UN Security Council urges end to ransom payments to extremists

UNITED NATIONS, 28 Jan — The UN Security Council urged countries on Monday to stop the payment of kidnap ransoms to extremist groups like al-Qaeda, which have earned hundreds of millions of dollars from such crimes. Although states are already required not to pay kidnap ransoms under an anti-terrorism resolution adopted in 2001, the British-drafted resolution was designed to increase political pressure on countries not to pay ransoms. The resolution creates no new legal obligations.

"We estimate that in the last three and a half years, al-Qaeda-affiliated and other Islamist extremist groups have collected at least $105 million," British UN Ambassador Mark Lyall Grant told reporters. "It is therefore imperative that we take steps to ensure that kidnap for ransom is no longer perceived as a lucrative business model and that we eliminate it as a source of terrorist financing," he said. "We need to break that cycle."

The United States has estimated militant groups have received $120 million over the past decade, including ransoms paid to al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb. The United States and Britain do not pay ransoms, but some European governments do. "Hostage takers looking for ransoms distinguish between those governments that pay ransoms and those that do not — and that they make a point of not taking hostages from those countries that refuse to make concessions," US Ambassador to the United Nations Samantha Power said in a statement.

"Every ransom paid to a terrorist organization encourages future kidnapping operations," she said. The resolution said member nations should "prevent terrorists from benefiting directly or indirectly from ransom payments or from political concessions and to secure the safe release of hostages."

Spielberg urges world to "confront" history on Holocaust Memorial Day

Hollywood film director Steven Spielberg

NEW YORK, 28 Jan — Hollywood film director Steven Spielberg spoke at the United Nations on Monday about the importance of remembering the horrors of the past such as the Holocaust to prevent large-scale atrocities from taking root. At the annual International Holocaust Memorial Day ceremony, the Oscar award winner praised survivors of Nazi German concentration camps for their "undamaged optimism" and their ability to transform "rage and grief into a wellspring of wisdom, progress and justice."

"The survivors' powerful determination to contribute to a future without genocides does not come from leaving the Holocaust behind, from escaping history," he said in the General Assembly hall addressing UN officials, diplomats and survivors. "Their determined demand is that we engage fully with history, that the Holocaust remain with us in memory." Since 2005, the United Nations has marked the day the Auschwitz-Birkenau camp in Poland was liberated on 27 January, 1945 by paying tribute to the 6 million Jews as well as other victims who perished in the camps.

Born a year after

World War II ended, Spielberg recalled childhood memories of learning to read numbers from the camp tattoos on the arms of Hungarian survivors who learned English from his grandmother.

The filmmaker was further influenced by meeting other survivors while on the set of "Schindler's List," the true story of a German businessman who saved over 1,000 Jews from extermination by having them work at his factory. After winning seven Oscars for the film in 1994, the director then formed the Survivors of the Shoah Visual History Foundation as a way of permanently recording their testimonies.

Syria peace talks hit more trouble as rebel city 'starves'

GENEVA, 28 Jan — The United States on Monday demanded that Syria allow aid into the "starving" city of Homs, as talks aimed at ending three years of civil war hit more trouble over the future of President Bashar al-Assad.

The Syrian government said women and children could leave the besieged city and that rebels should hand over the names of the men who would remain. A US State Department spokesman said an evacuation was not an alternative to immediate aid.

"We firmly believe that the Syrian regime must approve the convoys to deliver badly needed humanitarian assistance into the Old City of Homs now," said spokesman Edgar Vasquez. "The situation is desperate and the people are starving." He said the people of Homs must not be forced to leave their homes and split up their families before receiving aid.

After long months of fighting, much of Syria's third biggest city has been reduced to rubble and people inside are under siege,

The city's fate has turned into a test of whether the first peace talks attended by both sides in the three-year war can achieve practical measures on the ground, while a broader political settlement seems as remote as ever. "Once again, I tell you we never expected any miracle, there are no miracles here. But we will continue and see if progress can be made and when," said UN envoy Lakhdar Brahimi, the host of the talks.

Japan, US foreign ministers to discuss Obama's Japan trip

TOKYO, 28 Jan — Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida plans to hold talks with US Secretary of State John Kerry in Washington next week to pave the way for a planned visit to Japan in April by President Barack Obama, a government source said on Tuesday.

Kishida is expected to reaffirm the Japanese government's position in the 7 February talks that it will steadily implement an accord with the United States to relocate the US Marine Corps' Futenma Air Station within Okinawa Prefecture.

The government's plan to relocate the base from the densely populated area of Ginowan to the city of Nago was dealt a blow on 19 January when Susumu Inamine, an opponent of the planned relocation, was re-elected as Nago mayor.

To combat such local opposition, Kishida and Kerry are likely to agree to speed up working-level consultations on concluding a new accord concerning environmental conservation and research at US bases in Japan. The two are also likely to confirm cooperation in concluding Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade negotiations at an early date.

Kishida is also expected to tell the US that Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's contentious visit to the war-linked Yasukuni Shrine in December, which Washington said was disappointing, was meant to be a way of reiterating that Japan should never again wage war. Abe's visit to the Tokyo shrine especially angered China and South Korea, which regard the shrine as a symbol of Japanese militarism. —Kyodo News

Sudan's president urges armed groups, parties to talk

KHARTOUM, 28 Jan — Sudan's president called on armed groups and all political parties on Monday to meet and discuss ways of improving the country, but stopped short of promising a constitutional overhaul that was forecast by a senior member of his party. President Omar Hassan al-Bashir has had to wrestle with a sharp drop in oil revenues, the main source of government income, and rising inflation after losing the bulk of his active oilfields following the secession of dialogue on the constitution, but did not go further.

"We call for a broad dialogue that includes all political parties and even holders of arms," he told an audience that included the leaders of the country's main opposition parties. Sudanese media had printed a series of articles in the past week, counting down to the speech, reporting government officials had said it would include significant reforms. South Sudan in 2012.

