UN says delayed Congo peace deal due to be signed 24 February

US Secretary of State John Kerry (R) gestures to UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon as they make remarks to the media before their bilateral meeting at the State Department in Washington on 14 Feb, 2013.—REUTERS

UNITED NATIONS, 17 Feb — A delayed UN-mediated peace deal aimed at ending two decades of conflict in the east of the Democratic Republic of the Congo is due to be signed in the Ethiopian capital Addis Ababa on 24 February, the United Nations said on Saturday.

African leaders failed to sign the deal last month due to the concerns of some countries over who would command a new regional force that would deploy in eastern Congo and take on armed groups operating in the conflict-torn region.

The so-called intervention brigade would be contained within the existing UN peacekeeping force in Congo, known as MONUSCO. UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon sent out invitations on Friday for the 24 February signing ceremony and intended to travel to Ethiopia for the event, his spokesman, Martin Nesirky, said. “All the invited presidents have committed to either be there or delegate power to sign,” Nesirky said.

Rwandan Deputy UN Ambassador Olivier Nduhungirehe posted on Twitter that the “African Union, the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region, Southern African Development Community Chairs, as well as 10 Heads of States of the region will attend the signing ceremony.”

Envoys have said that one of the main reasons the deal was not signed in January was that three countries in the 15-member Southern African Development Community regional bloc—South Africa, Tanzania and Mozambique—felt they did not have enough information on the enforcement brigade.

UNOSAT, IGAD ink partnership on disaster reduction

NAIROBI, 17 Feb—The Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) and the UN Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR)’s Operational Satellite Applications Programme (UN-SAT) have signed a partnership deal for disaster reduction and emergency preparedness in the region.

The deal will enable IGAD and UNITAR to work together to leverage the know-how of UNOSAT to develop the capacity of the organization and its members to use geospatial technologies and remote sensing to enhance planning, emergency preparedness, and prevention across the region.

“Our common goal is to do something concrete to improve disaster risk reduction in the region by mainstreaming the use of this technology in various thematic areas and to ensure that strategic decision making is done also on the basis of objective geographic information and analysis coming from the organization and its member countries,” head of UNOSAT Einar Bjorgo said in a statement received on Saturday.

The partnership comes as the attention of the international community turns once again to the importance of building resilience through capacity development, UNOSAT and IGAD have launched into a project to do just that, with a practical focus on the use of geospatial technologies to improve disaster reduction in East Africa.

The activity uses a results-based management approach that allows UNOSAT experts and the beneficiary to monitor progress and impact as activities are implemented.

UNOSAT has also hired one expert-based in Nairobi to help follow the implementation from within the region while also providing direct support to the IGAD Secretariat and its components, which will draw additional benefits from the project, like the Conflict Early Warning and Response Mechanism (CEWARN) and the IGAD Climate Prediction and Applications Centre (ICPAC).—Xinhua

Bomb kills 64 in Pakistan’s Quetta

QUETTA, 17 Feb — Sixty-four people including school children died on Saturday in a bomb attack carried out by extremists from Pakistan’s Sunni Muslim majority, police said.

A spokesman for Lashkar-e-Jhangvi, a Sunni group, claimed responsibility for the bomb in Quetta, which caused casualties in the town’s main bazaar, a school and a computer centre. Police said most of the victims were Shi’ites.

Burned school bags and books were strewn around.

“The explosion was caused by an improvised explosive device fitted to a motorcycle,” said Wazir Khan Nasir, deputy inspector general of police in Quetta.

“I saw many bodies of women and children,” said an eyewitness at a hospital.

“At least a dozen people were burned to death by the blast.”

Most Western intelligence agencies have regarded the Pakistani Taliban and al-Qaeda as the gravest threat to nuclear-armed Pakistan, a strategic US ally.

But Pakistani law enforcement officials say Lashkar-e-Jhangvi has become a formidable force.

Last month the group said it carried out a bombing in Quetta that killed nearly 100 people, one of Pakistan’s worst sectarian attacks. Thousands of Shi’ites protested in several cities after that attack.

Pakistani intelligence officials say extremist groups, led by Lashkar-e-Jhangvi, have escalated their bombings and shootings of Shi’ites to trigger violence that would pave the way for a Sunni theocracy in US-allied Pakistan.

Afghan forces ready to secure country after 2014

KABUL, 17 Feb — Afghan President Hamid Karzai reiterated on Saturday that the Afghan security forces are entirely ready to ensure national security after NATO-led forces withdraw from the country by the end of 2014.

“Once the foreigners leave, Afghans will demonstrate to the world that they are able to secure the country and provide security for the nations,” Karzai said in his speech delivered at an army officers’ gathering at Afghan National Military Academy.

“Our national security forces are entirely ready to take security charge by the end of 2014,” Karzai said. “Afghans do not need foreign forces for the defence of their country.”

Transition of security responsibilities from NATO-led forces to Afghan army and police began in mid-2011 and lasts till 2014 when Afghanistan is due to take over its full security duties from US and NATO-led forces.

Currently there are about 100,000-strong foreign forces, with nearly 66,000 of them Americans in the country.

Under the US President Barack Obama’s withdrawal plan 33,000 US troops already pulled out of Afghanistan in September last year and another 34,000 will return home within one year.

The Afghan leader also called on Taliban and other insurgent groups to renounce violence and join the government-initiated peace and reconciliation process.

The Taliban, whose regime was ousted by a US-led invasion in late 2001, has renewed armed insurgency since then, staging roadside and suicide bomb attacks, killing combatants as well as civilians.

However, the Taliban has repeatedly turned down government’s offer for peace talks, saying there will be no dialogue with the government in the presence of foreign troops in the country.

According to Karzai, even if the NATO-led forces leave Afghanistan, international financial support for the war-ravaged country will stay.

Obama touts building rising, thriving middle class

WASHINGTON, 17 Feb — US President Barack Obama on Saturday stressed the importance of building a rising and thriving middle class as the engine of US economic growth.

The United States should endeavor to bring more manufacturing jobs back from overseas and launch manufacturing hubs across the nation to transform some regions into global centers of high-tech jobs and manufacturing, Obama said in his weekly address.

“We need to invest in the research and technology that will allow us to harness more of our own energy and put more people back to work repairing our crumbling roads and bridges,” Obama said after wrapping up a three-day road trip to sell initiatives in his State of the Union address on Tuesday night.

“We need to make our tax code more competitive, ending tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas, and rewarding companies that create jobs here at home,” he reiterated the message unveiled in his first of State of the Union address in his second term.

“No one in America should work full-time and raise their children in poverty,” argued Obama, adding that the nation should raise federal minimum wage to 9 US dollars per hour by 2015 from the current 7.25 dollars.

However, the proposal to raise federal minimum wage appeared to have little chance to pass the Republican-led House of Representatives, as top GOP lawmakers including US House Speaker John Boehner opposed it.

