EP President warns against deficit amid EU budget talks

BRUSSELS, 8 Feb—European Parliament President Martin Schulz on Thursday warned against an EU with a deficit as the Union's top leaders are locked in sensitive negotiations over the 27-member bloc's 2014-2020 budget scheme.

The seven-year budget could be set at roughly 960 billion euros (1.3 billion US dollars), while actual payments would fall short by around 50 billion euros to accommodate the Britain's scream for spending cuts, Schulz said in a Press conference here on Thursday night.

The difference between commitments and payments would lead to a deficit for the EU, the European Parliament President complained, adding that the EU's current budget already had a 16-billion-euro deficit. "If we carry on this methodology and set the commitments far higher than the payments, we are going to end up as an EU with a deficit," he said.

Schulz also called on EU leaders to take the budget summit as the start of the process instead of an ending point, stressing that the European Parliament would carefully follow the case. This week's summit is the second time for EU leaders to focus on budget bargaining, since the first budget summit last November achieved little largely due to sharp conflicts of national interests.

Germany and the Britain are clearly in favor of spending cuts, in sharp contrast to outcries mainly from France and Italy. The final deal also has to obtain the consent of the European Parliament according to the EU law. "If the Parliament is brought on board early, it is more likely for the Parliament to agree," Schulz said.

If no deal is to be reached by the end of 2013, the 2013 budget ceiling will be rolled over into 2014 with two-percent inflation adjustment, which may bring much uncertainty for long-term projects.

House Democrats unveil gun control package; mirrors Obama's

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb—Top Democrats in the House of Representatives unveiled a broad proposal on Thursday to curb gun violence that mirrors the one offered last month by President Barack Obama, including a ban on semi-automatic assault weapons.

But it remained unclear if the proposals will be put to a vote. The House Republican leadership has said it doesn't intend to bring legislation to the floor until the Senate has acted, and there are doubts the Senate will pass gun control legislation.

"We know it's going to be tough, but we also know this is important," said Mike Thompson, chairman of the 12-member House Democratic Gun Violence Prevention Task that drafted the proposals.

Opponents led by influential and well-financed pro-gun groups charge that new restrictions on firearms would violate the right to bear arms.

Backers disagree. They argue that while Americans have the right to own guns, the government has the responsibility to impose restrictions for the public good.

US urges Iran to engage in "substantive" talks with world powers

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb—The United States on Thursday urged Iran to engage in "substantive" talks with the world powers later this month in return for eased sanctions. State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland was responding to Iranian Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei's rebuff to Washington's offer of direct bilateral talks.

Referring to US Vice

President Joe Biden's suggestion last week of direct talks with Teheran over its controversial nuclear program, Khamenei told a group of Iranian military officials earlier in the day that the Obama administration has shown "ill-will" by imposing "paralyzing sanctions to paralyze the Iranian nation."

Iran has agreed to start fresh talks with the so-called P5+1 group of Britain, China, France, Russia, the United States and Germany on 26 February in Kazakhstan.

In its latest effort to add more pressure on Iran, the Obama administration on Wednesday tightened up economic sanctions against the Islamic republic and adding more names to its blacklist. "What's most important is that they come prepared to really engage on the substance," Nuland said. "The burden of these sanctions could be eased if they made a decision to engage with us substantively."

"We've always said that action on the Iranian side would be matched by action on our side, so it's really up to Iran to engage if it wants to see sanctions eased," she added.

Ubuntu OS smartphones coming in October, will take on Google's Android

NEW DELHI, 8 Feb — In an attempt to get a foothold in the smartphone market which is already dominated by Google's Android, Canonical Ltd is soon going to release its Ubuntu OS for smartphones. According to a Wall Street Journal report, smartphones running Ubuntu OS are on their way and will be available to customers in October this year.

Mark Shuttleworth, the founder and CEO of Canonical, said that app developers will get access to the OS later this month. Though the company has not made it clear that which all smartphones will be seen running the Ubuntu OS, but it has been made clear that application developers will get to play with the operating system on Samsung's Galaxy Nexus.

Ubuntu is a Linux-based operating system for computing. CNET reports, the Ubuntu OS, which is being ready for small screens, will use the same drivers as Android smartphones; it will also be able to run on entry-level smartphones.

"Ubuntu for phones will use native apps, which means that developers can create a single app for both the desktop and the PC. This will let users easily move between devices. The OS also favors swiping gestures to reveal navigation strips and overview pages," reports CNET.

TORONTO, 8 Feb — Dozens of sweater-clad grannies sprung into action in the Canadian city of Toronto this week ahead of the third annual National Sweater Day which falls on Thursday to remind people the importance of energy conservation.

World Wildlife Fund (WWF)-Canada is mobilizing over 30 grannies to deliver one simple message. And that's for people to put on a sweater and turn down their thermostat by two degrees Celsius.

WWF Canada's director of climate and energy Josh Laughren believed that grannies are the appropriate spokespeople who can deliver an effective message on behalf of WWF.

"How we use energy is really at the heart of climate change," he said. "We thought, how could we engage people into thinking about ways to conserve it? Who knows more about conserving energy than the previous generations who lived through scarcity, and who do we listen to more than our grandparents ... and who knits sweaters?"

According to WWF, if all Canadians turned down their heat by two degrees this winter, they could reduce greenhouse gas emissions by up to four megatons. That's equivalent to shutting down a 600 megawatt coal-fired plant.

