iPhones lost ground in the absence of new models being unleashed by Apple, the International Data Corporation reported on Wednesday. Android's share of the smartphone market grew to 79.3 percent in the second quarter while that of iPhone slipped to 13.2 percent from 16.6 percent in the same three-month period last year, according to IDC figures.

"The iOS decline in the second quarter aligns with the cyclical of iPhone," said IDC mobile phone research team manager Ramon Llamas, referring to the software platform on which the Apple handsets are built. "Without a new product launch since the debut of the iPhone 5 nearly a year ago, Apple's market share was vulnerable to product launches from the competition."

Apple is "well positioned" to recapture market share with the release later this year of a new iPhone and the next-generation iOS mobile operating system, according to Llamas. IDC reported that 187 million Android-powered smartphones were shipped in the second quarter of the year as compared to 31.2 million iPhones. Smartphones powered by Microsoft Windows software showed the biggest jump, hitting 3.7-percent of the market in a 77.6 percent rise that "re-enforced" the mobile platform's third-place position, according to IDC.

The gain was driven by Nokia, which released hot new Windows smartphones and accounted for just shy of 82 percent of the 8.7 million Windows phones shipped worldwide during the quarter. "Last quarter we witnessed Windows Phone shipments surpassing BlackBerry and the trend has continued into the second quarter," said IDC mobility tracker program manager Ryan Reith. "Nokia has clearly been the driving force behind the Windows Phone platform, and we expect that to continue." Ailing BlackBerry saw its share of the global smartphone market shrink to 2.9 percent from 4.9 percent in the second quarter last year, IDC reported.

A total of 236.4 million smartphones were shipped during the quarter in a 51.3 percent rise from the 156.2 million shipped in the same period a year earlier, according to IDC. Android retained its crown as the top smartphone platform in the United States in the quarter with 59 percent of the market, the same as the prior quarter, a report released on Tuesday by comScore indicated. California-based Apple remained the most popular smartphone maker in US and its share of that market was up slightly to 39.9 percent from the first three months of this year, according to comScore.

Investigational vaccine proves protective against malaria

WASHINGTON, 9 Aug — An investigational vaccine has been found to offer "complete protection" against malaria infection in healthy adults in an early-stage clinical trial, US researchers reported on Thursday. Although the vaccine, known as PfSPZ Vaccine, can only be administered intravenously, a rare delivery route for vaccines, it does pave the way for broadly applicable malaria prevention, researchers from the US National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) and other organizations said. In the Phase I clinical trial described in the journal Science, volunteers received two to six intravenous doses of PfSPZ Vaccine, which consists of live but weakened sporozoites of the species Plasmodium falciparum, the most deadly of the malaria-causing parasites.

The researchers found that the higher dosages of PfSPZ Vaccine were associated with protection against malaria infection. The vaccine protected all six volunteers who received the highest doses from malaria infection. Of the 15 participants who received higher dosages of the vaccine, only three became infected, compared to 16 of 17 participants in the lower dosage group who became infected. Among the 12 participants who received no vaccine, 11 participants became infected after mosquito challenge. "In this trial, we showed in principle that sporozoites can be developed into a malaria vaccine that confers high levels of protection," Robert Seder, chief of the Cellular Immunology Section of the NIAID Vaccine

Research Centre and principal investigator of the trial, said in a statement.

"These trial results are a promising first step in generating high-level protection against malaria, and they allow for future studies to optimize the dose, schedule and delivery route of the candidate vaccine," Seder added. "The researchers said that a number of follow-up studies are planned, including research to evaluate the vaccine's different dose schedules, possible protection against other Plasmodium strains and the durability of protection."

The researchers may also evaluate whether higher doses administered subcutaneously or intradermally provide the same level of protection as that found in this study.—Xinhua

Flu vaccine not tied to pregnancy complications

NEW YORK, 9 Aug — Pregnant women who get flu shots are at no greater risk for complications like high blood pressure, urinary tract infection or gestational diabetes, according to a new US study. The results are not surprising in light of previous research, said lead author Dr Elyse Kharbanda of Health Partners Institute for Education and Research in Minneapolis, Minnesota. "Studies of several thousand pregnant women in scientific literature have assessed the safety of using the flu vaccine during pregnancy," Kharbanda told Reuters Health. "These studies have shown no evidence of harm to pregnant women, to the unborn child, or to newborns of vaccinated women."

Routine monitoring of adverse events by the US Food and Drug Administration and Centres for Disease Control and Prevention also have not raised safety concerns, she noted. Doctors already recommend that pregnant women get the shot, but not all women agree. Surveys indicate that many women are unsure of the safety of the vaccine despite evidence there are no dangers. During the 2010-2011 US flu season, for example, only about half of pregnant women reported getting a flu vaccine, Kharbanda and her colleagues point out in their report, published in the journal Obstetrics and Gynecology.

For the new study, they looked back at data on

74,000 women who had received a flu shot while pregnant, in any trimester, and compared them to 300,000 women who were similar in age, pregnancy start dates and other characteristics but had not received the shot. Vaccinated women were more likely to have health problems, like high blood pressure or diabetes, before becoming pregnant, they found, and more likely to be hospitalized before and after the shot than the other women.—Reuters

Assad shown unharmed after Syria rebels report attack

AMMAN, 9 Aug — Syrian rebels said on Thursday they targeted President Bashar al-Assad's motorcade heading to a Damascus mosque to mark the Muslim holiday of Eid al-Fitr, but state television showed him unharmed and the government denied he had been attacked. The Tahrir al-Sham rebel brigade, a unit of the Free Syrian Army, said it fired several artillery shells towards Assad's convoy in the heart of the capital and that at least some hit their target.