In a rarity, a meteor hit and an asteroid near-miss on same day

The passage of asteroid 2012 DA14 through the Earth-moon system, is depicted in this handout image from NASA. On 15 Feb, 2013, an asteroid, 150 feet (45 meters) in diameter will pass close, but safely, by Earth. The flyby creates a unique opportunity for researchers to observe and learn more about asteroids.—REUTERS

BOSTON, 17 Feb—An asteroid half the size of a football field passed closer to Earth than any other known object of its size on Friday, the same day an unrelated and much smaller space rock blazed over central Russia, creating shock waves that shattered windows and injured 1,200 people. Asteroid 2012 DA14, discovered just last year, passed about 17,200 miles from Earth at 2:25 pm EST (1925 GMT), closer than the networks of television and weather satellites that ring the planet.

“It’s like a shooting gallery here. We have two rare events of near-Earth objects approaching the Earth on the same day,” NASA scientist Paul Chodas said during a webcast showing live images of the asteroid from a telescope in Australia. Scientists said the two events, both rare, are not related—the body that exploded over Chelyabinsk, Russia, at 10:20 pm EST on Thursday (0320 GMT Friday) came from a different direction and different speed than DA14. “It’s simply a coincidence,”

Chodas said.

NASA has been tasked by the US Congress to find and track all near-Earth objects that are 62 miles in diameter or larger. The effort is intended to give scientists and engineers as much time as possible to learn if an asteroid or comet is on a collision course with Earth, in hopes of sending up a spacecraft or taking other measures to avert catastrophe. About 66 million years ago, an object 6 miles in diameter smashed into what is now the Yucatan Peninsula in Mexico, leading to the demise of the dinosaurs, as well as most plant and animal life on Earth.

Scientists estimate that only about 10 percent of smaller objects, such as DA14, have been found. “Things that are that tiny are very hard to see. Their orbits are very close to that of the Earth,” said Paul Dimotakis, a professor of aeronautics and applied physics at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena. Asteroid DA14, for example, was discovered last year, and it was found serendipitously by a group of amateur astronomers.—Reuters

AT&T wins ruling in price-fixing suit against LCD makers

NEW YORK, 17 Feb—AT&T on Thursday won a ruling from a federal appeals court in a lawsuit against liquid crystal display panel makers alleging a price-fixing conspiracy. The 9th Circuit US Court of Appeals in San Francisco reinstated AT&T’s claims based on California law over panel purchases outside the state. The decision reversed a lower court partial dismissal of AT&T’s lawsuit.

The manufacturer defendants, including Taiwan-based AU Optronics Corporation and Samsung Electronics Co Ltd, had argued that AT&T’s claims violated the due process clause of the US Constitution. The three-judge panel for the 9th Circuit disagreed. It found that California’s antitrust statute, the Cartwright Act, can be applied to the defendants as long as some of the conspiratorial activity leading to sale of price-fixed goods took place in the state.

Richard Taffet, an attorney for the defendants, declined to comment. AT&T spokesman Marty Richter said the company was pleased with the ruling. AT&T’s lawsuit is one of several that have been filed against LCD makers for allegedly fixing prices. Those companies also have been the subject of a US criminal probe. Last year, a jury in California convicted AU and two of its executives.

News Corp, popular tech blog contemplate split

NEW YORK, 17 Feb — AllThingsD, the widely read technology blog run by Kara Swisher and Walt Mossberg, has begun discussions with owner News Corp about extending or ending their partnership, sources familiar with the situation told Reuters. According to these sources, AllThingsD’s contract with News Corp expires at the end of the year. One of the sources said Swisher and Mossberg have to deliver a business plan by next week to Robert Thomson, the former Wall Street Journal managing editor who will helm News Corp’s publishing unit as CEO after it is spun off.

The fact that AllThingsD’s contract is up this year is well known, and sources said the website is receiving a lot of “inbound interest” from potential buyers parallel to its talks with News Corp. Among the names mentioned as having reached out to AllThingsD were Conde Nast, where Swisher recently signed to work as a contributing writer for Vanity Fair, and Hearst. Sources also speculated that former Yahoo and

News Corp executive Ross Levinsohn might be looking at the website given his new role as Chief Executive of Guggenheim Digital Media, which comes complete with “significant capital to acquire and invest in new media companies.”

The private equity shop already owns Billboard, emails to Ross Levinsohn were not returned. While AllThingsD is recognized as the brainchild of Swisher and Mossberg, News Corp actually owns the website and its name. However, according to provisions in their contract, Swisher and Mossberg have approval authority over any sale, the Hollywood Reporter, and Adweek. AllThingsD has reported that AOL expressed interest in acquiring it in the past, but said those talks “were preliminary at best.” Calls to AllThingsD were referred to a News Corp representative who declined comment. A Conde Nast representative declined comment. Calls to Hearst were not immediately returned. Calls and

Technically, News Corp could retain the AllThingsD name in the event of a sale, forcing Swisher and Mossberg to start a new venture under a different brand name. Australian boys get world-first vaccinations to protect against HPV

CANBERRA, 17 Feb—Australian schoolboys have begun receiving the first of three vaccinations to protect them against cancers and disease caused by the human papillomavirus (HPV), Health Minister Tanya Plibersek said on Friday. Plibersek said more than 280,000 boys will be eligible for the free Gardasil vaccine this year, which is estimated to prevent a quarter of new HPV infections. The vaccination will protect boys from cancer and genital warts, and continue to reduce the rates of cervical cancer among women.

The Australian government, as the world's first country, announced in July that schoolboys will join more than 1 million Australian girls aged 12-16 years who have already been fully vaccinated against HPV under the school vaccination programme. "The HPV vaccine is the best protection against the HPV virus; a virus that infects four out of five sexually active people at some point in their lives and is linked to cancer and other disease." "Because of our work in this area, Australia's HPV vaccine coverage rates are among the best in the world, resulting in a significant drop in HPV-related infections." Since the HPV vaccination programme started in 2007 there has been a reduction in HPV-related infections in young women and a reduced incidence of genital warts in males and females. There has also been a reduction in pre-cancerous lesions in young women.—Xinhua

High-stakes cholesterol study could lift Merck cloud

NEW YORK, 17 Feb—Favourable results from a huge heart study could help redeem investors' faith in Merck & Co and its two biggest cholesterol drugs, Vytorin and Zetia, and potentially add billions of dollars in annual revenue.

Investors have soured on the No 2 US drugmaker since late December, following setbacks to a closely watched experimental drug for osteoporosis and a newer cholesterol medicine.

Those concerns come on top of investor anxiety over the outcome of the study of 18,000 heart patients called IMPROVE-IT that has contributed to Merck's shares lagging rival large drugmakers by about 10 percentage points in that short period.

