Anti-gov't protesters start "shutdown rally" in Bangkok

BANGKOK, 13 Jan — Anti-government protesters blocked main roads and intersections Monday in Bangkok as they staged a "shutdown rally" aimed at toppling the caretaker government of Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra.

The big crowds of protesters have blocked main roads in northern and central Bangkok including business and shopping places, putting pressure on the Yingluck government that has vowed to stay in power until elections are held.

Yingluck held a special meeting on Monday with ministers concerning the rally, while nearly 30,000 police and soldiers were deployed in the rally areas to ensure safety. Yingluck recently reiterated that the general election will be held as scheduled, even though the Election Commission called for it to be rescheduled in light of the political turmoil.

The army chief, Prayut Cha-ocha, also called a meeting of the military top brass to monitor the situation amid rumors of a potential military coup if the violence gets out of control.

The army chief has said the government has to take responsibility if the violence escalates and causes casualties. However, he urged all sides to avoid violence and confrontation.

On Sunday, the government designated zones that the protesters planned to occupy as off-limits in an unsuccessful attempt to prevent them gaining access.

Jakarta braces for bigger floods as over 5,000 displaced

JAKARTA, 13 Jan — Indonesia's capital Jakarta is taking precautions to ensure the safety of people from possible bigger floods as more than 5,000 people have been displaced by the waters so far, official said here on Monday.

Days of heavy downpours in Jakarta and upstream areas of Ciliwung River has bloated the river and burst its banks, pushing communities to stay on alert as the surface of the river keeps rising, said Sutopo Purwo Nugroho, spokesman of national disaster agency.

Waters have flooded in several parts of Jakarta and inundated 7,367 houses in the city, said Sutopo. "As many as 5,152 people fleeing to escape floods and taking shelters at higher grounds at 35 spots," he told Xinhua over phone.

The official warned the people to stay cautious as more rains are feared to come down.

"Based on satellite monitoring, there are still many clouds in the air of Jakarta and Java Sea, heavy downpours are still potentially to come down. Be always cautious," he said. The capital Jakarta was paralyzed by floods on 17 January, 2013, as waters submerged the centre of business and office buildings.

Seasonal downpours often incurs floods each year in Indonesia, a chain of 17,500 islands where over millions of people live in vulnerable flood plains near to rivers.

Iran, 6 powers agree to implement nuclear accord from 20 January

TEHERAN, 13 Jan — Iran and six major powers on Sunday agreed that their accord reached last year on curtailing Teheran's nuclear activities will be implemented from 20 January.

The agreement on the implementation date was disclosed by Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi, according to Iran's official IRNA news agency.

US President Barack Obama said in a statement that he has "no illusions about how hard it will be" to achieve the objective of the earlier accord, but added that "for the sake of our national security and the peace and security of the world, now is the time to give diplomacy a chance to succeed."

European Union negotiator Catherine Ashton said in a statement that the "foundations for a coherent, robust and smooth implementation" have been laid.

The accord reached last November between Iran and the six countries — Britain, China, France, Germany, Russia and the United States — requires Iran to stop uranium enrichment above a fissile purity of 5 percent and halt construction of its Arak heavy-water reactor, which could yield plutonium.

In return, the six countries will remove the precious metals trade embargo on Iran, while refraining from imposing new sanctions for six months.

Al-Qaeda Syria unit executes dozens of rivals in Raqqa

AMMAN, 13 Jan — The al-Qaeda-linked Islamist State of Iraq and the Levant executed dozens of rival Islamists over the last two days as the group recaptured most territory it had lost in the northeastern Syrian Province of Raqqa, activists said on Sunday.

One of the activists, who spoke from the province on condition of anonymity, said up to 100 fighters from the Nusra Front, another al-Qaeda affiliate, and the Ahrar al-Sham brigade, captured by ISIL in the town of Tel Abyad on the border with Turkey, the nearby area of Qantari and the provincial capital city of Raqqa, were shot dead.

There was no independent confirmation of the report.

"About 70 bodies, most shot in the head, were collected and sent to the Raqqa National hospital," the activist said.

"Many of those executed had been wounded in the fighting. The fact that Nusra Front and Ahrar al-Sham are ideologically similar to the ISIL did not matter," he added.

ISIL's growth has alarmed Western nations, who are pushing the opposition to attend peace talks in Switzerland in 10 days' time, and has helped President Bashar al-Assad to portray himself as the only secular alternative to Islamist extremism.

Cambodian court frees former Russian tycoon

PHNOM PENH, 13 Jan — A Cambodian court freed Russian real estate tycoon Sergei Polonsky on Monday and he will not be extradited to Russia to face embezzlement charges there, his lawyer said.