If confirmed, the attack would be one of the most direct against Assad in two years of conflict which have pitched mainly Sunni Muslim rebels against the Alawite president. Rebels have targeted Assad's residences in Damascus and a bombing in the capital last year killed four of his inner circle, but there have been no reports of Assad himself coming under fire.

Video footage distributed by the Tahrir al-Sham rebels showed smoke rising from what it said was the Malki District, where Assad and his close aides have homes. Other activists also reported rocket fire into the area. Syria's government denied the reports. "The news is wholly untrue," Information Minister Omran Zoabi said.

Firas al-Bitar, head of the Tahrir al-Sham brigade, said his fighters had carried out reconnaissance of the route of Assad's motorcade and fired 120 mm artillery towards the president's convoy early on Thursday.

"The attack rattled the regime, even if Assad was not hit," he told Reuters from an undisclosed location in the capital. "There were two motorcades, one containing Assad and a decoy. We targeted the correct one." Bitar's brigade operates mainly in the Ghouta region on the eastern outskirts of the capital. Another official in Tahrir al-Sham said Assad's forces fired rockets and artillery "like rain" on the region in response to the reported attack.

Following the statement, Syrian state television showed footage of Assad praying alongside ministers and other top officials. It said the footage was from Thursday's Eid prayers at the Anas bin Malek Mosque in Malki. Assad appeared unharmed and smiled at the worshippers as he entered the mosque.

Islam Alloush of the Liwa al-Islam, another rebel brigade, told Reuters earlier on Thursday that rebels fired rockets which struck Assad's motorcade.

"Assad was not hit but the information we have based from sources within the regime is that there were casualties within his entourage," Alloush said.

UN chief stresses need to seek political solution to Syrian conflict

UNITED NATIONS, 9 Aug—UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon on Thursday met with Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov and "underscored the need to find a political solution to the conflict" in Syria, UN spokesman Martin Nesirky told reporters here.

The secretary-general made the remarks when having a working dinner with the visiting Russian foreign minister "to discuss the conflict in Syria, including the escalating humanitarian crisis and the disconcerting rise in sectarian violence," Nesirky said in a readout to the Press here.

"The Secretary General underscored the need to find a political solution to the conflict and to urgently renew momentum behind the Geneva Conference on Syria," the spokesman said.

Lavrov made a stopover in New York on Thursday before his Friday talks with his US counterpart John Kerry on the Syrian issue, among others, in Washington.

Merkel challenger vows to rein in banks, hike taxes on wealthy

Social Democratic party (SPD) top candidate Peer Steinbrueck laughs before his speech during an election campaign in Hamburg on 8 Aug, 2013.—REUTERS

HAMBURG, 9 Aug — Launching the final phase of his long-shot campaign to oust German Chancellor Angela Merkel, leftist challenger Peer Steinbrueck called on Thursday for higher taxes on the wealthy and tighter rules for "gambling" bankers.

Analysts and pollsters see no chance of Steinbrueck's Social Democrats (SPD) catching Merkel's conservatives, who have a 15 point lead in opinion polls six weeks before the 22 September election.

But Steinbrueck is hoping he and his Greens allies, who together are polling around 38 percent, can catch Merkel's centre-right alliance, currently on 45 percent, or at the very least deny them a parliamentary majority. To do that, he knows he needs to lure back many of the 10 million, mostly ordinary working class voters, who abandoned the SPD since 1998, disillusioned with its pro-business economic policies that squeezed low incomes.

So Steinbrueck, who was finance minister in Merkel's "grand coalition" government between 2005 and 2009, has lurched to the left in the campaign.

On Thursday, he held a townhall-style meeting in the northern port city of Hamburg. Under a giant tent, a couple thousand people got the chance to ask the 66-year-old candidate questions, a format the tightly-controlled Merkel campaign is expected to avoid.

"I'm not going to hold a long boring hour-long speech up on a stage talking down to you and then leave without anyone getting the chance to ask questions," Steinbrueck said at the first of 28 "Straight Talk" rallies before the vote. His feisty attacks on Merkel as a "do-nothing" leader who has "lulled the country asleep" went down especially well.—Reuters

Japan, US officials discuss preventive steps after helicopter crash

TOKYO, 9 Aug — Japanese and US government officials met on Thursday in Tokyo to discuss steps to prevent a recurrence of the fatal crash of an HH-60 helicopter in Okinawa that forced the US military to suspend flights by other choppers of the same type.

The US delegation was led by Peter Lavoy, acting assistant secretary of defense for Asian and Pacific security affairs, while Koji Tomita, head of the North American Affairs Bureau in Japan's Foreign Ministry, and Hideshi Tokuchi, director general of the Defence Ministry's Policy Bureau, represented the Japanese side.

"We had a very good meeting today," Lavoy told reporters after the meeting but did not elaborate.

At the closed-door meeting, officials from Japan's foreign and defence ministries are believed to have asked the US side to put safety first as the accident took place near a residential area.

The meeting at the director-general level came as Tokyo urged Washington to share information about why the crash happened, and to put preventive measures in place amid local concerns about US military operations in Okinawa, home to the bulk of US bases.

"We will continue to ask the US side to place priority on safety, and reduce base-hosting burdens on Okinawa," Japanese Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida said at a Press conference before the meeting.

The US military has been looking into the case and told the Defence Ministry it will question the surviving three crew members of the HH-60 helicopter about the situation leading to the crash.

Tokyo and Washington had originally planned to hold a regular meeting of the US-Japan Joint Committee, a framework to discuss issues related to US bases in Japan.—Reuters

British warship to visit Gibraltar amid border row with Spain

LONDON, 9 Aug — A British navy warship will sail to Britain's overseas territory of Gibraltar in the coming weeks, coinciding with a diplomatic row with neighbouring Spain, although officials said on Thursday the trip was a routine and long-planned visit.