Subsidy cuts and other austerity measures brought in last September to cope with the crisis led to the capital's worst streets protests in years, adding to the turmoil in a country also fighting rebels in southern and western border regions. Rabie Abdelati, a senior member of Bashir's ruling National Congress Party earlier said Bashir would use a live television address on Monday to call for opposition groups to help redraw the constitution and join the government. Bashir did say political parties should join and support for "international terrorism", then strengthened the penalties in 2006 over Khartoum's festering conflict with rebels in Darfur.

The country's isolation deepened when the International Criminal Court (ICC) issued arrest warrants for Bashir on charges of orchestrating war crimes and genocide in Darfur. The president, a former army officer, has ruled Sudan since coming to power in a bloodless 1989 coup backed by Islamists and the powerful army.

Cuba to host Latin American summit; US notably absent

HAVANA, 28 Jan — Latin American and Caribbean leaders converge on Cuba this week to discuss trade, peace and human rights in a further sign of regional eagerness to challenge the dominance of the United States. The two-day summit is expected to take up issues such as Colombian peace talks, lingering poverty in Haiti and human rights. Thirty-three countries from the region will participate, notably without the United States and Canada, which are not invited.

While the visiting heads of state and government are likely to express solidarity with Cuba and perhaps seek an audience with former Cuban President Fidel Castro, Cuban dissidents who advocate greater human rights on the communist-ruled island will also try to capture attention with so many leaders and journalists present. At previous international events hosted by Cuba, dissidents attempted to highlight human rights violations and a lack of democracy in the Western Hemisphere's only one-party state.

Government opponents reported over the weekend they were warned by police against attending a "Forum on Democracy" in Havana on Tuesday and that a number of activists had been temporarily detained. Among those arrested was Jose Ferrer, leader of the Santiago de Cuba-based Patriotic Union of Cuba, one of the most active opposition groups. Police detained Ferrer on Friday in Havana and released him on Sunday, his group said.

Israel refutes Bennett over remarks on settlers issue

JERUSALEM, 28 Jan — Israeli prime minister's office slammed economy minister's statements opposing a proposal to keep settlers living under Palestinian rule on Monday.

On Sunday night, Israeli media cited foreign reports quoting an official source from the prime minister's office, saying that he "sees no reason not to have a Jewish minority in the Palestinian state, just as there is an Arab minority in the Jewish state," the Ha'aretz daily reported.

Economy Minister Naftali Bennett, leader of the nationalistic, settlers-backed Jewish Home Party, quickly slammed the decision Sunday night, saying that the statement "reflects an irrationality of values."

The office blamed Bennett's harsh attack as a "reckless national endangerment that harms efforts to expose the real face of the Palestinian Authority just to grab headlines," the Ha'aretz daily reported.

JR West to drill hot spring in central Kobe

OSAKA, 28 Jan — West Japan Railway Co is preparing to drill a hot spring in the center of Kobe, with a view to incorporating a spa facility into the redevelopment plan for the aging terminal building of a major station in western Japan, company and city officials said on Tuesday.

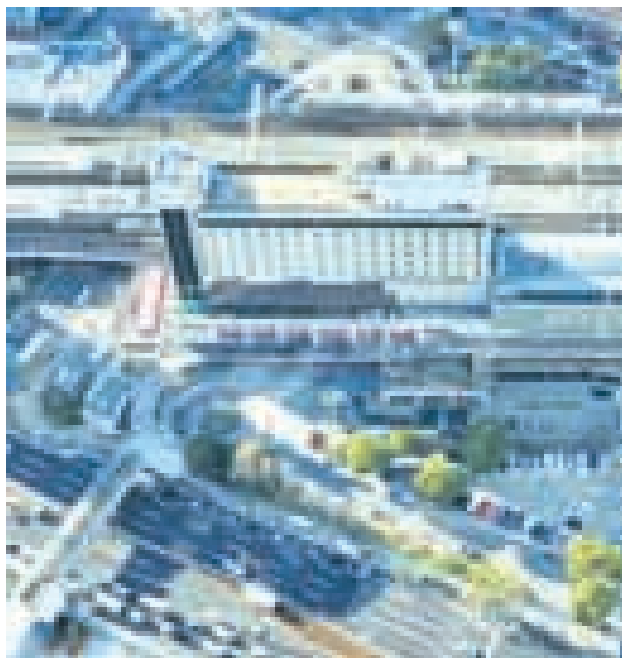

Subject to the renewal plan is Sannomiya Terminal Building, which started its operation in 1981 and houses commercial facilities including a hotel, they said. The railway operator better known as JR West has obtained permission to drill a hot spring from the governor of Hyogo Prefecture in October last year for use at a planned hotel.

"It is true that we have obtained permission for drilling, but a specific purpose or when to start (drilling) is undecided," said an official of JR West. JR Sannomiya Station is one of the busiest stations of the railway operator, serving around 240,000 passengers a day. Several stations of private railway companies are located in close proximity.

More preparation needed before next TPP ministerial talks: Amari

TOKYO, 28 Jan — Japan's minister in charge of the Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade talks said on Tuesday preparations for trade negotiations need to be accelerated further if the next ministerial meeting proposed by the United States for February is to be held.

The next ministerial talks should be held "with confidence that we can conclude the negotiations. It will end in failure if we are left with plenty of difficult issues," Amari said at a press conference, suggesting the 12 TPP members are still not ready to bring thorny issues to the ministerial level.

Washington, which leads the ambitious trade liberalization talks, has proposed holding the next session in late February, hoping to see significant progress at an early date. The meeting has yet to be set.