Polonsky, who was once worth $1.2 billion, is accused of fraud in a case in which authorities say

5.7 billion roubles ($175 million) was stolen from investors in a Moscow real estate development project.

Cambodian police re-arrested Polonsky in November last year, planning to extradite him at Moscow's request. He has since been added to Interpol's wanted list.

Polonsky's Cambodian lawyer Benson Samay said judges at closed-door decision at the Appeal Court on Monday cited the lack of an extradition treaty between Cambodia and Russia in informing their decision.

He also told reporters his client would stay in the country to fight other charges.

Polonsky was detained last year in Cambodia and released on bail in April with two other Russians after being charged with assault and illegal detention after an alleged altercation with the crew of a tourist boat.

"He won't be extradited to Russia and he will continue to help Cambodia by investing here," his lawyer told reporters. "I will help him find a wife, he is a good man."

Friends of Syria group urges opposition to attend Geneva talks

Ahmad Jarba, leader of Syria's opposition National Coalition (L-R), French Foreign Affairs Minister Laurent Fabius, German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier, Egypt's Foreign Minister Nabil Fahmy and US Secretary of State John Kerry attend a news conference at the French foreign ministry during a "Friends of Syria" meeting ahead of Geneva II peace talks, in Paris on 12 Jan 2014.—REUTERS

PARIS, 13 Jan — The "Friends of Syria", an alliance of mainly Western and Gulf Arab countries who oppose Syrian President Bashar al-Assad, urged opposition groups on Sunday to attend this month's peace talks, saying there was no other route to a political solution.

With 10 days to go until the first direct talks between the opposition and President Bashar al-Assad's government - set for 22 January in Switzerland and dubbed "Geneva 2" - Western backers have struggled to unify rebel groups.

The main political opposition body in exile, the Syrian National Coalition (SNC), has been plagued by internal bickering. It postponed a decision on whether to attend until next week after nearly a quarter of its 121 members threatened to resign following after the re-election of its Saudi-backed leader, Ahmad al-Jarba.

In a final statement, the 11 core Friends of Syria nations urged the SNC to attend the talks on the shores of Lake Geneva.

"We invite them to form, as soon as possible, a delegation of opposition forces to participate in the political process," the joint statement said.

"There is no other political solution," French Foreign Minister Laurent Fabius said. "There will be no political solution for Syria unless 'Geneva 2' meets."

Even SNC participation at Geneva 2 is no guarantee that there will be an interlocutor in the talks who can truly represent the armed rebellion.

Led from abroad, the SNC has limited influence over the fighters on the ground who are acceptable to the West, and none over the more radically Islamist rebels who have supplanted them on many fronts of the rebellion.

South Sudan peace talks continue on truce

ADDIS ABABA, 13 Jan — The delegation of the South Sudanese government will continue to negotiate with the opposition side to resolve the crisis in Africa's newest state, Michael Makuei, South Sudanese Minister of Information and Broadcast, said on Sunday.

Under the mediation of the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD), the two sides have continued the peace talks in Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia. Makuei, who is also spokesperson of the government delegation to the peace talks, told the press that the South Sudanese government continues the peace negotiation without conditions.

He expressed optimism that the two sides would sign the cessation of hostilities in few days.

Makuei said IGAD envoys on Saturday held discussion with Reik Machar, the former South Sudanese vice president.

"Yesterday, the special envoys went to visit Reik Machar in his place inside South Sudan. They went to discuss with him issues of concern and special issues that are the main obstacle to the signing of the cessation of hostilities," he stated.

He said those in the opposition side condition it on the release of detainees.

The minister said the release of detainees, who have allegedly been involved in the reportedly attempted coup, should not be a condition for the negotiation. "We will continue to negotiate, the mediators or the envoys will continue, and we are optimistic that we will be signing this agreement within the coming few days," he noted.

The minister also said, "We have fully controlled the whole of Unity State. We have recovered the oil installations even though they were badly destroyed. This is very unfortunate. We have recovered them all. They have destroyed whatever facilities that are there including the hospital, which was recently built. They have done a massive destruction. Nevertheless, we have pushed them out."

MAPUTO, 13 Jan — Japan will provide a total of 70 billion yen in official development assistance to Mozambique over five years for a transport corridor project, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said on Sunday.

Abe made the pledge in a meeting with President Armando Guebuza in the Mozambique capital of Maputo as they agreed to strengthen cooperation on energy sources such as liquefied natural gas and coal.

The Nacala Corridor, located in the north of Mozambique, extends from the port of Nacala to inland districts of the African nation and further to neighboring countries such as Malawi and Zambia. "We agreed to deepen bilateral relations," Abe said at a joint Press

The two leaders also confirmed that the successful development of natural resources in Mozambique is important for its economic growth and energy supply to Japan. As for an already signed investment accord, the two leaders expressed hope it will take effect at an early date.