A centuries-old conflict over the British outpost boiled over in late July when boats from Gibraltar dumped concrete blocks into the sea to make a reef, and Spain created long delays at the border days later, with lengthy car checks.

Three British navy vessels, including the frigate HMS Westminster, will visit the outpost as part of an annual deployment known as "Cougar", Britain's Ministry of Defence (MOD) said.

"The forthcoming visit by ships making up Cougar 13, including HMS Westminster and the Royal Fleet Auxiliary ships Lyme Bay and Mounts Bay, are business as usual," an MOD statement said.

An MOD spokesman stressed the visit was not related to the border issues and said he was unable to confirm exactly when the ships would arrive at Gibraltar. Spain's foreign ministry also called the visit "routine" and said the British government had asked for permission to stop over in Rota, southwestern Spain, where the Mediterranean country has a naval station.

"They asked for permission for the operation and in our relationship as allies, we granted it," a Spanish foreign ministry spokesman said.

British Prime Minister David Cameron and his Spanish counterpart Mariano Rajoy spoke on Wednesday and agreed to try and calm tempers over the disputed territory, though both sides were reluctant to back down on their positions.

Balance of power

Over two and a half years into his administration, the President has repeated his assurance for introduction of good governance and clean government, which is instrumental in democratization process Myanmar is undergoing with great strides in her bid to stand back on the international stage with her head held high after decades of isolation and underdevelopment.

Despite the recent gains made toward the goal of a democratic nation, the public perception of the government's performance has not altered at all with a great deal of speculation about the apparent influence of executive branch over judicial branch, raising question over the practice of checks and balances between the three estates.

It is a welcome move that the Parliament has approved the anti-corruption bill, signed into law by the President who described the law as a result of the joint efforts of the executive and legislative branches toward the common goal of elimination of bribery and corruption, proving the legislature is not the rubber stamp parliament.

However, enactment of laws is still nothing unless and until their effectiveness is achieved, in other words, laws without effective and proper enforcement is nothing but words in black and white. Each and every law has two aspects, described as spirit of the law and letter of the law. It is a long time some and certain people have abused the letter of law for personal gains, leading to a constant decline in public trust in judicial system and police force which are often dubbed "corrupt bureaucracy."

It is the law enforcement personnel who are assigned and obliged to assure law and order and advance the rule of law. When even law enforcement personnel can't be trusted, one can imagine extent of the problem, which suggests revival of public confidence is a must, not only in legal but in administrative and political institutions. Here comes the role of the parliament, which is made of people's representatives, to serve as the balance of power to grease the wheel of democratization process.

While the two branches are directing their ambitious efforts towards ending corruption, one point needs to be considered is the large part of the public service delivery system is overstretched and under-resourced, something often takes the role of breeding ground for corruption and collusion.

reforms and private sector reforms—as a strategic scheme in the transition. These reforms reflect desires of the people. The desires of the people are the desires and objectives of the government as well.

To ensure tangible results in political, economic and social reforms among four reforms, the government mechanism needs to perform well. The performance of the private sector is also necessary as 90 percent of the entire economy is under private ownership.

It is natural, according to international experiences of reforms, that the government would face barriers and challenges from inside and outside. Committed to ensuring the good governance and clean government, the government has to retire and transfer some senior government officials including Union ministers, deputy ministers and directors-general and take other actions against them due to poor performance, lack of transparency, lack of responsibility and accountability in dealing with the public, non-compliance with rules and regulations and corruption by some government departments and regional administration bodies over the past 30 months.

The Union ministers and the deputy ministers are cabinet members and ones responsible to translate the objectives and duties of the government into reality through cooperation and coordination. Some personnel still have a strong hand on the authority of the ministry they are responsible and fail to cooperate with other ministries. They also fail to decentralize the authority to regions and states and continue to adopt centralization. I would like to urge you to change your mindset to make the works being implemented by your ministries more effective. Only then, would you become the good civil servants who could best serve the public.

In the second 30 years we would give high priorities to fulfilling the following basic and socio-economic needs of the people:-

- Electricity supply;
- Adequate drinking and irrigation water and
- small and medium enterprises and industrial development for creating more job opportunities.

These tasks would be carried out by the Union ministers and the region/state governments for ensuring more profits to the people.

The driving forces for quick win are as follows:-

- Boosting the agricultural industry on which the majority of population rely and poverty reduction by increasing incomes of the farmers;
- Tourism industry as a catalyst for rapid economic development;
- Setting trade and investment targets which are engines for economic development.

The capital investment and technology would make the development of the country and the socio-economic development of the people possible.

The Ministry of Finance, the Central Bank and related organizations need to form special sector-wise and region-wise task forces and make field trips to coordinate banking and micro-financing development and monetary development and stability to ensure foreign and domestic investment flows.

For ensuring smooth and swift flow of not only banking services, trade and investment but also the whole government and private mechanism, the priority is to be given to communications and information technology sector through investments and technological transfer. The President urged the Telecommunications and Information Technology Ministry to take the leading role in realization of e-government within a year for introduction of ASEAN Single Window, in cooperation with all line departments.

It is the lack of capital and technology that has made the country to lag behind in development. Like all developed countries attempt to draw capital and technology for national development inviting foreign investments, Myanmar which is behind other countries in terms of development is to strive to attract investment to create jobs for citizens. Infrastructural development efforts are a must as local and foreign investment would increase only when there are enough infrastructures including electric power.

Road, sea, air transport services and infrastructure are to be improved to ensure smoothness in trade and investment and decline in transaction costs for market competitiveness not only in ASEAN Free Trade Area but also in international market.