An independent monitoring board is expected to complete an interim analysis of the study in March, and decide whether it should continue as planned until September 2014. Sales of Vytorin and Zetia have fallen since 2008 because of concerns about their effectiveness and safety." Reuters

GSK wins priority status for new HIV drug in US

REUTERS

LONDON, 17 Feb—US regulators gave priority review status to an experimental GlaxoSmithKline drug for HIV/AIDS, which industry analysts view as a possible multibillion-dollar-a-year seller.

The US Food and Drug Administration awards certain drugs priority status when they have the potential to offer significant improvement over existing treatments.

The agency is due to give its verdict on whether to approve dolutegravir by August 17, Britain's biggest drugmaker said on Friday.

The once-daily drug, which belongs to a novel class known as integrase inhibitors that block the virus causing AIDS from entering cells, is owned by ViiV Healthcare, a joint venture focused on HIV in which GSK is the largest shareholder.

The new medicine has already performed strongly in clinical trials, prompting GSK to raise its bet on the product last October by redrawing a deal with Japan's Shionogi. Under that agreement Shionogi agreed to take a 10 percent stake in ViiV—which was set up in 2009 between GSK and Pfizer—in exchange for its shared rights to dolutegravir.

The agreement left GSK holding 76.5 percent of ViiV, with Pfizer controlling 13.5 percent and Shionogi the remainder. Analysts see dolutegravir as a strong competitor to HIV treatments from market leader Gilead Sciences.

Air Arabia net income soars despite fuel price hike

DUBAI, 17 Feb—Middle East's biggest budget carrier Air Arabia said on Saturday its net income in 2012 soared to 115.9 million US dollars, a 13 percent increase year on year, local media reported.

Sharjah-based Air Arabia achieved the profit increase despite a sharp rise in oil prices by expanding its global network, taking more aircraft deliveries as well as offering its customers wider product offerings and services. Its seat load factor reached 82 percent last year.

Air Arabia, operates flights to 82 destinations and introduced nine new destinations in 2012, is expected to take delivery of another six new aircraft in 2013.

and Brazil's 3G Capital. The suit marks the second time in six months that the SEC has taken legal action for alleged insider trading on a 3G deal. The suit, in federal court in Manhattan, cites "highly suspicious trading" in Heinz call options just prior to the 14 February announcement of the deal. The regulator has frequently in past filed suit against unnamed individuals where it has evidence of wrongdoing, but is still trying to uncover the identities of those involved.

That trading, the suit said, caused the price of the particular call option they bought to soar 1,700 percent and generated unrealized profits of more than $1.7 million. The regulator claims the traders are either in, or trading through accounts in, Zurich, Switzerland. The account had no history of trading in Heinz over the last six or so months. It has also obtained an emergency order to freeze assets in the Swiss account linked to the trading. In the suit, the SEC refers to the account as the "GS Account" and in a statement Goldman Sachs Group Inc said it was cooperating with the regulator's investigation.

"Irregular and highly suspicious options trading immediately in front of a merger or acquisition announcement is a serious red flag that traders may be improperly acting on confidential nonpublic information," Daniel Hawke, chief of the SEC's Division of Enforcement's Market Abuse Unit said in a statement. Representatives of Heinz and Berkshire Hathaway were unavailable for immediate comment. A 3G representative declined to comment.

has blown away the island's divided status as the main issue in this year's elections, which conservative leader Nicos Anastasiades is tipped to win.

Polls show Anastasiades, the most pro-bailout figure among the main presidential contenders, has a 15-point lead over his closest leftist rival, Stavros Malas, but may not secure the outright majority needed to avoid a run-off a week later.

He has promised a quick agreement with the European Union and International Monetary Fund on a bailout, a deal investors want thrashed out before the island's troubles derail progress made in shoring up the rest of the euro zone's periphery.

Nailing down a deal has proved tricky because almost any way of solving the crisis—from restructuring debt to slapping losses on banks—could set a precedent for other troubled states and hurt fragile confidence in financial markets.

Fears that the island will never be able to pay back its debt, German misgivings about its commitment to fighting money laundering and strong links to Russia have further complicated talks on a rescue, which have dragged on for eight months.

"Everything is at stake, like it has never been before," said Kyriakos Iacovides, publisher of the Cyprus Mail newspaper.

"The country must be rebuilt, Cyprus must be rehabilitated in the EU. We need a strong leadership to rebuild the country."

Cyprus sought financial help last year after its banks suffered huge losses from Greece's sovereign debt restructuring. The island, which has been shut out of international financial markets since May 2011, needs about 17 billion euros in aid—a sum worth as much as its entire economy.—Reuters

Israel treats five Syrians wounded in civil war

JERUSALEM, 17 Feb — Israeli soldiers treated five Syrians who had been wounded in fighting between Syrian government forces and rebels near Israel's security fence on the Golan Heights, the Israeli military said on Saturday.

The victims were taken to a hospital in Israel. The military did not say if they were combatants or civilians, or in what circumstances they crossed over to the Israeli side of the fence, although Israeli media said the wounded had approached the area near the fence and soldiers let them in.

Syrian rebels earlier overran a military police checkpoint in Khan Arnabeh, a town in the Golan Heights near the ceasefire line along the demilitarised zone with Israel, a British-based violence monitoring group said.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said the rebels seized weapons and a tank and the Syrian army shelled villages inside the Israeli-Syrian ceasefire area.

It was not clear if the five Syrians being treated in Israel were wounded in that incident.

Israeli Vice Prime Minister Moshe Yaalon, in a television interview, referred to it as a "specific incident" and said the decision to let the Syrians in was humanitarian. Israel will evaluate each individual case if it happens again, he said.

Photos of ailing Chavez stir emotions in Venezuela

CARACAS, 17 Feb — President Hugo Chavez's supporters joyfully brandished first photographs of him since cancer surgery two months ago while opposition activists said the images were worrying evidence of Venezuela's political vacuum.

In a first proof of life since his six-hour operation in Cuba on 11 December, authorities published four photos on Friday showing Chavez lying in a hospital bed smiling next to his daughters.

Underlining the gravity of his situation, however, an accompanying statement said the 58-year-old socialist leader was breathing through a tracheal tube and struggling to speak.

Within hours, the photos were on sale in Caracas streets, where some of Chavez's passionate supporters clutched them to their hearts as if they were a religious icon.

"It doesn't matter that he can't talk. We understood his message," said Aniluz Serrano, 57, selling prints in colonial Bolivar Square, named for Venezuela's independence hero and Chavez's idol, Simon Bolivar.

"When I saw this photo, I thought how beautiful, here he is calling on the people to keep fighting. When I see this smile, I can see Christ, I can see Simon Bolivar."

The photos and new medical details confirmed what most Venezuelans already assumed - that Chavez is seriously ill and may not be able to return to the presidency.

He has ruled the South American OPEC nation since 1999, maintaining huge popularity among the poor thanks to oil-financed welfare policies and his common touch, while alienating private business with nationalizations and taking an authoritarian line on opponents.