Abe, on a weeklong trip to the Middle East and Africa, also said Japan will contribute to world peace and stability with his policy of "proactive pacifism." Japanese Self-Defence Force troops participated in UN peacekeeping operations in Mozambique between 1993 and 1995.—Kyodo News

38 arrested after Spain's construction plan stirs protests

MADRID, 13 Jan — Twenty-two people were arrested on Saturday night in the Spanish city of Burgos, bringing the total of arrested people to 38 since a protest against a street construction plan started on Friday night, officials said.

Twelve people were also injured during the Saturday night incidents that followed on from the disturbances on Friday in which people protested against a government decision to turn a four-lane road into a two-lane boulevard.

On Friday, a group of protestors threw bottles and stones at police, burned rubbish containers and broke shop windows. The violence ended up with riot police arresting 16 protestors.

The clashes on Saturday followed a march organized in support of those arrested and saw a further 22 arrests, eight of whom were under 18 years old.

Saturday's march involved over 1,000 people and had been peaceful, but then degenerated into incidents similar to those on Friday with street furniture damaged, street barricades erected and various baton charges by riot police.

Spanish media reports said there was more damage caused on Saturday than in the previous night. Local authorities held a meeting Sunday to evaluate the damage and consider what action should now be taken. —Xinhua

Death toll from S Philippine landslides, flooding climbs to 13

DAVAO CITY, (Philippines), 13 Jan — At least 13 people are confirmed dead due to landslides and massive flooding in a number of areas in southern Philippines on Sunday, local government officials said on Monday.

Loreto Rirao, civil defense chief for Davao region, said 11 of the fatalities were caused by landslides that hit mining communities in Compostela

Rirao said two people were drowned after floodwater swamped communities in Bayugan City in Agusan del Sur Province.

The landslides and floods injured 10 others while 14 people were reported missing. The flooding and landslides spawned by days of continuous rains due to a lingering low pressure area also displaced some 12,000 people in southern Philippines.

In Compostela Valley province alone, provincial police chief Senior Supt. Camilo Cascolan said some 1,200 families or about 1,500 individuals have been evacuated.

Singapore Management University plans to expand

SINGAPORE, 13 Jan — The Singapore Management University, established in 2000 as a specialized business university, is planning to expand to be a more comprehensive with programs in the humanities and even applied mathematics, a local newspaper reported on Monday.

The university's 7,000 undergraduates in business, law, information systems management, accountancy, economics and social science will be able to study subjects in history, literature and philosophy when a school of humanities is set up in the next few years, the Straits Times reported.

It will also offer a full degree course in applied mathematics.

Also on the cards is a short-stay residential college, or SMU Village, for students to incubate their project ideas.

"We no longer see ourselves as a specialized business school modeled after the Wharton School of Business, but one that stands out for its courses and research in the management of all fields including health care, public policy and art," said Ho Kwon Ping, chairman of the governing board.

The university, which has its campus in downtown Singapore, is in talks with the relevant government agencies to build the village, which will have rooms to house 600 students.

But Ho said the university will be striking out in a slightly different direction.

"Going forward, we also want to be rooted in the social, and natural sciences as well as the humanities, a comprehensive university in the European sense," he said.

Ho said the university may offer a degree in the liberal arts in future, should the humanities courses prove to be popular.

The university's president Arnoud De Meyer said it was ready to "embrace" its location within the city.

"We don't want to be an academic island within the city. We want to be part and parcel of the city and be a change agent within it," he said.

Ukraine pro-Europe protesters hold first big rally of 2014

KIEV, 13 Jan — At least 50,000 opponents of Ukrainian President Viktor Yanukovich rallied in a central Kiev square on Sunday, reviving an anti-government protest movement after a Christmas and New Year lull.

The mass rally in Independence Square was a continuation of street protests that erupted in November after Yanukovich decided to abandon a free trade agreement with the European Union in favour of closer cooperation with Russia. The demonstration came a day after baton-wielding riot police tried to disperse protesters outside a Kiev courthouse, sparking clashes in which at least 10 people were injured.

Asian shares mostly firmer, gold gains as dollar skids

SYDNEY, 13 Jan — Asian shares and currencies were mostly firmer on Monday in the wake of surprisingly weak US jobs numbers that added to the case for the Federal Reserve to keep rates low for longer. Friday's disappointing data pulled down bond yields and the dollar, while lifting prices for gold and many commodities. It was also seen as beneficial for some emerging market countries which had been pressured by funds flocking to western assets.

While activity was curbed by a Japanese holiday, South Korea managed a rise of 0.7 percent.