Human resources development works are to be carried out region-wise and sector-wise at the same time both for the present and the future in response to the intellectual capital demand in respective business models for economic development drive. Special attention is to be placed on sorting out the priorities to ensure effectiveness of the increased expenditure on health care service. The education and health sectors need radical reforms to help the future generation of the entire nation keep pace with changing global situations and to keep abreast of international peers.

It would be difficult to fulfill the socio-economic requirements of the people if the Union ministries and region/state governments still stick to old procedures in undertaking four-point reform plan and above-mentioned prioritized tasks within the remaining 30 months of its term. Grim determination and strenuous endeavours plus collaborative efforts in spirit of coordination and cooperation are a must to reach this goal.

Therefore, the national reform leading committee, led by the President has been formed separately to direct efforts on reform programme instead of tasking the project commission with designing and guiding reform plans in the past.

Union ministries and region/state governments are urged to form delivery unit/task forces and working groups to implement the policies on the ground through cooperation and coordination. In so doing, enough time is to be taken in sketching plans and making decision rather than holding coordination meeting for a day. They are urged to complete the prioritized tasks to bring positive results to the people, cooperating closely with local and foreign academicians, private organizations, and civil society organizations, listening to the wishes and voices of people, in the remaining 30 months.

Union ministers, region/state chief ministers are to give extra attention to improve the effectiveness of delivery units/task forces, which are required to coordinate the works for results sector-wise activities as prioritized tasks and areas for public interests must be sorted out through coordination and

implemented manpower and huge expenses like allocated budget, foreign loans and assistance and assistance rather than implementing the separate action plans of respective Union ministries and region/state governments.

In allocating budget, coordination is to be made to grant increased budget shares for region and states which are obliged to bring about socio-economic development of people on the ground depending on their unique conditions and nature of the work to be done.

The profitability of government enterprises must be reviewed for improvement of government administrative mechanism and enterprises which have plan for corporatization and privatization are to submit their financial plans to the coming Financial Commission Meeting in December.

In the national economic development drive, measures must be taken to assure regional security, peace and stability and the rule of law. The region/state governments are to directly command township security forces of Myanmar Police Force as it is important to preemptive measures in controlling the argument and crowd violence learning from the past conflicts. The Home Affairs Ministry is to reinforce the security forces with the police force under its direct control when the township police force alone is not capable of handling the conflict.

Following points must be followed to smooth administrative matters between region/state governments:—

- (1) The region/state governments are to manage, direct, supervise and check the government departments in their municipal regions instead of Union ministries directly controlling them;
- (2) The region/state governments are to compile civil servants performance evaluation report and submit to Union government and present copies to Union ministries for efficiency of departmental personnel and staff and promotion and transfer to be decided on performance evaluation report;

- (3) The Education Ministry is not to directly appoint primary education level teachers and such appointments are to be made by region/state governments;
- (4) The Health Ministry is to continue training nurses and midwives at central level but to make coordination with region/state governments in assigning them to their home regions; the region/state governments to appoint medical staff in remote regions through vacancy announcement in newspapers as the direct appointment by the Health Ministry

- (5) Out of the business which need direct permission of Union ministries, businesses region/state government can permit are to be allowed to local people to engage in, to create jobs for them;

In his advice to Region/State Chief ministers, he said it needs to train those from Township Development Supporting Committees which are formed with the Township Management Committee and townselders and the Township Development Affairs Committees in order that they can deal with townships' prioritized works.

Township-level work is a basic level for the development of Region/State. It needs to have exact facts and figures on the ground so as to effectively implement the tasks for individual income, drinking water supply, power supply, unemployment rate, creation of job opportunity, town and village development plans and collecting of facts and figures of sizes of towns and villages and increasing population and the homeless and the farmers without own farmlands. He called for swift implementation of farmland registration and issuance of farmland work permits, bringing about socio-economic development of the farmers.

He said the respective township committees need to invite Hluttaw representatives to their meetings in order to make coordination with them on submitting people's prioritized needs to the administrative bodies ranging from township levels to the Hluttaws.

He continued that special emphasizes should be placed on full implementation of people-centered development tasks for ensuring the transparency of government's administrative mechanism, effective implementation of people's voices and desires, fight against corruption and bribery, peace and tranquility and regional development.

He said in his conclusion speech that the countries that did not suffer the consequences of economic sanctions had to take 15-20 years to hit their goals. According to report by the McKinsey Global Institute at the World Economic Forum, the size of Myanmar's economy could reach 200 billion USD by 2030 if Myanmar doubles its production. He called for implementation of prioritized sectors in every township that can double the production.

Priority should be given to promoting livelihoods of farmers, workers, blue-collar workers and the poor, creation of job opportunities and development of farm sector and Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs). He urged those present to make all-out efforts for to bring about tangible results in the remaining 30 months of its reign.

L&F Ministry donates feedstuff, medicine to flood victims of Bilin Township

BILIN, 9 Aug—Ministry of Livestock and Fisheries donated feedstuff and animal medicines for animals from flood victim families in Bilin Township of Mon State.

The donation ceremony was held at the hall of Township General Administration Department at 2 pm on 5 August.

Present on the occasion were Mon State Minister for Agriculture and Livestock Breeding U Myo

Nyunt, Director Dr Than Naing Tun of Livestock Breeding and Veterinary Department, heads of Mon State, Thaton District and Bilin Township LBVDs, the township administrator, departmental officials and flood victims.

Floods destroy some paddy fields

MONGPHYAT, 9 Aug—Due to torrential rains on 4 and 5 August, Mehok Creek and Ponpha Creek overflowed in Monghe Village-tract in Mongphyat Township.

The flood hit 100.35 acres of paddy plantations in the township.

After subsiding the water level on 6 August, 29.40 acres of farmlands owned by 13 farmers were covered with sand in Hokhant, Shekhin, Namhweyun and Namhwelon villages.