Loblaws, a supermarket chain that's sponsoring the event, will be going a step further by turning down their heat by three degrees in over 600 stores across Canada. But Laughren stressed the importance of individual action.

"It is symbolic. We are not expecting climate change to be solved by that one day, but I think it is no less important for being symbolic," he said. "We know that if we are going to tackle climate change, we need governments and businesses to lead the way and we also need to change some of our behavior."—Xinhua

New, improved versions of Ouya to be released every year

LOS ANGELES, 8 Feb — Ouya founder and CEO Julie Uhrman has announced that her company's $99 Android-based gaming console will be refreshed every year to keep up with the developments in the fast-paced mobile hardware industry.

Ouya started life as a Kickstarter project and will be sold at Amazon, Best Buy, Target, and GameStop from June onwards. However, Uhrman told The Verge in an interview that her company is thinking much farther ahead than June. Uhrman said that her team is planning on releasing a new version of the Ouya each and every year.

Uhrman said, "Our plan is to have a yearly refresh of Ouya where we leverage the best-performing chips and take advantage of falling component prices to create the best experience we can at the $99 price point. If we could do it for less than $99, we would."

The report states, "The Ouya's Nvidia Tegra 3 chipset is no slouch, (but) there's already a Tegra 4 inbound, and at least one developer is already questioning the Ouya's hardware limitations. But now there's no telling there won't be a Tegra 4-based Ouya next year."

Even so, Uhrman told the website that her console will be slightly more powerful than a comparable Tegra 3 tablet since it sips power directly from the outlet and doesn't need to conserve battery. Secondly, it is not as limited specs-wise as some would like to believe, since its internal memory can be supplemented with an external hard drive using the USB port.

NY Times posts higher revenue on digital growth

NEW YORK, 8 Feb—The New York Times Co (NYT.N) on Thursday reported higher quarterly revenue as more people paid for its digital newspapers.

Circulation revenue jumped 16.1 percent, mainly because of growth in digital subscriptions.

Paid digital subscribers to the Times and The International Herald Tribune totaled 640,000 at the end of the fourth quarter, an increase of 13 percent from the third period.

Benchmark Co analyst

Edward Atorino called the circulation revenue “phenomenal.”

“It looks better than I thought,” he said about the overall results.

Shares rose 9.2 percent to $9 in early trading.

The company, which also publishes The Boston Globe, is reaping the benefits of charging readers to pay for its digital newspapers, a programme it introduced almost two years ago.

Still, there were some troubling signs in the fourth quarter, which included an extra week. Advertising revenue was down 3 percent. Stripping out the additional week, ad revenue tumbled 8.3 percent on a decline in both print and digital.

This quarter is the first under new Chief Executive Mark Thompson, who took the helm in November. He was director general of the BBC, which was rocked by a scandal involving allegations of sex abuse by Jimmy Savile, a popular TV host. Thompson has insisted he was unaware of the accusations.

“For the first time in our history, annual circulation revenues surpassed those from advertising,” Thompson said in a statement.

“By contrast, the advertising environment remained challenging in the fourth quarter.” Fourth-quarter revenue totaled $575.8 million, a 5.2 percent rise from the same quarter a year ago. Analysts were expecting $570.42 million, according to Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S.

Wall Street flat after claims data, retailers' sales

NEW YORK, 8 Feb—Stocks were little changed on Thursday after data showed modest improvement in the labour market and retailers posted mixed monthly sales.

Weekly initial jobless claims dipped last week, with the four-week moving average falling to its lowest level since March 2008, signaling the economy continues to recover slowly.

A separate report said fourth-quarter productivity registered its biggest drop in nearly two years, while unit labour costs jumped 4.5 percent, more than economists expected.

“Claims didn’t look too exciting. They are pretty much in line. The bigger surprise was the jump in unit labour costs that was pretty substantial,” said Peter Jankovskis, co-chief investment officer at OakBrook Investments LLC in Lisle, Illinois.

“Overall the market took the whole thing in stride.”

Recent data has pointed to a slow improvement in the economy, but one without enough strength to cause the Federal Reserve to abandon its easy monetary policy, which has helped the benchmark S&P index year if we are seeing the economy picking up, then maybe they start taking their foot off the accelerator a little bit,” said Jankovskis.

Jobless claims point to healing in labour market

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb—The number of Americans filing new claims for jobless benefits fell last week and a trend reading hit a near five-year low, a sign the grinding recovery in the labour market remains on track.

Other data on Thursday showed a sharp drop in productivity in the fourth quarter due to weak economic output.

Initial claims for state unemployment benefits dropped by 5,000 to a seasonally adjusted 366,000, the Labour Department said.

That was a higher level than analysts had expected, although the downward trend in layoffs still suggests the economy is strong enough that employers will need to add to their staffs.

“The labour market is improving, but certainly not at a robust rate by any means,” said Russell Price, an economist at Ameriprise Financial in Troy, Michigan.

Claims have trended lower in recent weeks and are around their lowest levels since the early days of the 2007-09 recession.

The four-week moving average for new claims, a gauge of the trend in layoffs, dropped 2,250 to 350,500. That was the lowest level since March 2008, suggesting a steady improvement in labour market conditions.

However, while employers have pulled back on layoffs, they have only added jobs at a lackluster pace since the end of the recession.

The claims report showed the number of people still receiving benefits under regular state programmes after an initial week of aid increased 8,000 to 3.22 million in the week ended 26 January.