KS11 and MSCI's broadest index of Asia-Pacific shares outside Japan .MIAPJ0000PUS added 0.6 percent. Emerging markets fared well with the Philippines up 1.7 percent .PSI and Indonesia more than 2 percent .JKSE. But Shanghai .SSEC went flat after China set its yuan at a record high for a second straight session, extending the gradual appreciation of the currency. Most other currencies in the region gained on the US dollar which skidded to 103.33 yen, having shed a full yen on Friday to end at 104.08 in New York.

S Africa issues warning against Congo fever

JOHANNESBURG, 13 Jan — The South African health organization on Sunday warned people against contracting the Congo fever.

As the summer comes, people who love spending time outdoors should try their best to protect themselves from catching the Congo fever which is caused by the tick bites, said National Institute for Communicable Diseases (NICD) spokesperson Lucille Blumberg in a statement.

The warning came as a 39-year-old woman was receiving treatment in hospital after being bitten by the tick last week.

The spokesperson believed that many people are at risk of contracting the disease at this time of the year, saying "people who go hiking or walking in the veld can be bitten by common ticks infected with the bacteria."

The symptom of the Congo fever would include a little black scab, high fever and very severe headache.

In South Africa, residents like to trip or picnic outdoors over weekends. "Around 30 percent of those people who contracted the fever would be possible to die from its virus," Blumberg warned.

The spokesperson said though there is no vaccine for the fever, yet "treatment is really supportive." Last year five people contracted the Congo fever in South Africa, and all of them survived after being hospitalized.

"Buyma" shopping site attracts luxury brand fans

TOKYO, 13 Jan — A social shopping site called "Buyma" is connecting individuals looking for luxury brand products that are not available in Japan with people abroad interested in buying them on their behalf. The main overseas buyers for the site managed by Enigmo Inc are Japanese housewives and other ordinary individuals living outside Japan.

The site was launched by Enigmo Chief Executive Officer Shokei Suda in 2005 to help Japanese consumers purchase upscale foreign brand products more easily. Under the service, the Tokyo-based company undertakes all the transactions between sellers and purchasers and receives commission fees once the deal is settled. "We hoped to discover quality items on a real-time basis with the help of individuals around the world who are good judges," Enigmo director Hideo Ando said.

The company initially struggled as it failed to increase customers who were interested in purchasing goods on its site. There were even times when monthly sales totaled only 30,000 yen, according to Enigmo. Once the company focused on fashion, however, the site started to gain popularity, with the number of its member consumers now totaling some 1.5 million. The number of buyers overseas also increased, reaching around 50,000 living in 75 countries. Enigmo said that the spread of smartphones has also contributed to the rapid growth of the service and that many consumers have visited the site to look for what they were unable to find anywhere else.

Currently, about 2.4 million items such as clothing, accessories and tableware are put up for sale annually on Buyma, according to the company. On the part of sellers, one Japanese couple living in Italy expressed satisfaction at being buyers for the company. "This job (of buying products in Italy) has supported the family as we are both busy in raising children and studying," one of them said. Since an increasing number of consumers directly ask buyers who share the same taste to purchase specific items, the company has added a function with which buyers can send information about products and bargains to specific consumers.

Volkswagen says it plans to invest $7 billion in North America

DETROIT, 13 Jan — Volkswagen AG said on Sunday it plans to make a sport utility vehicle tailored for the North American market and will invest $7 billion in the region as it seeks to increase sales. Europe's largest automaker reiterated its goal of selling 1 million Volkswagen and upscale Audi vehicles annually in the United States by 2018 as it launches more locally made cars.

The company said the move was a sign of renewed commitment to the the eve of the North American Auto Show. The $7 billion is to be spent over five years as part of investment plans previously announced at a global level by the Wolfsburg, Germany-based group. VW said the new seven-seater SUV would be launched in 2016.

Winterkorn declined to say whether the new vehicle would be assembled at VW's Chattanooga, Tennessee plant or in Mexico, where production of the Golf compact begins next week. Volkswagen's Phaeton se-units, rising 19 percent year on year. Sales of Land Rover brand topped 350,000 units worldwide last year, accounting for more than 80 percent JLR's total sales.

Its vehicles are now sold in 38 international markets. JLR's sales surged 30 percent in the Asia-Pacific and China region; 21 percent in North America; 15 percent in Britain; six percent in the rest of Europe and 23 percent in other

Australia's Telstra to offload majority stake in struggling Sensis

SYDNEY, 13 Jan — Australia's biggest phone company Telstra Corporation Ltd has agreed to sell 70 percent of its directories unit Sensis, offloading a struggling business challenged by digital transition for less than the market had anticipated.