On 7 August, Township Administrator U Zaw Myo Nyunt, Head of Township Agriculture Department U Than Htut Lwin and Assistant Head of Township Settlement and Land Records Department U Kaung Myat Min made field trips to the villages for cultivation of paddy in the water-subsidized farmlands.

BOJ maintains ultraeasy monetary policy, keeps economic assessment

Bank of Japan Governor Haruhiko Kuroda enters the BOJ head office in Tokyo for a policy board meeting on 8 Aug, 2013.
KYODO NEWS

TOKYO, 9 Aug—The Bank of Japan on Thursday maintained its ultraloose monetary policy introduced in April and left unchanged its assessment of the national economy that it is “starting to recover moderately,” after upgrading the view for seven consecutive months.

On Japan’s consumer prices that turned higher in June for the first time in one year and two months, the central bank said the size of the year-on-year increase in the index is likely to expand gradually. The BOJ is aiming to achieve an inflation target of 2 percent in about two years.

“Inflation expectations appear to be rising on the whole,” the BOJ said in a statement, revising its previous expression that some indicators suggest a rise in inflation expectations.

In June, the consumer price index excluding fresh food marked a 0.4 percent increase from a year earlier on higher energy prices amid a weaker yen. Some other economic data point to Japan’s economic recovery, with department store sales increasing 7.2 percent in June from a year earlier.

The jobless rate improved to 3.9 percent in June, falling below 4 percent for the first time in four years and eight months. But the BOJ apparently refrained from upgrading its economic assessment as a recovery in basic wages remains sluggish despite resilience in consumer spending, while a pickup in corporate investment seemed not strong enough to upgrade the view.

The prospects for overseas economies remained uncertain due to slowing growth in China and other emerging economies as well as possible negative impact stemming from possible tapering of the US Federal Reserve’s quantitative easing measures.

“With regard to the outlook, Japan’s economy is expected to recover moderately on the back of the resilience in domestic demand and the pickup in overseas economies,” the BOJ said.

“Regarding risks, there remains a high degree of uncertainty concerning Japan’s economy, including the prospects for the European debt problem, developments in emerging and commodity-exporting economies, and the pace of recovery in the US economy,” it said.—Kyodo News

Taipei nuclear power plant may be leaking radioactive water

TAIPEI, 9 Aug—Storage pools for spent fuel rods at Taipei’s First Nuclear Power Plant located in the densely populated north of the island may be leaking radioactive water, the island’s government watchdog said on Thursday.

The Control Yuan said in a report that the storage pools for plant’s two reactors in Chinshan, New Taipei City, may have been leaking since 2009.

The operator of the facility, Taipei Power Co, has been unable to determine the cause of the leakage, which the Control Yuan said has increased over the years.

The report quoted Chen Yi-pin, Director of the Atomic Energy Council’s Department of Nuclear Regulation, as saying that he could not be sure whether the water is coming from the storage pools, but neither could he rule out such a possibility.

Taipower spokesman Chai Fu-feng told Kyodo News on Thursday that the water collected in the reservoir next to the storage pools of spent fuel rod pools does not pose any threat as it has been recycled back to the storage pools.

Chai said the water did not come from the storage pools but instead may have come from condensation or water used for cleaning up the floor.

The Control Yuan also censured Taipower in the report for failing to complete the interim dry storage facilities for spent fuel rods at the reactor site of the No. 1 and No 2 nuclear power plants.

Taipower had originally planned to complete the above-ground facilities by 2000 and 2001, respectively.

Taipei has three operational nuclear power plants and six reactors, while a fourth one is still under construction.

Reactor fuel rods need to be replaced with fresh ones every 18 months. Discharged fuel assemblies must be continually cooled in water pools for many years after they are no longer useful for generating electricity.—Kyodo News

Singapore’s PM raised growth forecast

SINGAPORE, 9 Aug—Singapore’s Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong said on Thursday that the country’s economic growth is expected to be between 2.5 percent and 3.5 percent this year, higher than the previous growth forecast of 1 percent to 3 percent.

In the first half of 2013, the economy grew by 2 percent.

Besides revealing the revised forecast in his national day message, Lee also touched on how the government has been responding to the long-term and short-term challenges that had featured most prominently since the general election in 2011.

The queues for public housing flats, built and sold by the Housing and Development Board, have been cleared and the build-to-order flat prices have stabilized, he said.

In terms of public transport, Lee said more buses have been added and Singapore is trying out free early morning rides into the city on its train network that carries a significant part of the commuters.—Xinhua

ASEAN cooperation important pillar in Vietnam’s foreign policy

HANOI, 9 Aug—Vietnam’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs held a ceremony to hoist the flags of Vietnam and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) here on Thursday to mark the 46th founding anniversary of ASEAN and 18th anniversary of Vietnam’s admission to the organization, local Press reported.

Participants to the event included heads of foreign diplomatic missions from ASEAN member countries and heads of the Vietnamese ministries, reported state-run Vietnam News Agency.

Since the first five countries signing the Bangkok Declaration to set up the association in August 1967, ASEAN has now encompassed 10 countries in the Southeast Asian region, enjoying increasing consensus, close connection and strong cooperation for mutual development.

Solidarity and cooperation for mutual development have always been the main trend in ASEAN throughout its 46-year existence, which closely connects its member countries.

Vietnamese Foreign Minister Pham Binh Minh has affirmed that ASEAN solidarity and consensus has been clearly demonstrated, especially when dealing with sensitive issues and priorities during the final stage of the formation of the ASEAN Community by 2015.

During its 18-year journey with the ASEAN after joining the association on 28 July, 1995, Vietnam has actively, positively and responsibly participated in the association’s activities, the reports said.