“It still shows that the US job market is on a lethargic pace to recovery,” said Joe Manimbo, a market analyst at Western Union Business Solutions in Washington.

Claims were volatile in January due to the timing of holidays and the dates on which weeks ended, but a Labour Department analyst said some of that volatility appeared to be receding. The analyst said there was nothing unusual in the data, and no states estimated their readings.—Reuters

Greenlight's Einhorn sues Apple, says has “cash problem”

SAN FRANCISCO, 8 Feb—Fund manager David Einhorn’s Greenlight Capital sued Apple Inc, saying the company needs to do more to unlock value for shareholders.

Einhorn, a well-known short seller, is long Apple shares and said in a television interview on Thursday that while he admires the company, it has a “cash problem” that it needs to fix.

Greenlight filed suit in federal court in New York to force Apple to modify a proposal in its proxy, which Greenlight believes does not conform to regulatory rules.

Greenlight said it is opposed to the proposal, No 2 on Apple’s proxy, which the firm said would remove Apple’s ability to issue preferred stock from its charter.

In a filing with the US Securities and Exchange Commission, Greenlight said it was “dissatisfied with Apple’s capital allocation strategy.”

Apple could not be immediately reached for comment. In a CNBC interview, Einhorn said shareholders would be happy to receive preferred stock with a 4 percent yield.

Calling Apple shares “utterly misvalued” at current levels, Einhorn said the company no longer needs to grow at the near-triple digit rates of the past. In a statement, Greenlight said it spent part of 2012 in discussions with Apple on the idea of perpetual preferred stock, but that the company rejected it last September.

“We understand that many of our fellow shareholders share our frustration with Apple’s capital allocation policies.”

Ukraine refuses to pay Russian gas bill

KIEV, 8 Feb—Ukraine would not pay a 7 billion US dollar bill for Russian gas it was obliged to buy last year but never took, Energy and Coal Industry Minister Eduard Stavytsky said here on Thursday.

"We do not consider it appropriate to pay the 7 billion dollar bill, because we have no reasons for that. We complied with required terms of the contract,"

Stavytsky told journalists.

To reduce its dependence on Russian gas, Ukraine was exploring additional options of reverse gas supply from Europe, Stavytsky said.

US state Oklahoma reports six more flu deaths

HOUSTON, 8 Feb — Six more flu deaths had been reported in the US state of Oklahoma in the last week, bringing the total flu-related deaths in the state for this season to 23, authorities said on Thursday.

A total of 798 people have been hospitalized with the flu in Oklahoma since the season began in September 2012, the Oklahoma State Department of Health said.

Tulsa County leads the state with 236 flu-related hospitalizations, and six flu-related deaths. Oklahoma County is second with 106 hospitalizations and three deaths. Health officials continued emphasizing the importance of flu shots because people who already have the flu but show no symptoms can still spread it to others.

The US is experiencing one of its worst flu seasons. The Centres for Disease Control and Prevention

(CDC) said in a report last week that 42 states are now reporting widespread flu activity, down from 47 states from the agency's previous report. The CDC's report shows that the number of flu-related deaths in the country has fallen during the week of 20 to 26 January. However, eight more children died from flu during the week, raising the total to 45 for the 2012-2013 influenza season, according to the CDC.—Xinhua

Israel's Netanyahu, Lapid conclude second round of coalition talks

JERUSALEM, 8 Feb — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu met with Yesh Atid leader Yair Lapid on Thursday, seeking to iron out sharp divisions and reach compromise that may facilitate the latter's incorporation in the government.

Both men first met on 24 January, two days after the centrist Yesh Atid stunned the political establishment and the Israeli public by winning 19 seats in parliamentary elections, making Lapid, formerly a popular newsman, the leader of the second-largest party in the Knesset.

Local media outlets cited both Netanyahu and Lapid reporting "a very good atmosphere" at Thursday's two-hour meeting at the prime minister's official residence in Jerusalem, "but made no real progress" on the matter of the latter joining the next Israeli coalition.

Details of the meeting were not made available, but the two agreed to meet again in the near future.

With three weeks remaining to form a government, Netanyahu is seeking as broad a coalition as possible to ensure stability in his third term as premier. Likud-Beiteinu officials said Netanyahu envisages a coalition that includes Yesh Atid (There is a Future) and the ultra-Orthodox parties, as well as the far-right Jewish Home and smaller center-left parties.

But Lapid, who unequivocally promised Israeli voters to end the sweeping exemptions from military service given to the country's ultra-Orthodox Jewish community, is awaiting Netanyahu's intentions regarding this issue that for decades has divided Israelis.

The Times of Israel on Thursday quoted sources in Yesh Atid as saying that, Lapid, who decisively announced in the immediate aftermath of the elections that he would not be part of an anti-Netanyahu bloc in the Knesset, was now "genuinely prepared" to remain out of the coalition "if it became clear to him that Netanyahu was not intent on passing legislation" to draft the ultra-Orthodox into either military or national service.

The sources underscored that the religious draft highlighted Yesh Atid's election campaign and remains a key component of the party's platform. Lapid's proposal calls for a gradual inscription of the ultra-Orthodox over a five-year period, during which men would also be integrated into the work force.