Asked about whether Tokyo and Washington made progress during talks between US Trade Representative Michael Froman and Japan's trade minister Toshimitsu Motegi held Saturday on the fringes of the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland, Amari said the two sides struggled to come up with solutions for controversial issues. Japan's farm minister Yoshimasa Hayashi, who also met with Froman in Davos, said at a news conference on Tuesday that Japan and the United States are continuing talks at working level to find common ground on such issues as how to deal with tariffs Japan seeks to retain on sensitive farm products as well as auto trade issues. Hayashi said Japanese Deputy Chief Negotiator Hiroshi Oe is currently visiting the United States. The 12 countries bordering the Pacific Ocean have struggled to break an impasse over thorny issues.

Mexico says catches senior Knights Templar drug gang boss

MEXICO CITY, 28 Jan — Mexico said on Monday it had captured a leader of the Knights Templar, a violent drug cartel that has created a major security problem for President Enrique Pena Nieto. The attorney general's office said security forces arrested Dionisio Loya Plancarte, known as "El Tio" ("The Uncle"), a top member of the Knights Templar, which has clashed with vigilante groups in the western state of Michoacan this year.

He is the most senior member of the gang to be arrested. The Knights emerged from a split in another cartel in Michoacan known as La Familia and have controlled large swaths of the restive mountainous state in recent years, extorting farmers and local businesses and diversifying away from drug trafficking to activities such as mining. Plancarte is suspected of being the gang's go-between with corrupt security and justice officials, the attorney general's office said.

Mexico's government, which this month replaced top security officials in Michoacan, had offered a 30 million peso ($2.25 million) reward for information leading to Plancarte's arrest.

"It is a success, we are seeing the government doing its job and we are happy," Hipolito Mora, one of a clutch of vigilante leaders in Michoacan, told Milenio television. The Knights' confrontations in January with heavily armed vigilantes in Michoacan have stirred concerns about Pena Nieto's strategy to combat widespread lawlessness in Mexico.—Reuters

SDF paramedics to be given greater treatment discretion in emergencies

TOKYO, 28 Jan — The government is considering granting Self-Defence Forces paramedics more discretionary authority in treating the injured people if Japan is under attack from foreign military forces, a government source said on Monday. As the government of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe is seeking more security roles for the SDF abroad as part of his drive to redefine Japan's security framework, it has determined it is necessary to establish more effective logistic support system, according to the source.

Under the new plan, the Defence Ministry will allow SDF paramedics within five years to perform such medical procedures as creating an airway by cutting into the trachea and inserting a needle into the chest to release air and fluid, according to the source. But they will not be allowed to treat injured civilians. The SDF paramedics are required to work in line with the Emergency Life-Saving Technician's Act, which prohibits them from engaging in full-fledged medical operations, such as tracheotomy.

Japan is apparently trying to draw on US experience that the survival rates of US soldiers injured in the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq have improved since some military medics were allowed to perform full-scale medical procedures such as tracheotomy. The plan comes amid concern about a potential shortage of doctors in case of emergencies, as the SDF currently has around 800 staff qualified as doctors.

The number of SDF paramedics stands at about 9,000. Some experts warn that the envisioned change could be taken as Japan preparing the legal framework for the SDF to engage in actual fights.

Japan's Constitution forbids the use of force to settle international disputes, and the government has interpreted it to mean Japan cannot use the right of collective self-defence, or defending allies under armed attack. Abe is seen as making a final decision on whether Japan should be able to use the right, even as recent public opinion polls suggest the public remains divided, and the New Komeito party, the coalition partner of Abe's Liberal Democratic Party, is cautious about changing the constitutional interpretation. — Kyodo News

US opens preliminary probe into Toyota cars over brake issue

NEW YORK, 28 Jan — US safety regulators have begun a preliminary probe into complaints of brake failures in Toyota Motor Corp's Camry hybrid cars sold in the United States, regulatory and company officials said on Monday.

The complaints included two accidents, but no injuries have been reported so far. If the NHTSA concludes that there is a safety defect in the vehicles' brake system, Toyota may be asked to recall them. Toyota Motor Sales USA Inc said it will fully cooperate with the NHTSA.

Egypt's Sisi poised to announce presidency bid

CAIRO, 28 Jan — Three years after the "Arab Spring" toppled Hosni Mubarak, a secretive field marshal with a cult-like following is expected to announce his candidacy for the presidency of Egypt ahead of elections which he is expected to win easily.

Abdel Fattah al-Sisi has come under pressure to run from members of the public who reject the Islamist government he toppled last year, and from the armed forces who want a president who can face down growing political violence.

He has calculated that he can win the votes of those who backed Mohamed Mursi for president in 2012 simply because he represented change from the era of former air force commander Mubarak, ousted in the revolutions that swept the Arab world. But despite his present popularity, Sisi has no record as a democrat and has shown himself willing to use deadly force against those who disagree with him. Sisi has trodden a careful path to power since overthrowing Mursi, Egypt's first freely elected president, last July.

It's the kind of measured advance he has made all his life, from his childhood in the dirt lanes of Cairo's Gamaliya district, to the highest rank in one of the largest armies in the Middle East.

On Monday, the presidency announced he was promoted to field marshal from general. Friends and family speak of him of as a man of few words and decisive action.

"He loved to listen and carefully study what was said. After he heard many opinions then he would suddenly strike," said his cousin Fathi al-Sisi, who runs a shop selling handicrafts.

"Abdel Fattah had one thing in mind: work, the military, rising to the top." The world knew little of Sisi before he appeared on television on 3 July and announced the removal of Mursi after mass protests against the Islamist leader.

It was Mursi who appointed Sisi army chief of staff and defense minister in August 2012, perhaps his gravest mistake.

Mauritania is country of million opportunities

NOUAKCHOTT, 28 Jan — Mauritanian President Mohamed Ould Abdel Aziz said on Sunday that his country, which was initially referred to as the "country of a million dreamers," can today be referred to as the "country of a million opportunities."

The president justified this label by considering the country's economic performance and its stable environment.

Abdel Aziz was speaking before participants at an investments forum in Mauritania, attended by delegations from Saudi Arabia and international financial institutions.

"We have worked tirelessly in the last four years to create an environment that is investment friendly.