Vice President Nicolas Maduro and other allies say Chavez remains the head of state, signing decrees and giving instructions — sometimes in writing — from Havana.

"President Chavez in full recovery," was the headline of various state media. "He's alive ... he will be back," said Idan Sotto, 24, buying one of the photos in downtown Caracas.

Venezuela's President Hugo Chavez holds a copy of the Cuban newspaper Granma as his daughters, Rosa Virginia (R) and Maria watch while recovering from cancer surgery in Havana in this photograph released by the Ministry of Information on 15 Feb, 2013.—REUTERS

Opposition politicians believe such optimism is misplaced, given Chavez's obvious frailty, and are renewing demands for more detailed information on his condition and ability to rule.

Should he be formally declared unable to govern, an election would be called within 30 days, probably pitting Maduro against opposition leader and state governor Henrique Capriles.

Capriles lost an October presidential election, and the opposition coalition is struggling to remain united, with some pushing for a more militant approach to Chavez's absence.

"Venezuelan sovereignty is being given away to the Cuban government," one of the most strident opposition leaders, Maria Corina Machado, told Reuters in reaction to the photos.

Ohio teen's lawyers begin plea talks in fatal school shooting

CLEVELAND, 17 Feb — An attorney for the Ohio teen charged in the shooting deaths of three high school students in the town of Chardon said on Saturday he is negotiating with prosecutors to settle the case as the first anniversary of the attack approaches.

It was not immediately clear if accused shooter TJ Lane would plead guilty to the aggravated murder of three students in the 27 February, 2012, attack in the Chardon High School cafeteria, where three others were wounded.

"We're in the process of plea negotiations," said Lane's attorney, Ian Friedman, adding that his client will first undergo a court-ordered competency evaluation. "Assuming it is completed timely and finds TJ competent, a plea may be entered as soon as 26 February, which is our next court date," Friedman added.

Lane, who was 17 at the time of the shooting, is being tried as an adult, and has pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity.

He is scheduled to go on trial later this year for three counts of aggravated murder in the deaths of Demetrius Hewlin, 16; Russell King Jr, 17; and Daniel Parmertor, 16. He is charged with the attempted murder of Nick Walczak, 18, who was paralyzed from the waist down, and felony assault for wounds to two other students.

Prosecutors said Lane brought a .22-caliber pistol to school and fired 10 rounds randomly at students in the cafeteria.

If a plea deal is reached and announced on 26 February, it would be on the eve of the one-year anniversary of the shooting rampage, which will be remembered with a candlelight vigil, a memorial walk and concert in downtown Chardon.

For rapid progress

Thanks to the reforms in progress, Myanmar is now back on the global stage, broadening the scope of its international relations more and more, while finding extra areas of common interest with many foreign countries and institutions in the interest of the entire country.

As Myanmar is still a developing country, it needs a great deal of strength and energy for rapid development and catching up with others within a short span of time. So, Myanmar has been seeking ways for acquiring technical knowhow, expertise in other areas, financial and material assistance and efficiency trainings through cooperation with many donor countries and organizations around the world. Accordingly, it is organizing business or development forums with the broader participation of international scholars and resource persons and reaching accords for rapid development.

As there are improving signs for international cooperation, Myanmar has committed itself to a wide array of programmes for rapid progress involving the task of strengthening public administration to enhance the transparency and effectiveness of government programmes and foreign assistance, which includes the work of supporting the legislative and oversight functions of the parliaments and new forms of public participation in policy making, clarifying and simplifying lines of authority and devolving decision making processes while strengthening cross-government linkages and the government coordination, strengthening government institutions to deliver core functions effectively, and establishing benchmarks and feedback systems on government performance to improve efficiency and effectiveness.

These programmes also cover plans to steadfastly increase the transparency of budget operations through the timely and reliable publication of budget information, strengthen fiduciary management and safeguard local resources and development cooperation from misuse through improvement of public procurement and implementation of the anti-corruption law, encourage domestic resource mobilization and increase reliance on national resources and strengthen social and environmental safeguards and compliance with their implementation.

Failed Attempts in 19th Century

With the invasion of British colonial power, last Kings of Konbaung dynasty paid attention to foreign relations and attempted to extend diplomatic relations with other major foreign countries of the world. In 1874, King Mindon tried in vain to establish diplomatic relation with Russia—geographically far apart country of Eurasia. He tried to send an emissary to Alexander Second, the Liberator, Tsar of Russian Empire with the assistance of Persia (Iran). The Special envoy was headed by Min Hla Kyaw Htin Yarzar and composed of Ah-way-yauk Shwe-taung Kyaw Thu Naw-ra-hta and scholar Maung Shwe Aye. They accompanied the visiting Iranian envoy on his return from Mandalay palace and tried to get the Saint Petersburg Palace, but they didn't reach the destination.

Myanmar Foreign Minister Kinwon Mingyi U Kaung also sent a note to Russian Foreign Minister Mr. Gorchakov, but the letter was stolen in the posting process of that time. In 1875, Mr. P. I. Pashino, a diplomat from Tsar, arrived Mandalay and was given an audience to King Mindon. It was noted that he made a report of his encounter with the King Mindon to Tsar.

Throughout Myanmar's endeavour for independence in 1930s onwards, many Myanmar youth learned the leftist literature and the words such as Moscow, Red square, Gorki, Leo Tolstoy, Lenin, Stalin, Bolshevik, and proletarian were popular among the youth. In such way, the red relation was established between Myanmar and Russia.

The new era of diplomatic relations

After the independence on 4th January 1948, Myanmar established diplomatic relations with Russia (at that time the USSR) on 18 February 1948. Ambassadors Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary were appointed on both sides in 1951. Myanmar's first Ambassador to Russia was U Ohn who resided in London. On Russian side, the first Ambassador was Dr. Alexder I. Saveliev, followed by 16 ambassadors including the current ambassador Mr. Vasily B. Pospelov. On Myanmar side, there were eighteen ambassadors starting from U Ohn and followed by U Kyin, U Pe Khin, U Ba San, U Hpoe Kun, Thakin Kyaw Tun, U Myo Myint, U Kyaw Khaing, U Hla Shwe, U Kyaw Khin, U Kyi Myint, U Tin Aye, U Tin Tun, U Khin Maung Soe, U Khin Nyunt, U Tin Soe, U Min Thein and present Ambassador U Tin Yu.

High level mutual visits were realized from time to time. Myanmar Prime Minister U Nu paid a visit to Moscow in November 1955. Revolution Council Government Chairman General Ne Win visited Russia in 1965 from 14 to 24 September. After that, Vice Senior General Maung Aye, Vice-Chairman of the SPDC—State Peace and Development Council visited Russia in April 2006. On Russia's side, Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR (Prime Minister) Mr. N. A. Bulganin and Member of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR Mr. N. S. Khrushchev visited Myanmar in December 1955. During the time of Myanmar's early Parliamentary Democratic era, bilateral relation was in progress since the Soviet Union extended its friendly embrace to all newly independent states.