ASEAN cooperation will be an important pillar in Vietnam’s foreign policy of independence, self-reliance, diversification, multilateralization and active regional and international integration, it added.—Xinhua

Narita Airport accommodates overnight travellers for early flights

CHIBA, 9 Aug—Narita International Airport, which serves Tokyo, has been accommodating an increasing number of travellers staying overnight to catch early morning flights run by budget airlines that inaugurated domestic services a year ago.

Narita International Airport Corp (NAA), the airport operator, used to ban overnight stays by passengers inside the airport for security reasons but started allowing them in designated areas in Terminal 2 this spring and even opened a convenience store in July that remains open 24 hours a day for travellers.

NAA says that as many as 150 passengers stayed overnight at the airport on some days and it expects more people to do so in the future.

In late July, a group of young people travelling on budget airlines were sitting before dawn on benches inside the Terminal 2 building. “Early morning flights are very convenient because

I can make better use of the time on the day I travel,” said a 19-year-old male college student flying to Kagoshima Prefecture in southwestern Japan.

Early morning flights started serving the airport in July to August last year with the launches of Jetstar Japan and AirAsia Japan services. They have flights to Sapporo and other destinations just after the curfew-bound airport opens at 6:00 am.

The airport operator has also lobbied bus companies to increase the number of services from central Tokyo to arrive at the airport by 6:00 am.

For Narita, which is in growing competition with Haneda airport located closer to central Tokyo, budget carriers are seen as the trump card for passenger growth.

Takeshi Arakawa, 57, an NAA executive, said, “In order to become the airport of choice, we want to continue indirectly supporting budget airline travellers.”

Leonardo DiCaprio to play a Viking in King Harald

The Warner Bros project will also allow Leonardo to produce alongside his Appian Way partner Jennifer Davisson Killoran.

LONDON, 9 Aug—Vacancy screenwriter Mark L Smith has written a film in which Leonardo DiCaprio will be seen playing Viking conqueror Harald Hardrada.

The 38-year-old has been put forward to portray Harald Hardrada, the 11th century conqueror hailed by some historians as the last great Viking king, reported Deadline.

Warner Bros has made a pre-emptive acquisition of the project, which would also allow DiCaprio to produce alongside his Appian Way partner Jennifer Davisson Killoran.

The movie, speculatively titled King Harald, is being billed as Braveheart-style story.

Harald ruled Norway for 20 years, but his ruthless quest for power led to his exile in Russia before he eventually returned in triumph.

History buff DiCaprio is fascinated by the Vikings and previously wanted to star in a film about Viking warriors that Mel Gibson was supposed direct.

The 2009 film, spearheaded by The Departed producer Graham King, was expected to be a violent and awe-inspiring story, but never made it to the big screen.—PTI

Harrison Ford on flying and new film 'Paranoia'

Actor Harrison Ford

LOS ANGELES, 9 Aug—After five decades of playing iconic characters — swinging a whip as Indiana Jones, saving Luke Skywalker as Han Solo, escaping from prison as a fugitive — Harrison Ford shows no signs of slowing down.

Ford, 71, has had an active year. After starring in the Jackie Robinson biopic "42" this spring, the actor now plays a tech billionaire in the thriller "Paranoia," due out Friday.

The actor will also star in the big-screen adaptation of Orson Scott Card's novel "Ender's Game," and rumours persist that he may be back as Han Solo in JJ. Abrams' new "Star Wars" reboot.

Ford spoke to Reuters about his film projects, his love of flying and why social media is just not his thing.

Q: At this point in your career, you've probably played just about every type of role. What drew you to "Paranoia" and what keeps you going?

A: This was a character that I hadn't played before and I enjoy working. I'm not good at sitting still. For me it's the intellectual exercise. The real fun comes in solving problems - massaging a line into shape, making the rhythm of a scene work, getting the right blocking so it feels natural and easy. When I don't get to do it, I feel kind of edgy.

Q: You might be participating in the new "Star Wars" film. Will it be an original movie?

A: I'll let you be the judge of that. Whether I'm involved or not, I'll make judgments about it if I'm involved. I'll try to do the best job I can. Certainly there are people that are interested in seeing what JJ. Abrams, out of his experience and understanding, might bring to the table.

Q: Are you?

A: Maybe.

Q: If you were simply a fan of the franchise, a viewer of the films, would you like to see Harrison Ford back?

A: I'm not simply a viewer. I'm not. I work here. I know how the sausage is made.

Q: In November, you star in "Ender's Game." Your character mentors a child who is training to be a military specialist and fight future alien invasions. Were you familiar with the book?

A: I was unaware of the book until the script came along and I was asked to be involved. The book was written 28 years ago and is remarkably pressing in terms of the things that are part of modern warfare. Also the questions of moral responsibility for military leadership, the questions involving young people in warfare, manipulating children possibly for the good of mankind — that's pretty heady stuff.

Q: Do you have any thoughts about those things as they relate to today's world news?

A: I'm real interested in what's going on in the world. I have personal feelings and opinions, but it's not the opinions that drive my participation. I participate in things because I have an emotional recognition in the scenes that I'm reading about that's beyond subject and is about human behaviour.

Q: You're a pilot. What do you love about flying?

A: Challenge. Freedom. Responsibility. I'm always learning a new airplane and a new situation. I enjoy perfecting and maintaining those skills. It's just something different to my day job and I love being up in the air and seeing the world in three dimensions. It's a different kind of perspective. I love flying out in the backcountry, in the desert, in nature. It really refreshes me.

Q: Do you engage in social media at all?