Chilean probe uncovers naval negligence, coverup in 2010 tsunami

SANTIAGO, 8 Feb — Officials investigating the handling of the February 2010 tsunami that killed more than a hundred Chileans has uncovered negligence and a coverup on the part of the navy, media reports said on Thursday. A report by the Investigative Police (PDI) says records kept by the Chilean Navy's Hydrographic and Oceanographic Service (Shoa) on the earthquake and ensuing tsunami were later altered.

The report, submitted Tuesday to the General Attorney's office, says the logbook's original entry was erased and rewritten.

Investigators said the entry "tsunami emergency warning" is logged at 3:40 am, when at that hour the agency had dismissed any danger of a tsunami in a report sent to then President Michelle Bachelet.

The original entry, according to the investigators, said "03.55 Zafarrancho," naval jargon indicating trouble and meaning roughly "all hands on deck."

Around that same time, several towns along Chile's south-central coastline were already being battered by monstrous waves.

In the early hours of 27 February, 2010, a magnitude 8.8 earthquake, the sixth-strongest quake ever recorded, hit Chile, sparking a tsunami that took coastal residents by surprise, because the navy's Shoa emergency service had failed to warn them of the imminent danger.

The PDI report additionally claims mistakes and negligence on the part of Chilean Navy officials along the affected region, especially a lack of concern for the victims' welfare.

Navy personnel "at no time showed a willingness to go out and carry out an evacuation of the coastal sector ... or any attempt to rescue the people trapped on the islands" off the coast, the report alleges.—Xinhua

Yemen demands Iran halt support for insurgents

Yemen's President Abd-Rabbu Mansour Hadi attends Arab summit in Riyadh on 21 Jan, 2013.—REUTERS

SANAA, 8 Feb—Yemen's president has asked his Iranian counterpart to stop backing armed groups on its soil after coastguards seized a consignment of missiles and rockets believed sent by the Islamic Republic, a government official said on Thursday.

Iran has denied any connection to the weapons, found aboard a vessel off the coast on 23 January in an operation coordinated with the US Navy.

But government official Abdel-Rashid Abdel Hafez said President Abd-Rabbu Mansour Hadi had contacted Iran's President

Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, to demand Teheran stop smuggling in weapons. Hafez gave no further details of the message.

"This is the most dangerous arms shipment being smuggled to Yemen," Yemeni Deputy Interior Minister Abdel-Rahman Hanash told Reuters. "It contained anti-aircraft missiles, C4 high explosives materials which only a few countries in the Middle East possess." Yemen, a majority Sunni Muslim country, said last week the vessel had been loaded in Iran.

Yemen has complained to the UN Security Council and asked for the weapons shipment to be investigated by the council's group of experts that monitors compliance with the Iran sanctions regime. It includes a ban on arms exports, UN special envoy to Yemen, Jamal Benomar, said on Thursday.

The council has imposed four rounds of sanctions on Iran for refusing to halt its nuclear enrichment programme, which the United States, European Union and their allies suspect is at the heart of a weapons programme. Iran rejects the allegation and refuses to halt what it says is a peaceful energy programme.

"The shipment contains weapons and some of the weapons are sophisticated weapons, surface to air missiles, for example. The government made a request to the sanctions committee for a full investigation," Benomar told reporters. "They (the sanctions committee) will establish the facts on what happened, where the shipment came from, who were the recipients, et cetera," he said.—Reuters

Syrian jets bomb Damascus ring road to halt rebel push AMMAN, 8 Feb—Syrian government jets bombarded the Damascus ring road on Thursday in a bid to halt a rebel advance which threatens President Bashar al-Assad's hold on the capital, insurgent commanders and opposition activists said.

Warplanes fired rockets at southern parts of the route where rebels have spent the past 36 hours overrunning army positions and road blocks encircling the heart of the city, the site of key state security and intelligence installations.

Assad, battling to crush a 22-month-old revolt in which 60,000 people have died, has lost control of large parts of the country but his forces, backed by air power, have so far kept rebels away from the centre of Damascus.

World powers fear the conflict — the longest and deadliest of the uprisings that started spreading through the Arab world two years ago — could envelop Syria's neighbours, further destabilising an already explosive region.

"The regime really wants its positions on the ring road back. It is a major defence line for the capital," Aby Ghazi, a rebel commander based in the eastern suburb of Irbreen told Reuters.

Ghazi said the rebels have reached the edges of the city's main Abbaside Square where the Syrian military had turned a football stadium into barracks.

Authorities have banned most independent media from the country, making it difficult to verify events on the ground.

Units of Assad's elite Republican Guard based on the imposing Qasioun Mountain overlooking the capital fired artillery rounds and rockets at Jobar, an eastern neighbourhood bordering the square, and at the ring road, rebel and activist sources said.

Damascus residents, long accustomed to the sounds of war, said Thursday's shelling was some of the heaviest they had heard.

"They've gone insane. All of them. They're insane," one central Damascus resident said by telephone.

US State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland said the Assad government had responded to the rebel offensive by "indiscriminately shelling unarmed civilians".

CIA nominee pressed on US drone policy, waterboarding

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb—John Brennan, President Barack Obama's nominee for CIA director, said on Thursday he did not try to stop waterboarding, an interrogation technique that some consider torture, as he faced tough congressional questioning on that issue, security leaks and the use of drones to kill US terrorism suspects.

Lawmakers pressed Brennan on controversial counterterrorism tactics employed while he was a CIA official under former President George W Bush, and others whose use he helps oversee in his current role as chief counterterrorism adviser to Obama.