The sale of Sensis, following Telstra's sale of Hong Kong mobile phone business last month, would further boost the telco giant's cash war chest to invest in new growth businesses and expand its mobile network.

Telstra said on Monday that it had agreed to sell the Sensis stake to Platinum Equity, a US-based private equity firm, for A$454 million ($407.17 million). Telstra will retain 30 percent of Sensis, a business valued at A$649 million, it added. Analysts had said the entire business was worth as much as A$3 billion.

"This is Telstra getting out as soon as they can because it believes the business in the longer term may not be as viable as some people suggest," said IG market strategist Evan Lucas. He added that the deal was "disappointing" from a price perspective but was "probably a good thing" for Telstra as a whole.

Telstra shares dipped 0.1 percent to A$5.26 at 0009 GMT. Sensis publishes print and online directories including the White Pages and the Yellow Pages. The unit generated earnings before interest, taxation, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) of A$571 million for the year ending June 2013, down 22 percent from the previous year. Chief Financial Officer Andrew Penn told investors in an August briefing that the transitioning of the Sensis business to a digital model remained "challenging".

"We have spent the last two years enhancing our print directories business with a rich set of digital directory offerings," Telstra chief executive David Thodey said in a statement on Monday. "To drive further momentum, we believe it is the appropriate time to introduce Platinum Equity as a strategic partner."

But the sale price implies the business could be in deeper trouble than people had thought, said another telecommunications analyst who declined to be named according to company policy.

Samsung Galaxy S5 'premium' model to be made of stainless steel, plastic

NEW DELHI, 13 Jan — Ahead of the much-anticipated debut of Samsung's next flagship smartphone, widely expected to be dubbed Galaxy S5, there is endless speculation around the device. Now, a report emerging from Korea has claimed that Samsung is adopting a blend of stainless steel, to increase the endurance, and plastic, to check the weight of the alleged 'premium' variant of the Samsung Galaxy S5.

Further, the report claims that the rear panel covering the battery compartment will be made of metal, and will be cast alongside a plastic material. The report also suggests that the South Korean manufacturer is also working on aluminium and magnesium chassis with a sealed battery compartment for the alleged 'premium' variant of the Galaxy S5.

An earlier report had indicated that Samsung is been planning to release two versions of the alleged Galaxy S5: a premium variant which will sport a metal chassis and a flexible OLED, and a variant which will come with the usual plastic body, as found on other Galaxy smartphones.

Notably, the South Korean giant has also been rumoured to be working on the alleged Samsung Galaxy F, which would sport a metal body and could be launched in 2014 after the release of rumoured Galaxy S5. It can be expected that the current Korean report might be referring to the alleged Galaxy F. Earlier report revealed that Samsung's alleged Galaxy F's metallic prototype was manufactured in Europe and then was moved to South Korean giant's Vietnam production unit.

On Thursday, a report quoted a Samsung VP as saying the company was considering the inclusion of an iris-scanning feature on the Samsung Galaxy S5. The VP added that Samsung is hoping to launch the Galaxy S5 in April, alongside the company's successor to the Galaxy Gear.

Orbital Sciences cargo ship arrives at space station

CAPE CANAVERAL (Florida), 13 Jan — Orbital Sciences Corp, one of two companies hired by US space agency NASA to make supply runs to the International Space Station, delivered its first cargo ship on Sunday, a NASA TV broadcast showed.

Space station flight engineer Mike Hopkins used the outpost's 60-foot-long (18 metre) robotic arm to pluck a Cygnus freighter capsule from orbit at 6:08 am EST as the two ships sailed 264 miles over the Indian Ocean, northeast of Madagascar.

"A big sigh of relief for Orbital," said astronaut and NASA TV commentator Catherine "Cady" Coleman from Mission Control in Houston. About two hours later, Hopkins latched the capsule, which is about the size of a small bus, to a docking port on the space station's Harmony module.

The capsule is loaded with 3,221 pounds (1,461 kg) of food, equipment, science experiments and supplies for the station, including computers and replacement parts for NASA's spacesuits. Several commercial payloads also are aboard the Cygnus freighter, including a "CubeSat" launcher owned by Houston-based NanoRacks. CubeSats are 4-inch-sided, standardized, relatively inexpensive spacecraft.

They produce their own power, transmit signals and are used for a variety of scientific purposes. Individual CubeSats can be configured to fly together. The launcher will be operated from Japan's Kibo module, which includes a small airlock, robotic arm and external platform.

The Japan Aerospace and Exploration Agency already operates a similar CubeSat launcher. The Cygnus capsule is scheduled to remain docked to the outpost for about 45 days, and will be unpacked, then refilled with trash and items no longer needed aboard the station.—Reuters

Iran to launch 3 new satellites

TEHERAN, 13 Jan — Iran is preparing to send into orbit three new home-made satellites, Vice President for Executive Affairs Mohammad Shariatmadari was quoted as saying by Iran daily on Sunday.