A: No, I don't want to put myself out there that way. I also don't want to be distracted from my real life. I don't want to have a virtual life. I want to invest in my actual life.—Reuters

Murray shocked by Gulbis in Montreal

MONTREAL, 9 Aug—Andy Murray's US Open preparations suffered a setback when he was upset 6-4, 6-3 by an inspired Ernests Gulbis in the third round of the Rogers Cup on Thursday.

Playing just his second match since his Wimbledon triumph, Murray surrendered in less than 90 minutes to the Latvian world number 38, who produced some breathtaking shots on the Montreal hardcourt.

The loss leaves Briton Murray with only the Cincinnati Masters to fine-tune his game before the defence of his US Open title, having enjoyed a long lay-off in the wake of his second grand slam crown.

"The goal is to try and peak at the US Open," Murray told reporters. "But to do that you need to make sure you prepare yourself well and obviously I would have liked to have done better here."

Gulbis will now face Canadian Milos Raonic in the quarter-finals.

Rafa Nadal, also back in action for the first time since Wimbledon, was given a tough workout by Poland's Jerzy Janowicz but survived to win 7-6, 6-4.

Janowicz served for the set and led 3-0 in the second but was unable to capitalise on his chances.

"It was a very good victory against a very difficult opponent," Nadal told reporters.

"He played a little up and down but I'm pleased with the way I played ... It's a great victory for me."

Nadal's next opponent is Australian qualifier Marinko Matosevic, who celebrated his 28th birthday with a 7-6(7), 6-7(10), 6-3 victory over Benoit Paire of France.

World number one Novak Djokovic had to come from a set down to beat a free-spirited Denis Istomin under the centre court lights.

The Serbian was out of sorts at the beginning of his second match as Istomin went for his shots and found the lines with some scintillating tennis.

Djokovic, however, recovered and produced some of his own magic in the second set before he celebrated a hard fought 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 victory by thrilling the late night crowd with another dancing routine on the centre court, this time wearing a 1970s styled wig.

Djokovic's quarter-final opponent will be French number one Richard Gasquet, who similarly staged a comeback to send Japan's Kei Nishikori home.

Canada's challenge in the tournament reached heights not seen by the locals in over 20 years when 11th seed Raonic joined his 71st ranked compatriot, wildcard Vasek Pospisil, in the last eight.

Raonic ended Del Potro's impressive recent run with a 7-5, 6-4 victory while Pospisil chalked up his first ever win over a top 10 player when he held his nerve in a thrilling deciding tiebreak to shock Czech fifth seed Tomas Berdych.

Pospisil had already beaten in-form American John Isner and another Czech in Radek Stepanek to reach the third round.

He will meet another experienced campaigner, Russia's resurgent former world number three Nikolay Davydenko, in his debut Masters series quarter-final.

Furyk and Scott share Oak Hill lead, Tiger toils

Jim Furyk of the US looks at his putt on the sixth green during the first round of the 2013 PGA Championship golf tournament at Oak Hill Country Club in Rochester, New York on 8 Aug, 2013.—REUTERS

ROCHESTER, (New York), 9 Aug—Jim Furyk and Adam Scott took advantage of rain-softened conditions to surge into a tie for the PGA Championship lead on Thursday as Tiger Woods double-bogeyed his final hole to finish six strokes adrift.

American Furyk, whose only major victory came at the 2003 US Open, fired a five-under-par 65 to set the early pace on a mainly sunny day at Oak Hill Country Club, before being caught at the top in the early evening by Masters champion Scott.

Scott surged into contention with a sizzling run of five consecutive birdies from the par-five fourth on a receptive East Course ripe for plundering but his momentum was halted by a weather delay of 70 minutes due to the threat of lightning.

After returning to the course, Australian Scott also birdied the par-four 14th to briefly snatch the outright lead at six under before bogeying the 16th to rejoin Furyk in a tie at the top.

"It was a dream start after kind of a nervous first couple of holes," Scott said of his red-hot outward nine of five-under 30. "Probably the best (birdie) run I've ever had and I just hit really nice shots and didn't leave myself too much work.

"And then after playing so well, I was starting to feel it slip coming in on the last three holes. To make one on 18 and get something out of the round that I felt could have been special was a nice feeling. I did play very well today."

Scott, who led last month's British Open by a shot with seven holes to play before a run of four straight bogeys dropped him back into a tie for third, remained level with Furyk by sinking a 15-foot par putt on the final hole.—Reuters

Serena avenges Venus loss to reach quarters-finals

TORONTO, 9 Aug—Top seed Serena Williams avenged her older sister's defeat by Kirsten Flipkens with a 6-0, 6-3 pounding of the Belgian to move into the quarter-finals of the Rogers Cup on Thursday.

Flipkens put down Venus Williams in three sets in the first round as Serena watched from the stands, but the 13th seed struggled for rhythm in the face of the 31-year-old's monster serve and fierce returning.

Serena Williams of the US hits a return to Kirsten Flipkens of Belgium during their women's tennis match at day four of the Rogers Cup tennis tournament in Toronto, on 8 Aug, 2013.—REUTERS

"I definitely thought about Venus, and I thought what a good comeback Kirsten had, so I thought, 'I'm not going to get overconfident,'" Williams, who next faces Slovakia's Magdalena Rybarikova, told reporters.

"She's obviously a really good player, so I was just trying to stay focused as well as intense."

Surprise Wimbledon champion and seventh seed Marion Bartoli suffered a blow before the US Open, retiring when trailing 7-6, 1-0 to Rybarikova.

Bartoli said she felt pain while serving and hitting backhands and thought she had suffered an abdominal injury to her right side.

"It took me so much energy to win my first grand slam that at some point I will have a kind of low, and it's normal," she said.

It was smooth sailing for most of the seeds, however, with Pole Agnieszka Radwanska and China's Li Na advancing, but tempers frayed during fifth seed Sara Errani's tight 7-5, 7-6 defeat of Frenchwoman Alize Cornet.