BSPP – Burma Socialist Programme Party Era

Relation between a Socialist state and Soviet Union brought up many Myanmar civil servants to be educated in Russia. Dr. Ma Tin Win, renowned scholar in contemporary literature, gained her PhD from Russia. Many Myanmar people went to Russia to study in many fields including performing arts, sports and circus. Renowned dancer Nwe Nwe San and U Maung Maung who run the famous circus troop even took the title 'Soviet-pyan' (come back from Soviet) as a diploma. They also served as 'people's ambassadors' by building friendship between Russia and Myanmar. Thanks to translated novels, Myanmar people were familiar with vodka and Volga while TASS news agency assisted MNA – Myanmar News Agency and Aeroflot flew to and fro between Moscow and Yangon.

There was no high level visit through BSPP era, but there were many cooperation programmes in culture, education and sports. The tall and graceful building of RIT in Kyot-kone, Insein, the Inya Lake hotel and Sao San Tun hospital in Taunggyi were present from Russia and Myanmar also returned the gratitude in tons of rice as gift to Moscow.

The relations after 1988

After 1988, Myanmar's foreign relations were restricted and pressured by western countries led by US. At that time, Russia, together with China, stood together with Myanmar. Being a friendly country, Russia visible expressed its understanding with Myanmar throughout the western pressure at the United Nations. Military Technical Cooperation Joint Commission was formed in December 2009 and cooperation was enhanced by mutual visits of military delegations. Myanmar scholars from military service were sent to Russia for higher learning at 23 Russian universities including Moscow University and Saint Petersburg University. Agreements were signed on cooperation against narcotic drugs, on cooperation between high courts etc. For economic relations, Russia is interested in energy and mining. Up till October 2012, two Russian companies made investment of 94,000 million US$ ranking 15 in Myanmar's foreign direct investment. The three Russian companies registered at MIC—Myanmar Investment Commission are JSC Zarubezheft, ITERA Oil and Gas Company and Silver wave Sputnik Petroleum and Nobel Oil.

However, trade relations are not in progress as expected. Compared to other Asian nations, Myanmar's trade with Russia is very nominal. Bilateral trade volume for 2011-12 was 14.118 million US$ (exporting 12.579 million and importing 1.539 million) and first nine months of year 2012-2013 was 15.126 million US$ (exporting 14.854 million and importing 0.272 million). While Myanmar exports rice, broken rice, different kinds of beans and textile to Russia, Myanmar imports fertilizers, electricity distributor, textile chemicals, milk powder, machines and machinery. Since there is potential to progress, much needs to be done between the two chambers of commerce to promote trade.

There are also discussions for further exploration on cooperation of tourism, as well as culture, education and sports. Since many Russian tourists are now travelling to Thailand these days, if we can attract these Russian tourist to Myanmar, that could facilitate Myanmar for further contact with Russian people and more opportunity for economic engagement.

Between Myanmar and Russia, an agreement on visa exemption for less than (90) days of stay was signed on 3 July 2000 in Moscow for diplomatic and special passport holder. Bilateral Foreign Office consultation was also held annually at the alternate capitals to enhance cooperation and promote mutual understanding.

Myanmar ship sinks near Pangasinan

MANILA, 17 Feb—A Myanmar ship heading for China sank at sea near Bolinao in the province of Pangasinan, leaving a Malaysian crew dead and 14 others missing, the Philippine Coast Guard said today.

"Initial reports said that it encountered engine trouble and experienced rolling and eventually sank," Philippine Coast Guard (PCG) Spokesman Armand Balilo said.

PCG got the information of the accident from a Chinese vessel, which rescued nine crew members of the ill-fated ship, MV Arita Bauxite. Of the nine, two were injured while the rest were in "good condition", Balilo said.

Balilo said the Chinese ship also reported that 14 other crew members of the Myanmar vessel are missing.

He could not know exactly when the incident occurred, surmising it could have occurred Saturday night or earlier Sunday.

Chito Castro, director of the Office of Civil Defense in Ilocos region, is still coordinating with the PCG for the other circumstances of the mishap. Castro said the victims were airlifted Sunday to PCG facility in San Fernando City in La Union. Farm theme boosts enrollment in rural Kansas school

WALTON, (Kansas), 17 Feb — The first clue is a sign "Fresh Eggs for Sale" in front of the school. There is a sheep pen on the baseball field and the sounds of farm animals greet pupils every morning.

This is not your ordinary elementary school. It is the Walton Rural Life Centre, a kindergarten-through-fourth grade charter school in rural Kansas that uses agriculture to teach students about math, science, economics—and responsibility.

The farm theme is so popular that the centre has a waiting list to enroll and has given the town of Walton, population 235, a boost, said Mayor Evan Johnson.

"It's been a priority for us and a source of pride," Johnson said.

Students take turns each week feeding chickens, sheep, pigs and cattle. They wash and sell the eggs, make yarn from sheep wool and raise pigs for market—with pork coming back to the school for meals. They also raise vegetables for school snacks.

"The kids love it, and they are learning," said Principal Natise Vogt, pointing to better test scores as one example.

At a time when many small towns struggle to keep their schools open due to shrinking enrollment, Walton is turning students away for lack of space. In 2007, enrollment dipped dragged on for nearly two years, with no signs of an end in sight. Its fallout is emerging and spreading.

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights reported on Saturday a spate of sectarian kidnappings over the past two days.

Meanwhile, a power outage added to the woes in the capital of Damascus and the southern provinces of Daraa and Sweida on Saturday.

The residents in Damascus have grown used to frequent power cuts as the country's conflict has damaged infrastructure and sapped the government's finances.

In addition, the refugee crisis is weighing on the international community, especially neighbouring countries. According to the United Nations refugee agency, 2.5 million Syrian people have fled their home, with 728,553 refugees in neighbouring countries such as Lebanon, Jordan, Turkey and Iraq.

UN High Commissioner for Refugees Antonio Guterres said last week that the number of people fleeing fighting in Syria could reach 1.1 million by June.

The humanitarian situation in Syria is "the most dramatic crisis we are facing today," he said, adding that developed nations, including those in Europe, need to accept more refugees as Turkey, Jordan and Lebanon have done.

to around 100, putting the school at risk of closing, Vogt said. But the school has 168 students today.

About half the students come from outside the school's enrollment boundaries and some live outside the school district, which is based five miles away, in Newton, Kansas.

"The parents like the unique curriculum, the project-based learning," said Jennifer Sauerwein, co-president of the school's Parent-Teacher Association. "The kids get that real-life hands-on, day-to-day connection to learning."

Working with animals, for example, is a study in math because students count out eggs in dozens, add and subtract money earned and spent, measure animal food in fractions of each container and equate perimeter lengths with animal pens.