In this regard, we first secured our borders and provided security across the entire national territory," he said.

"We then consolidated macroeconomic stability, promoted transparency and reformed the judiciary," he added, noting that "Mauritania had adopted an investment code that protects investors."

"Today Mauritania protects investment and guarantees the rights of investors while ensuring they carry out their activities in better conditions," he concluded. The two-day meeting was equally attended by representatives of the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and the Islamic Development Bank.

LG Electronics Q4 profit doubles on strong Black Friday TV sales

SEOUL, 28 Jan — LG Electronics Inc beat analyst estimates by doubling its fourth-quarter profit as heavy promotional activity lifted TV sales during the post-Thanksgiving holiday shopping kickoff known as Black Friday in the United States.

As the $120 billion TV industry has peaked, the world's No.2 television manufacturer is now aggressively pushing to increase sales of high-end TV sets that boast curved and crispy screens with price tags of $7,000 to protect margins.

But earnings are set to be squeezed again this year as TV demand growth stagnates in the lucrative markets of advanced economies.

A slow recovery in its handset business will also continue to weigh on earnings growth, overshadowing a widely expected margin recovery at its bread-and-butter home appliances operation as it plans to launch new fridges and washers.

Operating profit totaled 238 billion won ($220 million) in October-December, the world's second-biggest TV maker after Samsung Electronics Co Ltd said in a statement on Monday.

That compared with the 223 billion won estimate of 35 analysts polled by Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S, as well as the 117 billion won of a year earlier and 218 billion won of July-September.

Shares in LG Electronics dropped 1 percent after the earnings announcement, versus a 1.2 percent fall in the wider market. The stock dropped 6 percent over the past six months, lagging a 1.5 percent gain in the KOSPI. The South Korean manufacturer said operating profit at its TV business reached 174 billion won from just 80 million won a year prior.

Its mobile business, ranked No.3 by shipments after Samsung and Apple Inc, swung to an operating loss of 43 billion won from profit of 56 billion won a year earlier, as the company spent more on marketing flagship products such as its G2 and G Pro smartphones.

The mobile loss came even after smartphone shipments grew to a record 13.2 million units, up 54 percent year on year.

"The positive impact of improved product mix was offset by higher marketing investments to strengthen LG's brand equity and intensified price competition," the company said in a statement.—Reuters

German business morale hits top level in 2-1/2 years

BERLIN, 28 Jan — German business morale climbed in January to its highest level since July 2011, suggesting Europe's largest economy is on track for a strong start to 2014 after growing only modestly last year.

The Munich-based Ifo think tank's business climate index, based on a monthly survey of some 7,000 firms, rose for a third straight month to 110.6, beating a Reuters consensus forecast for 110.0 and up more than a full point from a December reading of 109.5.

Ifo economist Klaus Wohlrabe said the strong survey suggested the German economy could grow by 0.5 percent in the first three months of the year. That would be a major improvement on the fourth quarter, when the economy is estimated to have grown by around a quarter of a percentage point.

Surveys last week showed the German private sector growing at its fastest pace in more than 2-1/2 years and investor morale staying close to its highest level in nearly eight years, pointing to decent growth at the start of 2014. "German businesses remain diehard optimists," said ING economist Carsten Brzeski.

But he warned that the economy's performance last year was not as strong as "soft" privately-produced survey evidence would have suggested.

"The small growth conundrum of the German economy continues. While soft indicators remain buoyant and both consumer and business confidence are close to all-time highs, hard data has been lagging behind and still is," he said. Still, the latest hard data has shown increases in industrial output, orders, exports and retail sales.

Successful operation on Chinese girl's duplicated organs

CHENGDU, 28 Jan — A 13-year-old Chinese girl who was born with duplicated, or "duplex," organs has received kidney surgery in southwest China's Sichuan Province, a local hospital said on Tuesday.

Born with duplex kidneys, two bladders, two uteruses and four fallopian tubes, Lanlan (alias) was diagnosed with a rare condition of congenital malformation of multi-system and multi-organ duplication, according to Hu Xianliang, vice president of the Women and Children's Centre Hospital in the provincial capital city of Chengdu.

Hu said both of Lanlan's kidneys are duplex and fused to the other. Each has a separate ureter, meaning that she has four kidneys and four ureters.

It is thought that the abnormality was caused during gestation. Doctors believe that Lanlan's mother was carrying twins, the embryo of one of which failed to grow into a child and instead fused with the other.

Lanlan received surgeries on her genital system and digestive system in 2004 in a hospital in the southern city of Guang-zhou.

"The surgeries in 2004 have fixed some of her malfunctioning organs," according to Hu, who operated the surgery.

His operation on her duplex kidneys on 21 January was also successful.

"The girl will be released soon and will return to an ordinary life," he said.

Google to buy artificial intelligence company DeepMind

NEW YORK, 28 Jan — Google Inc said on Sunday it had agreed to acquire privately held artificial intelligence company DeepMind Technologies Ltd.

Technology news website Re/code, which reported news of the deal earlier, said the price was $400 million, without disclosing where it got the information.

A Google spokesman declined to comment on the price. DeepMind representatives could not be immediately reached for comment.

Founded in London in 2012 by Demis Hassabis, Shane Legg and Mustafa Suleyman, DeepMind uses general-purpose learning algorithms for applications such as simulations, e-commerce and games, according to its website.

Google, which is working on projects including self-driving cars and robots, has become increasingly focused on artificial intelligence in recent years.

In 2012, it hired Ray Kurzweil, considered one of the leading minds in the field, and in May it announced a partnership with NASA and several universities to launch the Quantum Artificial Intelligence Lab.

Vodafone, BG lead Britain's FTSE slide to fresh five-week lows

LONDON, 28 Jan — Britain's FTSE 100 slipped to fresh 5-week lows on Monday, underperforming its European peers due to steep slumps in heavyweight mobile operator Vodafone and oil and gas firm BG Group.