"Tadbir, Sharif Sat and Fajr satellites are all in the final stages and ready for launching," Shariatmadari said.

He declined to specify dates for the launch, saying that the blast-offs will take place once technical tests are concluded.

In December, a senior Iran's Space Agency (ISA) official said that Teheran would send Tadbir and Sharif Sat into orbit by the end of the current Iranian year (20 March, 2014).

"Tests are being conducted on the two satellites before the launching process," Hamid Fazeli said.

The country will soon launch another domestically-built satellite carrier

Another significant year

Ten or more days after bidding farewell to the old pal and welcoming the new buddy, we are now at the very start of a New Year, which according to Gregorian calendar is 2014.

This year will be a very busy year for Myanmar as she as the Chair of the ASEAN will have to organize over 280 meetings of the regional body. She is now preparing to host summits, retreats, ministerial meetings, officials meetings all leading to the integration of the regional body and the realization of its goal – one vision, one identity, and one community.

As the Chair, there will be prospects, advantages, privileges, benefits for her. But on the other hand she will have to overcome challenges, settle disputes, and sometimes act as an arbitrator. We believe Myanmar as a country embracing five principles of peaceful co-existence and non-interference will be able to do the job well, and from this assignment, we can learn valuable knowledge and experiences for our future progress and prosperity. Because of the democratization process which brings together with it transparency, accountability, liability and responsibility, we are going to win greater international trust that may be the cornerstone for development of various fields especially the national economy through increase in the flow of foreign direct investment and greater international partnership. And in the domestic sector, political parties will start drumming up public support for their organizations and delegates as the general elections will be held next year.

We hope no political party will try to win votes or power at the cost of national unity, and they will do their job as per the democratic principles. On the whole, 2014 will be another significant year for Myanmar during which she will experience a lot of activities, international and regional dealings, business overtures and prospects, and diplomatic economic and political gains that will help shape our future.

Nepal's newly elected assembly to convene on 22 January

KATHMANDU, 13 Jan — Nepal's second Constituent Assembly, which was mired in political and procedural hurdles immediately after being elected on 19 November, is finally convening on 22 January, the Prime Minister's office said on Sunday.

President Ram Baran Yadav on Saturday entrusted the head of the interim government, Khil Raj Regmi, to call the meeting, overcoming the final impediment more than two months after the election.

There had been confusion over whether the president or the chairman of the interim government should call the meeting.

Before this row, the assembly's formation was delayed by a party led by former Maoist insurgents who announced an assembly boycott over alleged poll rigging. They later agreed to join the assembly. The Maoists won the largest number of seats in the previous election, but came a distant third this time.

The 601-member assembly, in which the Nepali Congress and the Communist Party of Nepal-Unified Marxist Leninist won the highest and second-highest number of seats, is tasked with drawing up a permanent constitution that the previous assembly elected in 2008 failed to finalize. The previous assembly was dissolved last year after a months-long deadlock.

The new constitution will cap a seven-year-old peace process with the Maoists, who fought state forces for 10 years until 2006. The insurgency cost 17,000 lives.

Political parties have vowed to finalize a permanent constitution within a year.

The decade-long insurgency and continuing political turmoil have delayed development projects and dried up investment.

Nepal is currently facing a 12-hour daily power outage caused by delays in initiating construction of new hydropower plants.

Presidential Communications Operations Office Secretary Herminio Coloma Jr said that the Inter-Agency Commission Against Trafficking (IACAT) has been focused on the issue.

"The concerned government agencies are doing everything to prevent any violations of the law," he said in an interview over a state-run radio station.

Plan International, a UK-based children's charity, has urged the Philippine government to probe the alleged recruitment of child workers for sex trafficking. The victims reportedly came from Samar, one of the provinces in central Philippines, struck by Haiyan on 8 November.

The super typhoon left over 6,100 people dead and more than 1,700 others missing.

Abe questions nuclear policy focus in Tokyo election

MAPUTO, 13 Jan — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe on Sunday questioned the appropriateness of focusing on Japan's nuclear energy policy as an issue in the upcoming Tokyo gubernatorial election.

Such policy is a national issue, while the 9 February election should focus on how to cope with local needs in Tokyo, including expansion of nursery schools, successful organization of the 2020 Olympics and preparations for major earthquakes in the metropolitan area, Abe told reporters accompanying him on his weeklong trip to the Middle East and Africa.

He made the remarks as former Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa has shown readiness to run in the poll, clarifying his opposition to Japan's dependence on nuclear power generation, by joining hands with Junichiro Koizumi, a former prime minister who has drawn attention for his turnaround from pro-nuclear policy.