Feeding the animals is not just a chore, said Walton teacher Amanda Paulus.

"It gives them a lot of responsibility in that they are actually caring for something that depends on them," Paulus said.

Cyprus company not to be held responsible for horsemeat scandal

NICOSIA, 17 Feb — A Cyprus registered company originally blamed for starting the horsemeat scandal across Europe cannot be held responsible in any way, authorities in Nicosia said on Saturday.

"We made a thorough examination of the company's documents and we have established that it had acted legally and properly all the way," said George Kyriakides, director of the Veterinary Services at the Ministry of Agriculture.

He said the Dutch company, Draap Trading Limited, had placed an order for horsemeat with a Romanian horse slaughter house and a meat cutting establishment, which are registered as horsemeat facilities under EU rules.

Kyriakides said the meat purchased by Draap Trading, registered in Cyprus' southern port city of Limassol and operates from premises in Belgium, from the Romanian facilities was mislabeled on the way to its destination, but he could not say where.

"It is up to the authorities of other European countries involved to investigate the labelling of the meat," he added.

have said that well-known Spanghero company based in the south of the country knowingly sold as beef what could have been horsemeat, something which the company strongly denied.

Meanwhile, a Cypriot public health official said 16.5 tonnes of hamburgers had been destroyed by a Cypriot importer after the scandal started in Ireland.

He added that further examinations were under way to establish whether the meat products of the company were in any way contaminated with harmful medication given to horses.

Japanese FM visits Okinawa on US Futenma base relocation

TOKYO, 17 Feb—Japanese Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida on Saturday visited the country's southernmost prefecture of Okinawa to discuss the long-stalled issue of relocation of a key US air base, local media reported.

Kishida met with Okinawa Governor Hirokazu Nakaima and asked the governor to support the plan agreed by Japan and the United States to relocate the base within Okinawa to a less populated area, according to Japan's Kyodo News Agency.

The visit came few days before a four-day US trip by Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, who will try to restore Japan-US alliance scratched by the spiny issue.

However, the minister failed to reach an agreement with Nakaima as the governor, who also discussed the issue with Abe earlier this month, reiterated that Okinawa people want the base to move outside Okinawa as soon as possible, according to the report.—Xinhua

France wants India to open up its markets

NEW DELHI, 17 Feb—France has urged India to open up its domestic markets by eliminating the existing hurdles, which will encourage French companies to invest up to one billion US dollars in this country.

"French companies are willing to invest up to one billion US dollars in India. There are always obstacles to opening markets. I am not here to interfere in the political decisions but these decisions (to open up markets) are nonetheless necessary. We are all convinced that India has a great future and we want to partake in that," French President Francois Hollande was quoted as saying in Mum-

The French President, who had earlier met Prime Minister Manmohan Singh during which several pacts were inked between the two countries, also said that India "has the potential to grow at 10 percent" but faces "immense challenges commensurate with its size." Singapore's Lee Kuan Yew in hospital, but recovers

SINGAPORE, 17 Feb—Singapore's former Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew was hospitalized on Friday after an irregular heartbeat led to a brief stoppage of blood flow to the brain, the Prime Minister's Office said on Saturday.

Lee, 89, "has recovered but will remain hospitalized for a few days for the doctors to adjust his medications and for observation," the Prime Minister's Office said in a statement.

It said Lee was admitted to the Singapore General Hospital after experiencing a suspected "Transient Ischaemic Attack (TIA) associated with a prolonged episode of atrial fibrillation (i.e. irregular heartbeat)."

A Transient Ischaemic Attack (TIA) is when blood flow to a part of the brain stops for a brief period of time. A person will have stroke-like symptoms which clear in less than 24 hours.

On Friday, Lee had to miss the Chinese New Year dinner in the Tanjong Pagar constituency, where Lee is a member of the parliament. It was the first time he has ever missed the dinner.

Indranee Rajah, a lawmaker from the same group representation constituency, told the 1,200 residents at the dinner that Lee was not feeling well.

"I would like, on his behalf, to extend his apologies for not being here, and thank you for coming in any event— I'm sure you would all join me in wishing him a speedy recovery in the hope that he feels better soon," she said.

Lee has been active at dialogue sessions and making visits to other countries and regions in recent years despite his age. His physician daughter Lee Wei Ling, director of the National Neuroscience Institute of Singapore, wrote in 2011 that the founding prime minister of Singapore was fighting sensory peripheral neuropathy, a neurological disease that makes it difficult for him to walk steadily.

Soldier wounded as rebels strike army convoy in S Philippines

DAVAO CITY, (Philippines), 17 Feb—A Philippine Army soldier was wounded when leftist rebels detonated an improvised bomb and fired at an army truck on the way to help rebuild typhoon-hit areas in southern Philippines on Saturday, the military said.

The incident happened along the Pan-Philippine Highway in Tagum in southeastern Mindanao at around 10 am, said Lieutenant Colonel Lyndon Paniza, spokesperson for the army's 10th Infantry Division. Paniza said soldiers from the army's 66th Infantry Battalion assigned to a humanitarian task force were aboard an army truck when they were ambushed by an improvised landmine believed planted by the New People's Army (NPA). "The soldiers were transporting construction material to (typhoon-struck) Compostela Valley Province when attacked," Paniza told Xinhua by text message, adding that a soldier suffered shrapnel wounds and had to be transported back to an army hospital in Davao some 55 kilometres away. He said the army vehicle also sustained damage as a result of the blast.

The rebels also fired at the soldiers, sparking a brief firefight, before withdrawing to a forested area, said Paniza.

"Despite the incident, the military would still continue helping rehabilitate typhoon-affected communities in the region," the military official said, condemning the NPA attack as "anti-people and anti-development."

The 4,000-strong NPA, armed wing of the Communist Party of the Philippines, has been fighting a leftist insurgency in 60 Philippine provinces since 1969.

Iran launches NGL plant in Persian Gulf

TEHERAN, 17 Feb — Iran inaugurated a natural gas liquids (NGL) plant on the Persian Gulf island of Siri, Teheran Times daily reported on Saturday.

The Siri NGL plant is projected to produce 1,400 barrels of gas condensates, 1,500 barrels of pentane, 4,000 barrels of butane, and 8,000 barrels of propane per day, the managing director of National Iranian Off-shore Oilfields Company, Mahmoud Zirakchianzadeh, was quoted as saying.

The plant will also have about 500 million US dollars of sales annually, said Zirakchianzadeh.

Some of the output of the new plant will be produced from associated gas, also known as flare gas or associated petroleum gas, which is burnt out and significantly contributes to the worldwide anthropogenic emissions of carbon dioxide, according to Teheran Times.

About 40 million cubic metres of associated gas is burnt every day at Iranian oil fields, causing around 3 billion US dollars of losses for the country annually, said the daily.