Vodafone, the third biggest company in the FTSE 100, fell 6.4 percent after US mobile operator AT&T said it was not planning to take over the British-listed firm, thus putting an end to months of speculation. That drop alone took 27 points off the British blue-chip index, while BG Group contributed another 22 points of the drop.

Its shares fell 13.5 percent — on track for their worst day since October 2012 — after the company warned that production this year and next would fall short of expectations, calling its guidance for 2014 "disappointing" due to ongoing problems in Egypt.

"The overall sentiment is extremely negative," said Jordan Hiscott, trader at Gekko Global Markets. "This morning we are seeing real money accounts exiting BG on this shock profit warning, which shows a dramatic shift in sentiment."

Prior to the news, BG has been rated 'buy' or 'strong buy' by 15 analysts and 'hold' by 10, against just three 'sell' recommendations, according to Thomson Reuters Eikon data.—Reuters

Incident in Rakhine State clarified to ambassadors, UN agency officials

YANGON, 28 Jan—A press conference on incident in Rakhine State was held at the hall of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, here, this afternoon.

Union Minister for Foreign Affairs U Wunna Maung Lwin made clarifications. He said:

We have organized a briefing on the incident that had occurred in Maungtaw Township in Rakhine State.

This incident was already mentioned in the State news papers of 23.1.2014, accord-quest to ensure that all news-breaking stories and news alerts are accurate, impartial and free of bias.

President U Thein Sein has instructed to form an independent investigation team to conduct an investigation on that incident.

Central Committee for Peace Stability and Development of Rakhine State will send a separate team to the Maungtaw district to investigate.

Myanmar National Hu-

Mr. ZarhinGir, and Ms. Babra Brista (UNOCHA) and Resident Coordinator of UNHCR Mr. Roka Kodo who had visited the areas and met with the villagers.

In addition, representatives of the Rakhine Conflict investigation Commission had also made an investigation regarding the incident.

Conclusion that this incident which took place on the night of 13 January 2014 was an isolated event and was not connected to any other incidents as alleged by some medias.

However in expressing concerns by some organizations and countries on the recent incident, they mentioned about death of people, injuries, damage to the village in the events which never took place.

I would like to stress that the Government of Myanmar is giving priority to the peace and stability of Rakhine State. It is important that communal peace and harmony to be prevailed in Rakhine State.

These Agencies and INGOs should communicate to the Rakhine State Government as well as to the focal ministries if they require any assistance. The government is ready to give verification on any news that they want to verify.

village-tract in which Bengalis are majority, accounting for 80 %.

According to statistics of Ducheertan middle village where the incident occurred, the village where 1030 people and 140 households are residing in it is home to the majority of Bengalis.

Khayay Myaing police post and No (13) police battalion take the responsibilities of ensuring security and the rule of law in cooperation with the village administrators, religious leaders and local people.

The statement of the Ministry of Home Affairs concerning the incident occurred on 13 January was reported in dailies issued on 23 January.

In search of missing Police Sergeant Aung Kyaw Thein by officials concerned, townselders and search teams the following day, blood-stained pieces of Sergeant Aung Kyaw Thein's torn-up uniform, parts of the sergeant's police equipment, his jungle-boot and an empty M 22 magazine were found in the Arabic school and near the Ismai mosque situated in the vicinity of the village.

According to saying of witnesses, nine suspects on 15 January, six on 17 January and one on 18 January, totaling 16 were detained and investigations are underway to remand them in police custody for interrogation.

For a search and arrest of suspects, officials invited administrators of urban wards in Maungtaw and villages, townselders, mawlawi and locals to hold a meeting at a primary school in the township on 19 January and called for their cooperation in the efforts for the arrest of suspects.

On 20 January, a clarification on the well-plotted terrorist act was made at a meeting attended by departmental officials, parliamentarians, townselders, ward administrators, mawlawis and locals totaling 1600 at the hall of Maungtaw Township General Administration Department.

While the situation at Ducheertan area was stable, false reports of some news agencies appeared. So, the Rakhine State chief minister, UNHCR and UNOCHA representatives and State Hluttaw representatives of Buthidaung and Maungtaw Townships made an inspection tour of Ducheertan village-tract, enquiring of the situation, visiting the places where the incidents occurred and providing necessary assistance to villagers who returned the village.

On 23 January, a team of Sittway-based Investigation Commission on violence on Rakhine State investigated the Ducheertan incident in order to probe the situation and to demonstrate transparency.

Fleeing villages are returning their homes. A total of 431 people from 75 households have returned home up to date and they are being provided with emergency aid by officials.

Police protected properties of villagers as there arose lootings during the time when villagers were away. Strict security measures were undertaken in order to avoid allegations made against the police by destructive elements who actually destroyed and set fire to houses.

According to investigations, the Police Sergeant and party conducted a regular police patrol together with local administrations.

According to information, eleven of those who committed the violence are now in the neighbouring country, seeking awards for the Ducheertan incident from RSOs.

Some UN agencies and foreign news agencies issued reports based on unjustified (See page 9) ing to the on ground inspection and verified information.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs has also issued a press release on 24-1-2014 to give clear information and message.

However, some of the international medias and some groups had continued to produce unverified information and illogical opinions.

When International Organizations carry out their reportings it is very important that the information they used in the report to be authentic and from reliable and credible sources.

In this regard, I would like to highlight some of the points prescribed in the UNGA resolution A/RES/66/81 A-B (9-12-2011) which stresses that the public information given by UN Agencies needs to be accurate objective and balanced in all four mass media. It also reiterates UNGA's reman Rights Commission has proposed to make a field trip Maungtaw District in a few days.

Rakhine Conflict Investigation Commission will also send a separate investigation team to the affected area.

Since the international communities have interest in the reform process taking Myanmar and expressing the recognition and support. Positive cooperations and assistance were rendered to Myanmar Government for that we would like to express our appreciations. At the same time we notice that there are concerns over the recent incidents in Rakhine State.