The issue of the now-banned harsh interrogation techniques derailed Brennan's consideration for CIA director four years ago, and he met it head-on at his confirmation hearing before the Senate Intelligence Committee. "I did not take steps to stop the CIA's use of those techniques. I was not in the chain of command of that programme," Brennan said. "I had expressed my personal objections and views to some agency colleagues" about waterboarding, a form of simulated drowning, nudity and other techniques, he said.

"But I did not try to stop it, because it was something that was being done in a different part of the agency under the authority of others, and it was something that was directed by the administration at the time," he said.

In a bid to smooth congressional concerns about counterterrorism activities under his watch, Obama on Wednesday ordered the Justice Department to give House and Senate intelligence committees access to a classified legal opinion on killing US terrorism suspects with drone strikes.

Iran's Khamenei rebuffs US offer of direct talks

Iran's Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei attends a meeting with Iranian nuclear scientists and managers in Teheran on 22 Feb, 2012.

REUTERS

DUBAI, 8 Feb—Iran's highest authority, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, on Thursday slapped down an offer of direct talks made by US Vice President Joe Biden last week, saying they would not solve the problem between them. "Some naive people like the idea of negotiating with America, however, negotiations will not solve the problem," Khamenei said in a speech to officials and members of Iran's air force carried on his official website. "If some people want American rule to be established again in Iran, the nation will rise up to face them," he said.

"American policy in the Middle East has been destroyed and Americans now need to play a new card. That card is dragging Iran into negotiations."

Khamenei made his comments just days after Biden said the United States was prepared to meet bilaterally with the Iranian leadership. "That offer stands but it must be real and tangible," Biden said in Munich on Saturday. With traditional fiery rhetoric, Khamenei lambasted Biden's offer, saying that since the 1979 revolution the United States had gravely insulted Iran and continued to do so with its threat of military action.

"You take up arms against the nation of Iran and say: 'negotiate or we fire'. But you should know that pressure and negotiations are not compatible and our nation will not be intimidated by these actions," he added.

Relations between Iran and the United States were severed after the overthrow of Iran's pro-Western monarchy in 1979 and diplomatic meetings between officials have since been very rare. Currently US-Iran contact is limited to talks between Teheran and a so-called P5+1 group of powers on Iran's disputed nuclear programme which are to resume on 26 February in Kazakhstan.

In Washington, US State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland brushed off Khamenei's remarks and urged Iran to show up in Almaty "prepared to discuss real substance" either in a group setting or in bilateral talks.—Reuters

BOGOTA, 8 Feb—Colombian police have arrested 15 members of a drug-trafficking gang, including three police officers, the National Police said on Thursday.

The 15 men, all members of the Los Urabenosare ring, were arrested for their suspected role in the deaths of two police officers in the northern state of Antioquia.

Police confirmed that the three police officers detained have been members of the gang for several years.

The operations were carried out in the northern cities of Valledupar, Santa Marta, Fundacion and Mai-

Protect wildlife

Myanmar's thick forests used to serve as a safe haven for wildlife with tigers prowling and elephants trumpeting. However, predators like big cats in these days have turned prey to human greed and are subject to poaching and illegal trading. Hunting remains a serious threat to Myanmar's ecosystems.

Seizure of ivory often makes headlines in international media outlets but until the recent poaching of elephants in Ngapudaw Township and Kyaukdaga Township, less is known about the commercial hunting of elephants in Myanmar. The high demand for ivory products in Asian markets has become a cause of concern for survival of elephants.

Likewise, tigers and turtles are at great risk as illegal trade is booming for these animals whose parts are thought to be good for health and used as amulets. Today, a number of wildlife has been classed as endangered species across the world, facing the threat of extinction. Tigers are no more powerful and magical creatures but pitiful beasts at the mercy of humans.

Though elephants do cause deforestation, it is not as much as illegal logging and mining, both human actions. Not only on land but also in water over-fishing has resulted in depletion of fish stocks. In case of illegal gecko trading between late 2011 and the first half of 2012 in Myanmar, gecko families had experienced the complete chaos while some got to a neighbouring country without visa.

Myanmar at present has established national parks, wildlife sanctuaries and reserves across the nation for wildlife conservation. Although Myanmar with the help of Wildlife Conservation Society (WCS) is conducting biological surveys, monitoring populations of key wildlife species, it would be required certain education programmes to boost public awareness of the importance of biodiversity. In addition, if the national parks could be turned into tourist destination of eco-tourism, it would be much beneficial to both environmental conservation and economic growth.

US regulator raises prospect of longer delay for Boeing 787

WASHINGTON/NEW YORK, 8 Feb — Regulators need to rethink how they approved the batteries on the Boeing Co 787, a top US safety official said on Thursday, adding a new and potentially time-consuming wrinkle to the plane's grounding.

National Transportation Safety Board head Deborah Hersman said regulators must review the "special conditions" used in approving lithium-ion battery technology on the 787 Dreamliners, after two battery related safety incidents in a matter of days.

The 50 Dreamliners in service were grounded worldwide on 16 January, after a series of battery incidents, including a fire on a parked 787 in Boston and an in-flight problem on another plane in Japan. The groundings have cost airlines tens of millions of dollars, with no end in sight.

"There have now been two battery events resulting in smoke, less than two weeks apart, on two different aircraft," Hersman said. "The assumptions used to certify the battery must be reconsidered," she added.