"Issues for the Tokyo governor should be discussed in a balanced manner" during the campaign, Abe said.

On Abe's plan to change the government's interpretation of the Constitution so it can lift a self-imposed ban on exercising the right of collective self-defence, or the defence of an ally under armed attack, the prime minister said he had yet to consider a specific schedule.

The New Komeito party, the junior coalition partner of Abe's Liberal Democratic Party, remains cautious about such a change. Abe said the issue should be discussed candidly in a responsible manner.

On the 19 January mayoral election in Nago, Okinawa, focusing on the relocation of a US air base within the island prefecture, Abe said the continued use of the base at its present site in a crowded residential area in Ginowan should be avoided.

Severe to extreme heatwaves to hit southern Australia this week

CANBERRA, 13 Jan — Large part of southern Australia is expected to experience severe to extreme heatwave conditions throughout this week, the Bureau of Meteorology (BoM) warned on Monday.

An extremely hot air mass over western and inland Australia is forecast to spread across the southeast on Monday, directing very hot northerly winds over South Australia, Victoria, New South Wales (NSW) and Tasmania.

Temperatures are forecast to reach the mid-40s degree Celsius in many inland areas. South Australian capital city Adelaide is forecast to reach 40 degree on Monday, and Melbourne, the city hosting the Australian Open tennis grand slam, is forecast to reach 41 degree on Tuesday.

Sydney will be spared the worst of the conditions with temperatures in the high 20s in the city, and high 30s in the west. Perth will be milder during the week, but will see temperatures reach the high 30s again on the weekend.

Assistant Director for BoM Weather Services, Alasdair Hainsworth, said the bureau had launched a new pilot heatwave forecast service, which provides a measure of the intensity of a heatwave and complements the official temperature forecast.

"What is unusual about this event, which the pilot heatwave forecast shows, is that when high maximum temperatures and above average minimum temperatures are sustained over a number of days, there is a build-up of 'excess' heat. Extreme heatwave conditions can be seen in southern NSW, Victoria and Tasmania," he said.

The new service is able to map the level of intensity of each heatwave event, indicating areas of "severe" and "extreme" heatwave at the upper end of the scale.

Travel rush train ticket sales surge

BEIJING, 13 Jan — The China Railway Corporation said on Sunday that an average of 7.43 million train tickets have been sold a day since fares went on sale for the upcoming Spring Festival travel rush, with this figure up 20.3 percent year on year.

According to the corporation, 148.58 million tickets for travel in the 40-day travel rush around the Spring Festival had been sold by Saturday, since these tickets became available on 23 December.

Passengers can buy train tickets online or by telephone. China's official ticket-booking website www.12306.cn had sold 3.59 million train tickets per day up to Saturday, with a growth of 57 percent from a year ago.

The Spring Festival, or China's lunar new year, is the country's most important traditional holiday for family reunions. Most people will go home for the festival, putting great pressure on the country's transportation system.

The coming Spring Festival falls on 31 January. This year's travel rush, literally translated as "spring transportation," is expected to last from 16 January to 24 February.

Real close on leaders,
Juventus still top

LONDON, 13 Jan—La Liga leaders Barcelona and Atletico Madrid played out a 0-0 draw in the Spanish capital and third-placed Real Madrid cut the gap with a laboured 1-0 victory at Espanyol.

Juventus won 4-1 at Cagliari to claim their 11th Serie A victory in a row and remain eight points clear at the top of the standings.

Real Madrid took advantage of Saturday's 0-0 draw between Atletico Madrid and Barcelona with an unconvincing 1-0 win at Espanyol on Sunday which closed the gap on the leaders to three points at the halfway stage of the season. Pepe's 55th-minute header was enough to secure victory at Espanyol's Cornella-El Prat stadium and third-placed Real have 47 points from 19 matches, three behind Atletico and Barca, who top the table on goal difference.

Serena crushes Barty to storm into second round

Serena Williams

MELBOURNE, 13

Jan—A ruthless Serena Williams kicked off her bid for an 18th grand slam title with a 6-2 6-1 demolition of local wildcard Ashleigh Barty to advance to the Australian Open second round on Monday.

After breaking the 155th-ranked Barty early, Williams reeled off seven consecutive games to march to a 4-0 lead in the second set under the lights of Rod Laver Arena. A former Wimbledon girls' champion, Barty pumped her fists in the air after finally holding serve, raising a rare roar from the crowd.

But she was powerless to prevent the American, who did not lose a point off her first serve, from cruising to her 23rd consecutive win and setting up a second round match with Serbia's Vesna Dolonc.