It is found that these concerns have originated from the unfound news and unverified information.

Union Minister for Home Affairs Lt-Gen Ko Ko made a clarification. He said:

Fruits of cooperation

On the right track of political and economic reforms, Myanmar is increasingly cooperating with global nations including the United Nations and international organizations and this never-before cooperation is starting to bear fruits.

Myanmar people will be able to enjoy the fruits of the country's worldwide cooperation soon. The second Myanmar Development Cooperation Forum was held in Nay Pyi Taw on 27-28 January. During the forum, the World Bank and donor countries encouragingly demonstrated their commitments to development of Myanmar.

It is learnt that the World Bank will significantly increase its assistance to Myanmar in the years to come. The World Bank said that it would provide USD 2000 million to Myanmar for public and private long-term projects. The larger proportion of the World Bank's contribution will go into agriculture, health and energy sectors, which are the priorities of Myanmar. The World Bank President Jim Yong Kim said that the World Bank would spend USD 1 billion in the coming five years in expanding national grid in Myanmar where 70 % of national population live without electricity.

Investment in electricity sector will improve the living standard of citizens while creating jobs and favourable business environment. Investment in health sector will benefit not only the citizens but also the country. Each dollar invested in health sector will make a profit of 9 to 20 dollars in any sector. The World Bank's financial assistance will also go to agricultural sector of Myanmar. Though Myanmar has large acreage of farmland with access to irrigation water, the lack of technology has always limited the agricultural output, thereby reducing the potential of Myanmar's agricultural economy. The World Bank's assistance will bring technology to farmers who constitute 70% of national population, enabling them to improve their livelihoods.

Other donor countries also promised a contribution of USD 800 million in coming three or four years on the occasion. This contribution will be allotted to socio-economic improvement of people and poverty alleviation scheme. No doubt this is the result of none other than the cooperation and unity of entire national people. This is what makes global nations take a different view on Myanmar. Therefore, the entire national people are to continue cooperating in unity and amity to be able to enjoy more fruits.

Second point is that organizations needs to release reports based on reliable sources. As the situation could be complicated by false reporting that could jeopardize the rule of law, take notice of what local people would not forgive

Japan's corporate service prices rise for 1st time in 5 years

TOKYO, 28 Jan — Corporate service prices in Japan gained 0.5 percent in 2013 from the prior year, the first rise in five years since 2008, due partly to higher yen-denominated prices for international air-freight amid the weakening yen, the Bank of Japan said on Tuesday.

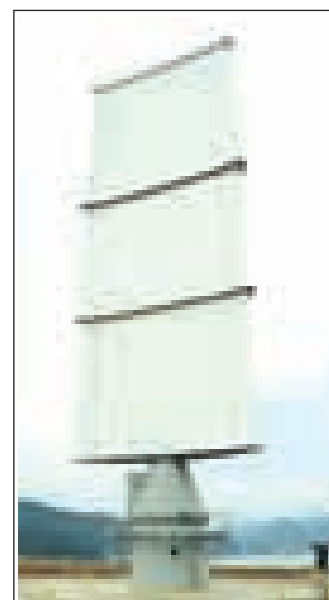

The central bank's index of corporate service prices stood at 96.3 against the 2005 base of 100, the central bank said in a preliminary report.

The rise also reflected increasing prices of civil engineering and architectural services as well as waste disposal amid growing construction demand.

Transportation prices climbed 2.2 percent, while other services, a category that includes civil engineering and architectural services as well as hotels, increased 0.5 percent, the BOJ said.

Shots fired as Thai PM meets, election body warns of chaos

Anti-government protesters shout slogans during a rally outside the Army Club where Thailand's Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra is holding a cabinet meeting in Bangkok on 28 Jan, 2014.

REUTERS

BANGKOK, 28 Jan — Shots were fired at a Thai army facility where the prime minister was meeting on Tuesday and two people were hurt, an anti-government protest leader said. Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra was meeting the Election Commission at an army complex to try to settle on a date for a general election. The Commission says the government's plan to hold the vote next Sunday is too soon, given the unrest in the country, and wants it delayed by up to four months.

"Someone fired shots. One protester was hurt and the man who fired the shots was hurt too. They have been sent to different hospitals," Chumpol Jumsai, a protest leader who was at the facility in north Bangkok, told Reuters. The shots were fired far away from where the meeting was taking place and near where about 500 anti-government protesters had gathered. Yingluck dissolved parliament in December and called the election to try to appease protesters trying to overthrow her. They have rejected the election, wanting political reform before any poll, and on Sunday they prevented advance voting in many parts of the capital.

"Today, we are here to show the government what obstacles lie ahead if it holds the February 2 election," Somchai Srisuthiyakorn, a member of the Election Commission, told reporters as he went into the meeting. "We believe chaos will ensue ... Our new recommendation is to hold elections within three or four months," he added. The Commission believes security cannot be guaranteed on February 2. It also says candidates have been unable to register in some constituencies, meaning there would not be a quorum to open parliament even if voting went ahead.

Anti-graft party to field dozens of candidates in India general election

NEW DELHI, 28 Jan — The young anti-graft party that stormed to power in India's capital Delhi last month plans to field at least 73 candidates in national elections due by May to stand against politicians accused of crimes, its founder said on Monday. Following its strong performance in Delhi, interest in the year-old Aam Aadmi — Common Man — Party has surged. Since an announcement earlier this month that it would contest the general election, its membership has passed 10 million. Until now the party had not said how many of the 540 lower house parliamentary seats it might contest in an election pitting the centre-left governing coalition against front runner opposition candidate Narendra Modi.

While polls suggest the debutant party is unlikely to win more than a dozen or so seats, its success in Delhi has shaken up the national race, with Modi's Bharatiya Janata Party and the ruling Congress party both aping Aam Aadmi's anti-elite, anti-corruption language. Even a small clutch of seats for the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) could be enough to deny Modi a chance at forming a government, and give AAP chief Arvind Kejriwal a say in national policy. The AAP will put up candidates in constituencies of 73 members of parliament who face serious criminal charges. Candidates will also stand for the seats of central government ministers which the party believes are corrupt, Kejriwal said in an interview with Reuters.