Boeing investors took the news in stride, pushing shares higher on the day. Analysts said the market was focusing on the wrong issue: the short-term question of fixing the battery versus the longer-term prospect the whole battery system might need to be approved again.

If the battery needs to be re-certified, "you're talking about changes to the 50 they've delivered, significant amount of engineering commitment on the 787-9. I see this as still having a significant amount of question marks," said Ken Herbert, an analyst at Imperial Capital in San Francisco.

Boeing shares are 3 percent higher since the 787 was grounded on 16 January, despite the headaches it has caused the planemaker and the demands for com-

First Israeli underground hospital underway in northern city

JERUSALEM, 8 Feb — The construction of a first of its kind underground hospital is underway and set to be completed in May in Israel's northern city of Haifa, the Ma'ariv daily reported on Thursday.

According to the report, the hospital's underground facility will protect the patients and staffers from any attacks of missiles, whether biological or chemical, against Israel.

The new hospital facility's construction comes amid growing tensions between Israel and its northern neighbours, Syria and Lebanon.

Last week, Syria announced a research center was hit by an Israeli air strike, whereas diplomats and security sources said Israeli jets hit a weapons convoy on its way to transfer weapons to Lebanon, to the militant group Hezbollah.

Syrian and Iranian officials talked of a possible retaliation against Israel, therefore, Israel is preparing for such possible attacks. The Israeli army had also reportedly deployed three anti-missile Iron Dome batteries in northern Israel, one in the Haifa area.

The facility, located three-story underground, is set to be the largest of its kind in the world and should be able to accommodate 2,000 hospital beds. The report suggests that half a billion US dollars were invested in the project.

The project came into being following the 2006 war with Lebanon, in which Hezbollah fired dozens of long-range missiles to northern Israel, targeting Haifa as well, the third largest city in Israel.

"The fact that we can make this thing in such a short time is a success," Prof. Rafi Biar, the hospital's manager, told the daily. XINHUA

Israel releases Palestinian prisoner after hunger strike

GAZA, 8 Feb — Israel on Thursday released a Palestinian prisoner four months before his nine-year term completes because he renewed his hunger strike.

The prisoner, Akram Rikhawi, has crossed into the Gaza Strip through Erez crossing point. He was greeted by dozens of relatives and people from Islamic Hamas movement, which controls the coastal enclave. In July, Rikhawi stopped a fasting of 104 days based on an agreement with Israeli Prison Service. The agreement allows Rikhawi, a resident of the southern Gaza Strip city of Rafah, to be released on 25 January. However, Rikhawi was not freed on the stipulated date, so he entered a new hunger strike.

Rikhawi has become the seventh prisoner freed by Israel after hunger strike.

There are still four Palestinian prisoners who have been fasting for months in Israeli jails. Israel holds about 4,700 Palestinian prisoners. —Xinhua

S Korean president-elect nominates first prime minister

SEOUL, 8 Feb—South Korean President-elect Park Geun-hye on Friday nominated former prosecutor Chung Hong-won as the first prime minister of her incoming administration.

Chung is the second choice of Park as her transition team head Kim Yong-joon gave up his nomination due to allegations of speculative land investment. The 69-year-old served as the ruling party's election nomination head during last year's parliamentary election.

"I'll assist (Park) in a right and exact way," Chung told reporters after the nomination. "I'm an ordinary man with no brilliant career. What she meant was to value ordinary people highly."

Chung will face a parliamentary confirmation hearing in the coming weeks. The new government takes office later this month.

Park also named former Defence Minister Kim Jang-soo as the national security office chief at the presidential office, and former Army Chief of Staff Park Heung-ryul to head the presidential security service chief. The two positions are equal to a ministerial level.

New Zealand gov't opens Asia-Pacific FTA talks to public submissions

WELLINGTON, 8 Feb—The New Zealand government on Friday invited public submissions on its negotiations on a proposed new free trade agreement covering 16 major trading nations of Asia and the South Pacific.

The Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP), also involving the 10 member states of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), as well as China, India, Japan, the Republic of Korea (ROK) and Australia, was launched in November last year.

"This is a significant development for New Zealand, which will help us deepen our links with Asia. Asia is critical for New Zealand's future as a source of growth, markets, investment and talent," Trade Minister Tim Groser said in a statement.

"This allows New Zealand to be a part of a major trade initiative in the dynamic East Asian region. The countries which have committed to RCEP represent markets of more than 3 billion people, almost 20 trillion US dollars in combined GDP and around 27 percent of world trade."

The RCEP would cover trade in goods and services, investment, economic and technical cooperation, intellectual property, competition, dispute settlement and other issues.

The submissions would inform New Zealand negotiators on the views and interests of New Zealand investors, exporters and importers of goods and services, non-government organizations and individuals, he said.—Xinhua

Mongolian officials to continue talks with Rio Tinto

ULAN BATOR, 8 Feb—Mongolian officials ended their first shareholders' meeting with Rio Tinto officials on Thursday without reaching agreements and criticizing the mining giant's unpreparedness.

The meeting began on Wednesday afternoon to discuss Oyu Tolgoi LLC, a Mongolia-Tinto joint venture developing a large gold-copper mine in the south Gobi region of Mongolia.

The two sides agreed to meet later this month.

Mining Minister Gankhuyag Davaajav said at a Press conference after the meeting that the Rio Tinto manager working for Oyu Tolgoi LLC did not read the investment agreement or feasibility study.