Ferrer, Li lead race to beat the Melbourne heat

MELBOURNE, 13 Jan — Top 10 seeds David Ferrer, Tomas Berdych, Stan Wawrinka and Richard Gasquet raced into the second round of the Australian Open on Monday, apparently eager to make the most of relatively mild conditions at Melbourne Park.

With temperatures forecast to soar well above 40 degrees Celsius in Melbourne from Tuesday onwards, there was good reason for the players to keep their time on court to a minimum and rest up for challenges to come.

China's Li Na also played like a woman on a mission and dispatched teenager Ana Konjuh 6-2, 6-0 in just over an hour but American Venus Williams bid an early farewell to the tournament when she lost 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 to Ekaterina Makarova.

off his campaign for a fourth straight Australian Open title against Lukas Lacko in the first evening match on Rod Laver Arena before Serena Williams opens her bid for a sixth title against local Ash Barty.

With only Djokovic of the "Big Four" of men's tennis in their half of the draw, players like Ferrer, Berdych, Wawrinka and Gasquet will rarely have a better chance to go deep in the year's first grand slam.

Ferrer started his first round match by hustling his way to a 5-0 lead in the first set before being drawn into a scrap with Colombian Alejandro Gonzalez and grinding out a 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 victory.

"It's important for me to win matches in three sets because my game is based on fitness and I need power for my next match," said Ferrer, who suffered service breaks in all three sets.

"The most important thing is to win. Today maybe I didn't play my best tennis, but I won."

Swiss Wawrinka, Djokovic's potential quarter-final opponent, had the easiest passage in the first match on Hisense Arena when Kazakh Andrey Golubev succumbed to an ankle injury and retired while trailing 6-4, 4-1.

Berdych and Gasquet both went through in three sets in less than two hours, though, the seventh seeded Czech beating Aleksandr Nedovyesov 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 and ninth seed Gasquet downing fellow Frenchman

Electronic passage at Kaesong complex to begin this month

SEOUL, 13 Jan— Electronic passage of South Korean workers to and from the inter-Korean factory park in Kaesong, the border town in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK), will be made possible later this month, the South Korean unification ministry said on Monday.

Unification Ministry spokesman Kim Eui-do told a routine Press briefing that construction of the radio frequency identification (RFID) system at the Kaesong industrial complex, which had been launched on 11 Dec, 2013, was expected to be completed within this week.

The spokesman said that the daily passage of South Korean entrepreneurs to and from the Kaesong factory park was expected to be made possible in late January after test-running the electronic passage system for 1-2 weeks.

Currently, South Korea should fax a list of workers to the DPRK a day before their trip to the joint industrial zone. The DPRK has allowed only those on the list to visit the factory park during a designated time.

The electronic passage system would allow South Korean workers to visit the factory park and return home at any time on days when they are permitted to visit the site.

The Kaesong industrial complex, the last remaining symbol of inter-Korean economic cooperation, is home to 120 South Korean small companies that produce mostly labor-intensive products such as shoes and garments.

Introducing the RFID system was expected to help resume the stalled talks on holding an investor relations (IR) session for foreign investors. The two Koreas originally agreed to hold such investment briefing on 31 Oct, but rising tensions on the Korean Peninsula delayed the process.

South Korea offered last month again to the DPRK to hold the IR session within this month, but Pyongyang had to make a specific response yet.

The spokesman said that Seoul would consult with Pyongyang on the IR session for foreign investors in case that progress is made in the related issues such as the RFID system and customs process.

Man City and Liverpool battle to away wins

LONDON, 13 Jan — Manchester City went top of the Premier League after securing a controversial 2-0 win at Newcastle United on Sunday with an early Edin Dzeko goal and a stoppage-time effort from Alvaro Negredo.

Liverpool also won away with an astonishing 5-3 victory at Stoke City after the home side battled back from a two-goal deficit to level the match at 2-2 by halftime.

The results lifted City to the top of the Premier League on 47 points, one ahead of Chelsea and two clear of Arsenal, who will return to the summit if they win at Aston Villa on Monday.

Liverpool climbed above Everton and Tottenham Hotspur into fourth place on 42 points.

The outcome could have been very different at St James' Park if a stunning 34th-minute volley from Newcastle's Cheick Tiote had not been disallowed after a contentious decision by referee Mike Jones.

He ruled that Newcastle's Yoan Gouffran was offside and had unsighted City keeper Joe Hart, a claim hotly disputed by Newcastle boss Alan Pardew.

One blot for City was a potentially serious knee injury suffered by France international Samir Nasri who was carried off on a stretcher late in the game.

An eight-goal thriller at Stoke ended with Liverpool winning with two goals from Uruguayan striker Luis Suarez, the top scorer in the Premier League this season who took his tally to 22 goals.