Six killed in attacks in northern Iraq

BAGHDAD, 17 Feb — At least six people were killed, including two would-be suicide bombers, in two attacks in the Iraqi Provinces of Nineveh and Salahudin on Saturday morning, police sources said.

The deadliest attack occurred in Nineveh when two men approached the house of a commander of the rapid reaction police force in the town of Tal Afar, some 70 km west of the provincial capital city of Mosul, a provincial police source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

The guards of the commander's house opened fire at the two, who apparently wearing explosive vests, killing one of them and blowing up the vest of the other, the source said.

The huge blast killed two policemen and an off-duty Iraqi army Colonel nearby, the source said, adding that the commander, who apparently was the target of the two attackers, escaped the attack unharmed.

Nineveh Province has long been a stronghold for insurgent groups, including al-Qaida militants. Its capital city of Mosul, some 400 km north of Baghdad, is one of the country's most restive cities.

In Salahudin Province, a judge named Ahmed al-Baiyati was killed and his son wounded when a sticky bomb attached to his car detonated in the city of Tuz-Khurmato, some 200 km north of Baghdad, a provincial police source anonymously told Xinhua.

UNICEF in desperate need of 7 mln USD for Mozambican flood victims

MAPUTO, 17 Feb — The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) is seeking 6.8 million US dollars to fund its work among the tens of thousands of children and women hit by flooding in the Limpopo Valley, in the southern Mozambican province of Gaza, according to the Mozambique News Agency (AIM) on Saturday.

The National Disasters Management Institute (INGC) said that heavy rainfall in January displaced 173,000 people.

The INGC was forced to set up 26 accommodation centres in the southern Gaza Province, the worst hit in the country.

In this region, Chokwe and Guija Districts had terrible displacements caused by the catastrophe, according to the agency.

Due to the scale of the displacement, funds are urgently needed to meet the needs of those left homeless.

AIM quoted UNICEF's Jesper Morch as saying "the magnitude of the flooding in the last few weeks has meant that emergency supplies and funding have been depleted." "It is clear that we urgently need additional funds if we are to help many children and families recover from their losses and rebuild their lives," she said.

UNICEF points out that whilst the floodwaters are receding in the Limpopo Valley, a large clean-up operation is needed before these areas are fit for families to return.

Meanwhile, the UN organization warns that flooding in the centre and north of the country has displaced 45,000 people. So far, the Mozambican government has provided 10 million dollars in support, whilst another 5.3 million dollars has been released by the United Nations Central Emergency Response Fund.

BEIJING, 17 Feb — Hours after the huge meteor explosion over Ural Mountains on Friday, residents of the Russian city of Chelyabinsk had already begun to list meteorite pieces for sale on Avito.Ru, Russia's leading website for classified ads.

As many residents of the city were still nursing injuries from the unexpected blast, others were already trying to make a profit, advertising meteorite pieces for sale on auction sites.

In one post on Avito.Ru, a user named Andrew advertised 18 pieces for 500 rubles each (the equivalent of 16.61 dollars), which he promised would be arriving by plane to Moscow on Saturday from Chelyabinsk.

Another Chelyabinsk resident left an announcement on the site, writing, "Buy a fragment of a meteorite Chelyabinsk, found today at the crash site, photo later. Questions by mail, the price is also negotiable."

A third user who identified himself as Sergey, asked for 300,000 rubles (roughly 10,000 dollars) for a piece of the space rock. "A piece of the meteor for sale, it's new," Sergey wrote, with a photo attached of himself holding a piece of stone.

The huge blast reportedly injured around 1,200 people, including more than 200 children, the majority hurt by shards of shattered glass, according to Russia's Interior Ministry.—Xinhua

Jessica Alba feared she was suffering a stroke

LOS ANGELES, 17 Feb —Jessica Alba recently feared she was suffering a stroke. The Sin City actress - who has two daughters, Honor, four and Haven, 18 months, with her husband Cash Warren - had a major health scare in the middle of the night after her arm went numb.

The 31-year-old beauty told Jimmy Kimmel Live!: “My whole arm was numb, and then I got a cold sensation from the back of my neck up to the front. And then I was like,

‘I think I can’t move my face.’” Jessica rushed to the hospital to get a CAT scan and an MRI. After being fully checked out she was assured she did not have heart problems.

She said: “They all said, you had all the signs of a stroke if you were much older.” She later discovered that she has developed carpal tunnel syndrome, possibly from spending too much time on her computer. Jessica, who runs her own organic baby product business The Honest Company, previously revealed that she tries to stay fit and healthy but she hates working out.

She said: “I like doing dance classes. That’s fun. Like hip hop class, mixed with like core Pilates-type exercises. And sometimes I do sprint intervals just because I hate working out. Anything where I have to do something but I can get my mind off of doing it, that’s so much better for me than anything that’s repetitive. Or the music has to be loud and I have to be moving.”

British actor Hugh Grant announces birth of second child

LOS ANGELES, 17 Feb —Hugh Grant announced on Saturday that he had become a father for the second time after Tinglan Hong gave birth to a baby boy. “In answer to some journo (journalists),” the British actor posted on the social media website Twitter, “am thrilled my daughter now has a brother. Adore them both to an uncool degree. They have a fab mum.”

“And to be crystal clear. I am the Daddy,” he added in a second tweet. Grant, 52, who is best known for such films as “Notting Hill” and “About a Boy,” did not reveal the child’s name on Twitter. The actor and Hong had their first child in 2011, when his spokeswoman said in a statement that the baby girl was the result of a “fleeting affair” but Grant “could not be happier or more supportive.”

Days later, Hong won a court injunction in Britain “prohibiting harassment” of her and the child after she said paparazzi had made her life unbearable. Grant is a strident critic of Britain’s tabloid newspaper culture. On his Twitter message on Saturday, Grant mentioned that the press had obtained his baby boy’s birth certificate and were making inquiries. “Now I’ve confirmed ... hoping my family will be left in peace,” he wrote.

The 301st goal for Messi as Barca win in Granada

MADRID, 17 Feb—Leo Messi scored two more goals in his incredible season as FC Barcelona took a hard fought 2-1 win away to Granada to ensure they at least retain their lead at the top of Spain's B B V A

Leo Messi

Primera Liga over Atletico Madrid and third placed Real Madrid. Messi netted twice in the second half as his team had to battle back from a goal down against their hard-working rivals. Barca lead Atletico by 15 points and Real Madrid by 19, although both sides can make up ground if they win their respective matches on Sunday.

With a view on their Champions League tie away to AC Milan next week, Barca rested midfielders Andres Iniesta and Xavi Hernandez, who is putting the finishing touches to his recovery from a hamstring injury.