"Therefore, I told them to change the situation in the next talk," the minister said.

Batbayar Nyamjav, the economic development minister, also warned the investors to "respect Mongolian customs and traditions and follow Mongolian laws and regulations."

In response, Rio Tinto Copper Chief Executive Andrew Harding said in a statement that the project construction was finished "ahead of schedule and in line with the budget submitted to the Oyu Tolgoi board and government shareholders' representatives".

"We produced our first copper concentrate last week, and remain on schedule for commercial production in the first half of 2013," Harding said.

He said, though, that "substantive issues about the ongoing development have been raised by shareholders."

Oyu Tolgoi CEO and President Cameron McRae also said that Tinto "has always been fully transparent with all our shareholders regarding our project's finances, costs and operations."—Xinhua

Making traditional cakes features Lunar New Year in Vietnam

HANOI, 8 Feb—Most of the nations around the world often have their own traditional dishes for special events, and Vietnam is no exception.

In Vietnam, making glutinous rice cakes, or traditional Chung cake as called by the Vietnamese people, is an indispensable preparation for the Lunar New Year festival. As a result, Chung cake is always present among other Vietnamese traditional dishes throughout the holiday.

According to the legend, Chung cake was first made by Prince Lang Lieu, a son of Hung King, who is said to wear the crown some 3,000 to 4,000 years ago. The prince made Chung cakes in square shape and Day cakes in round shape to symbolize the Earth and the sky respectively, and offered them to the king to express his respect and gratitude for parents, and also to thank Gods for blessing bumper harvests during the year.

The tradition has been well preserved by the Vietnamese people nationwide although the way they make the cakes is different depending on regions where they live. Northern Vietnamese make the Chung cake in square shape, while the southerners or ethnic people in mountainous areas wrap the cakes in a round shape.

"I make Chung cakes for my family usually during Tet holidays and maybe as gifts to my close friends. They are special Tet gifts, actually," Nguyen Van Ky, a 67-year-old man, told Xinhua recently in Hanoi.

Ky said he has three children, and each will have some couples of cakes to put on the ancestor altar during the New Year.

According to Ky, making Chung cake requires simple materials and ingredients which can be found in every market in Vietnam.—Xinhua

Turkish northern city battles hard against air pollution

ISTANBUL, 8 Feb—Lying along the Black Sea coast between two river deltas, Turkish northern city Samsun was once among the world's "top cities with the best air quality." However, the city, now with a population of almost 1.5 million, is battling hard against air pollution caused by rapid industrialization, unplanned urbanization, narrow roads, and high-rise buildings that prevent wind flowing freely.

"Because of these conditions, heat-borne air pollution reaches its highest levels, especially during evening hours," professor Yuksel Adali, head of the Department of Environmental Engineering in Ondokuz Mayis University, told Xinhua. Due to changes in the direction of dominant wind in Samsun's industrial zone, the polluters sometimes move toward Tekkekoy District of the city, said Adali. This movement of wind causes a severe "industrial pollution" in Tekkekoy. In 2007, when industrial plants had been built in Tekkekoy, air pollution was posing serious health risks in the area. The concentration of particulate matter like sulphur dioxide, nitrogen and carbon monoxide in the air was measured at 1000 to 3000 microgram, according to data from Ondokuz Mayis

University. The limit for particulate matter concentration in industrialized regions is set as 400 microgram. The results of the university's measures revealed the reality that in 2007 people in Tekkekoy respired the carcinogen PM100 65 times more than normal rates.

American Airlines, US Airways on verge of merger

HOUSTON, 8 Feb—American Airlines could be merging with US Airways early next week, according to multiple US media reports on Thursday.

A deal for the two US carriers' merger is likely to be agreed on next week, the reports said.

The board of directors of Fort Worth-based American Airlines' parent company, AMR Corp, is expected to meet next Monday to consider the deal, and an announcement could be made the next day, according to a local TV channel KHOU.

The Wall Street Journal reported on Thursday that AMR Corp is in the final stages of talks with US Airways Group on a merger deal, and that an agreement could be reached as soon as 15 February.

CBS station KTVT-TV in Dallas said it has learned that US Airways CEO Douglas Parker would probably run the new airline, which would be named American Airlines and is likely to stay headquartered in Fort Worth, Texas.

The Fort Worth Star-

Telegram reported that a merger "could be announced as early as next week as the two companies move closer to finalizing details of a deal." The two carriers' boards of directors have to give the green light for the merger to occur.

The judge overseeing AMR's bankruptcy also has to sign off on any agreement, according to the reports. American Airlines is coming out of bankruptcy. If the merger deal goes through, it will create the largest airline in the world.—Xinhua

Robert De Niro's prints immortalized in cement

LOS ANGELES, 8 Feb—Robert De Niro has had his hand and footprints immortalized in cement.

The Silver Linings Playbook actor became the latest film icon to have his prints enshrined outside Hollywood's historic TCL Chinese Theatre—formerly known as Grauman's Chinese Theatre—in a ceremony celebrating his career on Monday (04.02.13).

The 69-year-old star—whose impressive filmography includes Casino, Raging Bull and Taxi Driver—told the crowd: “They say everyone in the film industry has three homes: The home where they live, the home where their first wife lives, and Hollywood. I love New York and I am proud to be a citizen of Hollywood. Thank you for this honour and thank you for making me feel at home here.”