Italian Errani took exception to her opponent encouraging herself in Spanish rather than French and let Cornet know about it.

"I just said to her, 'why are you saying 'Vamos' and not 'allez?'" Errani said. "Normally she says 'allez,' so I thought, why you say 'Vamos?'"

Luis Suarez

Selling Suarez to Arsenal 'ludicrous'—Liverpool owner

LONDON, 9 Aug—Liverpool owner John W Henry has ruled out selling unsettled striker Luis Suarez, adding that to let him go to Premier League rivals Arsenal would be "ludicrous".

Uruguayan Suarez, who scored 29 goals in all competitions last season, is desperate to play in the Champions League and insisting Liverpool stand by what he says was a commitment to let him leave if they failed to qualify.

Arsenal have had two offers for the 26-year-old forward turned down and Henry made it clear that any further bids from the North London club, or elsewhere, would be similarly rebuffed.

The American, whose reaction to Arsenal's second bid was to tweet, "What do you think they're smoking over there at Emirates?", said he was "unequivocal" that Suarez would not be leaving.

"We are not going to sell Luis," Henry, who also owns Major League Baseball's Boston Red Sox, told British newspapers.

"For all the top clubs it's extremely important (not to sell to a rival) but especially for Liverpool because we're not in Europe this year and have not been in the Champions League for a while.

"To sell to a rival for those positions, or one of them, would be ludicrous. Liverpool needs to be playing in Europe. It needs to be playing in the Champions League. That's what Liverpool football club is about."

Henry said offers from clubs outside the Premier League would not be considered because there was too little time before the end of the transfer window on 2 September for manager Brendan Rodgers to replace him.—Reuters

World's largest art show

“Art Everywhere” launched in London

LONDON, 9 Aug — The world's largest art show was launched on Thursday in London by the artist who designed the album cover to one of the most famous albums in rock and roll history.

Artist Sir Peter Blake, who designed the instantly recognizable cover to The Beatles' 1967 album “Sgt Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band”, launched the “Art Everywhere” event in West London this morning.

The “Art Everywhere” event will see huge reproductions of famous paintings and art works chosen by the British public displayed on tens of thousands of advertising hoards across the country between 12 and 25 August.

Blake launched the event by unveiling a giant reproduction of his painting “The Meeting or Have a Nice Day Mr Hockney” on an outdoor billboard at a shopping centre.

The works chosen for reproduction were selected in a popularity vote by the public. Those works are from paintings held in various national collections in British art galleries.

The top five works as chosen by the public are: 1, John William Waterhouse, “The Lady of Shalott” (1888); 2, Sir John Everett Millais, “Ophelia” (1851-2); 3, Francis Bacon, “Head V1” (1949); 4, John Singer Sargent, “Gassed” (1919); 5, Lucian Freud, “Man's Head (Self Portrait I)” (1963).

Vietnamese FM ends visit to Angola with training memo

LUANDA, 9 Aug — Vietnamese Foreign Minister Pham Binh Minh left here on Thursday after a two-day visit to Angola to promote bilateral cooperation.

During the visit, the Vietnamese minister met with his Angolan counterpart Georges Rebelo Chikoti to discuss ways to strengthen political and diplomatic co-operation, Angola's official news agency Angop said.

Minh also paid a courtesy visit to Angolan Vice President Manuel Vicente and met with Angolan Minister of oil Botelho de Vasconcelos and Minister of Public Administration, Employment and Social Security Antonio Pitra Neto.

Before leaving Luanda,

Minh said he was satisfied with his visit to Angola, describing the bilateral ties as excellent and developing satisfactorily in accordance with the interests of the two countries. He said his visit was an evidence of Vietnam's interest in increasing and diversifying cooperation with the African country.

Besides the oil sector, Vietnam wants to convey to Angola its experience in education, health, construction and agriculture, especially the production of rice, the Vietnamese minister said. Minh also called for an increase of bilateral trade. During his visit, the two countries signed a memo on vocational training.—Xinhua

‘Asia’s John Daly’ makes splash at PGA Championship

ROCHESTER, 9 Aug — He is known as Asia's version of John Daly but little-known Kiradech Aphibarnrat of Thailand made a name for himself by storming into contention at the PGA Championship on Thursday.

The 24-year-old's hefty physique and big-hitting, go-for-broke style of play have drawn comparisons to that of Daly and he lived up to the billing, finishing his opening round three shots ahead of world number one Tiger Woods.

Aphibarnrat, who changed his name for good luck and gave up car racing three years ago to appease his worried mother, showed no nerves while playing in only his second major, where he hopes to improve on his missed cut at last month's British Open.

“It was great golf for me and a good start for my second major,” Aphibarnrat told reporters after carding a two-under-par 68 at sunny Oak Hill Country Club.

“I was doing good in the (British) Open but struggled in the second round. I was a bit nervous, but I have learned from the experience of that major and will just try to work it out on the game tomorrow.”

Calling car racing too dangerous, Aphibarnrat decided to give up the sport after four years, a decision that sent his pleased mother into tears of joy on her birthday.

But the adrenaline

Aphibarnrat enjoyed while racing Subaru Imprezzas in Thailand has not carried over to the golf course, where he has recorded one victory on the European Tour and two wins on his home Asian Tour.

“It's a big difference,” said Aphibarnrat, who won the Malaysian Open in March. “All sports are the same, you have to focus, but golf and racing are different. Golf is like shot by shot but racing you have to go and go, it's more intense.”

Aphibarnrat, who started golfing when he was eight and is one of the most exciting young players to emerge from Thailand, welcomes the comparisons to Daly, who won the 1991 PGA Championship at Crooked Stick in Carmel, Indiana.—Reuters