Thiago Alcantara and Alexis Sanchez came into the starting 11, while Javier Mascherano also stepped into the team to allow Carles Puyol to rest. Alexis, who scored his first league goal of the season in last weekend's 6-1 win over Getafe, had the first chance of the game, but his control allowed Granada keeper, Tono to make a brave save. Granada had won their last two games, including a 1-0 home win against Real Madrid and their confidence was clear to see as they defended solidly and looked to play with pace with former Barca-B team striker, Nolito keen to impress against his former club and forcing an early save from Victor Valdes.

Thiago and Alexis had further shots on goal, but it was a miss from Alexis, who dwelt on the ball in the Granada penalty area, which led to the first goal of the game as Granada launched a counter attack which saw Nolito nod the ball down for Odion Ighalo to poke the ball home from close range, although he looked to be in an offside position.

Barca had the majority of the ball but, thanks to the hard work of the Granada midfield and defence, didn't find their rivals net until the 50th minute when Tono was unable to hold a low drive from Cesc Fabrigas and Messi was on hand to poke home from close range. Messi has now scored in his side's last 14 league matches and it was his 36th league goal of the campaign and his 300th for the club. —Xinhua

Nadal defeats Alund to reach Brazil Open final

SAO PAULO, 17 Feb—Rafael Nadal advanced to the final of the Brazil Open on Saturday with a 6-3, 6-7 (2-7), 6-1 victory over Argentina's Martin Alund. Sunday's title decider against Argentina's David Nalbandian will be the Spaniard's second straight final since returning from a seven-month layoff with a knee problem. In his first tournament back from injury last week, the 11-time grand slam winner lost to world No 73 Horacio Zeballos in the Chile Open final.

Earlier, Nalbandian said he was confident of clinching his first ATP title since 2010 against Nadal. The former world No 3 progressed to the final of the indoor clay-court event after defeating Italy's Simone Bolelli 6-3, 7-5. "I am feeling better as the week goes on, with each match and with that my confidence has grown," the current world No 93 said. "Physically I'm feeling very good. I have played two matches that have gone to three sets but the points have been short and for that reason I haven't felt any negative effects."

Sunday's duel will be Nalbandian's first final since being disqualified for putt at the par-four last and had to settle for matching the week's best score, Matt Kuchar's 64 in the opening round. "I'm very pleased obviously," Haas told reporters after soaring to the top of the leaderboard with five birdies and one eagle, a chip-in from 58 feet at the driveable but treacherous 10th.

"I was just kind of plugging along out there and then all of a sudden I made a nice putt at nine, a chip-in at 10 and a good up-and-down at 11. I certainly would have liked to make that putt on 18 after a nice drive and a nice second shot but, overall, I'm very pleased."

Fellow American John Merrick recorded two eagles and trailed Haas by just two shots with one hole to play before bogeying the last for a 70 to slip back into a three-way tie for second. Also at nine under were US Open champion Webb Simpson and in-form South African Charl Schwartzel who both returned 68s."

"Bill shooting seven under is incredible out there," American Simpson said after mixing four birdies with a lone bogey. "It was very tough. I felt like my three under was pretty good."

"It was firm and fast, and the back nine especially reminded me of a US Open, just the way the ball is releasing." "And the temperature got up, which made the ball go even further, so it was difficult to get the ball close to the pin, especially (to a) front pin." Del Potro on fire as he sets up final with Benneteau

ROTTERDAM, 17 Feb—Argentine Juan Martin del Potro is favorite to add his name to the banner of champions wrapped around the Ahoy Arena after beating Bulgaria's Grigor Dimitrov 6-4, 6-4 at the World Indoor Tournament on Saturday. Runner-up last year, he will face Julien Benneteau, conqueror of champion Roger Federer, in Sunday's final after the Frenchman eliminated compatriot Gilles Simon 6-4, 7-6. Del Potro has been in devastating form and reached the title match without dropping his serve all week.

From the moment the lanky Argentine broke his Bulgarian opponent's service in the third game, when Dimitrov missed an easy volley, there seemed to be only one winner. "My serve is really going well and that gives a lot of confidence for the rest of my game plan," Del Potro told reporters. "I'm satisfied with this win against a player with a great potential who can be top 10 of 20 in the near future." Despite his favorite status in the final, 2009 US Open champion Del Potro did not want to talk up his chances.

to stick with my game plan and play it hard." Benneteau has yet to lift a tour title in his 13-year career despite reaching seven previous finals. He retained his form from Friday when he

"It was a bit of surprise that Roger went out but it doesn't please me as I don't pay any attention to the other half of the draw before the final," he said. "It doesn't matter who I play tomorrow, I just have ousted top seed Federer, although the 31-year-old had to wait for his chances against Simon. "I handled yesterday's win ok. I put it behind me after I woke up this morning," Benneteau said.—Reuters

Seventeen-year-old Shiffrin wins slalom gold

SCHLADMING, (Austria), 17 Feb—Mikaela Shiffrin became one of Alpine skiing's youngest world champions when she won the women's slalom on Sunday at the age of 17 to continue an impressive performance by the United States. Shiffrin, who has already won three slalom races on this season's World Cup circuit, was third fastest in the first run but then produced a typically aggressive performance in the second to take gold.

One month short of her 18th birthday, Shiffrin pipped Austria's Michaela Kirchgasser by 0.22 of a second to become the third youngest women's slalom world champion and deny the hosts a first individual gold medal. The Austrians, who won four of the five individual women's golds in Garmisch-Partenkirchen two years, had to be content with Kirchgasser's silver and bronzes for Anne Fenninger in the giant slalom and Nicole Hosp in super combined. Olympic champion Maria Hoefl-Riesch, gold medal winner in the combined event last week, straddled a gate in the lower part of the course as she missed out, four years after her slalom gold at Val d'Isère.

Defending champion Marlies Schild, who badly injured her knee two months ago at Are, Sweden, exceeded expectations by finishing ninth, only after three weeks after returning to the snow. Sweden's Frida Hansdotter, who led after the first run, was third. "I can't believe what is happening to me here," Shiffrin told reporters at the finish line.

All-Star game may get hostile, says West coach Popovich

HOUSTON, 17 Feb—Players and coaches concede that Sunday's NBA All-Star game is a show for the fans yet when the game is on the line, action on the basketball court could become a little hostile. "The main object is fun ... the players want to show their talents and they want to play with each other. Certain players are never going to play with somebody else on the same team," said West coach

Gregg Popovich of the San Antonio Spurs. "But when you get to the fourth quarter it gets serious they want to win. Things get one venue," said Miami's LeBron James, who tied Durant's 36 points last season in a losing effort for the East. "We have a a little chippy and very competitive."

The West has won the last two games, including 152-149 last season in Orlando behind 36 points by Most Valuable Player Kevin Durant of the Oklahoma City Thunder. "It's an unbelievable weekend for the fans to be able to put all of their favorite players together in great time with it." James admitted the first half was a "feel out process."

"The second half, everyone's competitive nature kicks in," he added. "At that point, both teams want to win." West starting guard Chris Paul of the Los Angeles Clippers said the All-Star game "means everything."