"The most important thing is there are a large number of cabinet ministers who have indulged in corruption, they need to be defeated," Kejriwal said. "There are nearly 162 people in Lok Sabha who have criminal charges against them and there are 73 out of them who have serious charges against them."

Kerry says working toward “true partnership” with Pakistan

US Secretary of State John Kerry

WASHINGTON, 28 Jan — US Secretary of State John Kerry said on Monday that he has been working toward a “true partnership” with Pakistan since taking office a year ago. The top American envoy made the remarks as he reopened the US- Pakistan strategic dialogue at the State Department with Sartaj Aziz, the adviser to Pakistani Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on national security and foreign affairs.

“We all know there’ve been occasional hiccups and challenges, but we really believe that there are fundamental interests that we need to unite around, and particularly in economic and security spheres,” Kerry said. The dialogue was initiated in 2010 and three sessions were held in quick succession in March, July and October that year, but had been held off since over disputes including a unilateral US military raid that killed al-Qaida chief Osama bin Laden inside Pakistan in 2011.

“I think many of you know this, but building stronger ties with the people of Pakistan — I emphasize, with the people of Pakistan broadly writ — has been a personal commitment of mine for some period of time,” Kerry said. “Particularly since I was nominated by President (Barack) Obama to serve as secretary of state, I’ve been pleased to work to elevate this relationship to a true partnership,” he added. Washington-Islamabad ties have warmed since Sharif took over the premiership in May 2013, and Kerry made a trip to the South Asian nation in August.

Sharif met with Obama at the White House in October that year over counterterrorism, Afghanistan and trade ties, making him the first Pakistani premier to visit the United States in five years. Kerry lauded the reform efforts by Sharif and his cabinet, saying, “The United States has no doubt that Prime Minister Sharif’s policies will put Pakistan on a path towards a more prosperous future, and we fully support his goal of making Pakistan’s marketplace a tiger economy for the 21st century.”—Reuters

Gunmen kill 22 in Nigeria church attack

YOLA, (Nigeria), 28 Jan — Attackers armed with guns and explosives killed 22 people at a busy church service in a northeast Nigerian village, witnesses said on Monday, in a region where Islamist sect Boko Haram is resisting a military crackdown.

They set off bombs and fired into the congregation in the Catholic church in Waga Chakawa village in Adamawa state on Sunday morning, before burning houses and taking residents hostage during a four-hour siege, witnesses said.

President Goodluck Jonathan is struggling to contain Boko Haram in remote rural regions in the country’s northeast corner, where the sect first launched an uprising in 2009.

The shady sect, which wants to impose sharia law on a country split roughly equally between Christians and Muslims, has killed thousands over the past four and a half years and is considered the biggest security risk in Africa’s top oil exporter and second largest economy after South Africa.

Its fighters’ favorite targets have traditionally been security forces, politicians who oppose them and Christian minorities in the largely Muslim north.

The spokesman for the Catholic Diocese of Yola, Reverend Father Raymond Danbouye, confirmed 22 people killed in the attack were buried at a funeral on Monday. The military and police did not respond to requests for comment but one army source confirmed the attack, asking not to be named because he wasn’t authorized to speak with the media.

Waga Chakawa is near the border with Borno state, in which there was a separate assault on Monday by suspected members of the shady sect in Kawuri village, witnesses said.

HK to cull chickens, ban trade after H7 flu found

HONG KONG, 28 Jan — Hong Kong will suspend imports of live chickens from mainland China and the trading of live chickens for 21 days after a batch of chickens from China’s Guangdong Province tested positive for the H7 avian flu virus on Monday.

Food and Health Secretary Ko Wing-man said that starting on Tuesday, about 20,000 live birds at the Cheung Sha Wan market, the territory’s largest poultry wholesale market, will be culled and trade suspended for 21 days until 18 February for cleansing and disinfection work. “This is the first time imported chickens tested positive for H7 avian flu,” Ko told reporters. “The mainland will suspend the supply of live poultry to Hong Kong from the registered farm found to be the source of the outbreak for 21 days.”

Ko said he has asked mainland authorities to investigate the source of the infection and step up surveillance, while local chicken farms will be inspected and wholesale market workers closely watched. Hong Kong imports about 4,000 live chickens from mainland China everyday, in addition to the local supply. The ban means that live chicken dishes will be off the menu for the Chinese New Year starting Friday. Live chickens are used for ancestral worshipping and a local cuisine for major banquets.

Since the H7N9 bird flu emerged in China in March last year, about 250 people have been infected, including three cases reported in Hong Kong whose sources of infection were likely in mainland China. Chinese health authorities said Monday that four new cases of human infection with the H7N9 strain of avian flu have been detected in southern China, bringing the total number of infections in the country so far this year to 101.

Beatles, mass wedding attract big TV audience to Grammys

LOS ANGELES, 28 Jan — Beatles, robots and a mass wedding drew 28.5 million viewers to the Grammy awards television broadcast on Sunday night, the show's second-largest audience in two decades, CBS Corp's broadcast network CBS said on Monday.

French electronic-music duo Daft Punk, known for their robot-inspired outfits, took home four awards including album and record of the year, and New Zealand's 17-year-old newcomer Lorde won two, including song of the year.

Viewership was up from last year's Grammys, when 28.1 million viewers tuned into the show, and is the second-largest audience for the Grammy telecast since 1993.

The 2012 show attracted 39.9 million viewers, the second-largest

Grammy TV audience ever, thanks largely to British singer Adele's six wins and performance comeback after throat surgery and the drowning death of singer Whitney Houston in a bathtub in a Beverly Hills hotel the night before show.