Robert, who is best known for making gangster movies, then joked to the crowd: “You know, Joe Pesci (Goodfellas co-star) always said I'd end up with my feet in cement!”

Stars including Billy Crystal and Silver Linings Playbook director David O Russell paid tribute to the veteran actor, who was accompanied by his proud wife, Grace Hightower.

The excited actor mistakenly dated his cement plaque ‘2/14/13’ (14 February), but representatives for the TLC Chinese Theatre have corrected the date to 4 February. Robert is currently celebrating a Best Supporting Actor Academy Award nomination for his role in the Jennifer Lawrence and Bradley Cooper-starring comedy about mental illness. It marks the actor's first Oscar nomination since 1991 for Cape Fear.

He has previously won two Oscars; a Best Supporting Actor prize for 1974's The Godfather Part II, and Best Actor for 1980's Raging Bull, a biopic on boxer Jake LaMotta.—PTI

La Dolce Vita turns sour for Raptors' Bargnani

TORONTO, 8 Feb—Italian forward Andrea Bargnani has seldom experienced La Dolce Vita during seven enigmatic seasons with the National Basketball Association's (NBA) Toronto Raptors. Despite being the first European taken with the number one pick in an NBA draft and a five-year $50 million extension in 2009, the sweet life has eluded the seven-foot

Roman who is losing fan support with play that is often as bewildering as a Federico Fellini film.

Indeed, things have turned decidedly sour for the Italian, who was greeted to a chorus of boos from a frustrated home crowd when he returned to the Raptors lineup on Wednesday against Boston after missing 26 games with elbow and wrist injuries. "I'm disappointed," Raptors head coach Dwane Casey told reporters after the Raptors fell 99-95 to Boston. "This young man has done nothing to deserve that. He's been hurt.

"Fans have a right to boo, to cheer, to boo me. But I don't think Andrea deserved it, coming back from a serious injury." With each passing season the criticism has grown louder and more frequent as Bargnani fails to develop into the franchise player expected from a number one overall selection. Even Raptors General Manager Bryan Colangelo, who used the top pick in 2006 to claim Bargnani, once labeled him as the "enigma of all enigmas," openly suggesting it might be time to finally trade the 27-year-old. —Reuters

NFL's Redskins, others should junk names, make money

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb—Showing the profits of rebranding is more effective than moral arguments in prodding sports teams such as the NFL's Washington Redskins to drop names seen as offensive to Native Americans, symposium panelists said on Thursday. Arguments against stereotyping Native Americans will carry less weight than new revenue in changing names such as the Redskins, the target of political debate and a legal fight, the panelists at the National Museum of the American Indian said.

Teams could launch a new revenue stream by junking their mascots and names—such as Major League Baseball's Cleveland Indians, the NFL's Kansas City Chiefs and the Florida State University Seminoles—and

Jennifer Aniston, Justin Theroux enroll in “marriage boot camp”

LOS ANGELES, 8 Feb—Jennifer Aniston enrolled her and fiancé Justin Theroux into a “marriage boot camp”.

The former Friends star is determined to make her union with the 41-year-old actor work so before they tie the knot, she got them to have an intense three-day therapy session in Santa Monica. A source said: “Jennifer and

Justin are super excited about their big day, but she thought it would be a good idea to start married life rid of any problems. Justin seems to be as much a believer in the therapy as Jennifer is. On arrival, they had to hand over their mobile phones and undertake counselling, couple massages and screaming therapy — where you howl your feelings out at the top of your voice.”

Jennifer, 43, also had to acknowledge the end of marriage to first husband Brad Pitt — with whom she split with in 2005 — in order to move on and make this relationship a success. The source added to Britain’s Grazia magazine: “It was pretty tough going and they had to address all of their deepest fears and worries.”

Jennifer — who has been dating Justin for around two years — has previously spoken about having the therapy and says she found it very rewarding. She said: “It’s true that I spent some time regularly taking part in sessions with a psychiatrist. I find it very normal to lie on a couch every once in a while and to let your head be straightened out and your heart.” —PTI

Join hands for increasing dolphin population

Ayeyawady dolphins, unique to the historic Ayeyawady River, are the friends of fishermen. The traditional fishing, the perfect cooperation between fishermen and dolphins is the frequent scene on Ayeyawady waters. In this fishing technique, dolphins voluntarily herd fish into nets of fishermen and take the fish that fall out of the nets.

Fishermen in protected area of Ayeyawady dolphins were given talks on conservation of this endangered species recently. The talks were jointly organized by the Fisheries Department under the Ministry of Livestock and Fishery and Conservation Group which are formulating approaches for Ayeyawady dolphin conservation management plan.

Ayeyawady dolphins like humans are mammals. Ayeyawady River has been home to them for over thousand years.

The cooperative fishing of human and dolphin has been also conserved for many decades and this tradition has attracted many observers from abroad.

Annually, over 70 dolphins can be seen in Ayeyawady River between Bhamo and Mandalay.

A group of 19 dolphins has been making their home between Mandalay, gaing and Mingu for over a month and dolphin viewers are visiting them every day.

As more and more globetrotters are visiting there, locals are benefitting from them. However, fish population, food for dolphins is shrinking due to irresponsible fishing. Therefore, locals there are urged to use appropriate fishing technique to ensure sustainability of fish stocks, joining efforts for conservation of dolphins that are serving human interests.