On Sunday night's show, Seattle-based rapper-producer duo Macklemore & Ryan Lewis was named best new artist among four wins. The pair presided over the night's most dramatic moment when 33 same-sex and heterosexual couples were married live on air during a performance of their gay rights ode "Same Love." They were joined by Madonna and Queen Latifah on stage.

The 56th annual Grammys also saw a rare performance by the two surviving members of The Beatles, as Paul McCartney on piano and Ringo Starr on drums came together to sing the new song "Queenie Eye."

The reunion came ahead of the Recording Academy's tribute to the 50th anniversary of The Beatles appearing on "The Ed Sullivan Show" in February 1964, credited with launching rock music's British Invasion.

The 3-1/2-hour show was a hot topic on social media, with 15.2 million Tweets about the Grammys during the East Coast broadcast, a Twitter spokesman said. The most-Tweeted about performance came midway through the show, when alt-rock group Imagine Dragons and rapper Kendrick Lamar came together for a high-octane mash-up of their songs, garnering more than 172,000 Tweets per minute.

Jai Ho won't break box office records: Trade analyst

NEW DELHI, 28 Jan — It stars superstar Salman Khan and has masala aplenty — but Jai Ho could manage to garner barely over Rs 17 crore on its opening day at the domestic box office. Trade experts say in comparison to the star's previous films, this won't create any fireworks in terms of records.

Reportedly made on a budget of Rs 75 crore, Jai Ho hit about 4,500 screens in India. It collected Rs 17.55 crore in the country on Friday, according to an official statement.

"As per my knowledge, it's less than Rs 17 crore. The figure is quite low," Rajesh Thadani from Multimedia Combines told IANS.

"When Ek Tha Tiger released in 2012, it collected around Rs 30 crore on its opening day," he added.

Directed by Salman's brother Sohail, the movie, which also stars newcomer Daisy Shah along with Tabu and Danny Denzongpa, is a political thriller with a heavy dose of action sequences featuring Salman.

Coincidentally, Salman's super hits Wanted, Dabangg, Dabangg 2 and Ek Tha Tiger — were all action-packed dramas. And

Arsenal say manager Wenger to stay at club

LONDON, 28 Jan — Manager Arsene Wenger is set to sign a new contract to extend his 18-year stay with the English Premier League leaders, the club's chief executive said on Monday.

Wenger will have more money to spend on players this summer after the club signed a new kit supply deal with German company Puma that begins on 1 July.

Chief Executive Ivan Gazidis gave the clearest indication yet that Frenchman Wenger would remain at Arsenal, indicating that finalising a new contract was just a matter of time.

"We've always supported Arsene, the board has always been completely behind him as has (owner) Stan Kroenke," Gazidis told a news conference when asked about the future of the manager whose contract runs out at the end of the season.

"We are comfortable in the position, relaxed about it. As I've said before, Arsene will be extending with us and at the right time we'll make that announcement," he added.

Wenger has been Arsenal manager since 1996 and has led the club to three Premier League titles and four FA Cups. However, the trophies have dried up since 2005 although Arsenal have continued to qualify for the Champions League.

Arsenal manager Arsene Wenger

The Puma deal, worth around 30 million pounds a season, will help Arsenal to compete with the top clubs in Europe in the transfer market. "One of our long-term goals has been to increase our commercial revenues and there is a football reason for that, it's to be able to invest that in our squad," Gazidis said.

"So this is a very important step in terms of our progression on the pitch and as we look from this summer onwards, that money will be available to the manager," he added.

Puma has ousted Nike as the kit supplier to Arsenal in a deal that starts on 1 July. Helped by an enhanced sponsorship deal with airline Emirates, the north London club spent a club record 42.5 million pounds on German Mesut Ozil at the start of this season.—Reuters

Nadal should recover quickly, says coach

Rafael Nadal of Spain receives treatment during his men's singles final match against Stanislas Wawrinka at the Australian Open 2014 tennis tournament in Melbourne on 26 Jan, 2014.
REUTERS

MADRID, 28 Jan — Rafa Nadal should recover from the back problem that wrecked his Australian Open final after a few days rest, his uncle and coach Toni told Spanish radio on Monday.

The ailing world number one lost to Swiss Stanislas Wawrinka in Sunday's final, preventing the Spaniard drawing level on 14 grand slam singles titles with American Pete Sampras.

Nadal needed lengthy treatment at the start of the second set, hit back to win the third but Wawrinka eventually captured his debut slam with a 6-3, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 success.

His uncle told Cadena

Ser's El Larguero show his nephew planned to return to his native Mallorca from Melbourne before heading to Argentina where he is due to take part in a clay event in Buenos Aires starting on 10 February.

"The doctor said it's a tightening of the muscles and a few days rest should be enough," said Toni.

"He went into the match after feeling twinges during the week but very minor ones that normally do not affect you at all.

"In the second game of the second set he felt a pinch. When I asked him after treatment what was happening he said 'it's over'."

South Korea's Lee banned for missing dope tests

SEOUL, 28 Jan — South Korea's Olympic badminton gold medallist Lee Yong-dae has been hit with a one-year ban for missing doping tests, the Badminton World Federation (BWF) said on Tuesday.

The 25-year-old won mixed doubles gold at the 2008 Games in Beijing and a bronze medal in the men's doubles in London four years later. Another Korean player, Kim Ki-jung, was also banned for one year.

The ban was effective until 23 January, 2015, the federation said in a statement, meaning the players would miss the Asian Games in Incheon later this year.

"Korean badminton players Kim Ki-jung and Lee Yong-dae have each received a one-year sanction for violating the requirements relating to filing whereabouts information and resulting missed tests under the BWF Anti-Doping Regulations," the BWF said.

"Kim and Lee were required to provide whereabouts information for the BWF to conduct out-of-competition testing. In 2013, both athletes accumulated three whereabouts failures in connection with this administrative process."

The BWF said it chose not to dish out the maximum two-year ban "due to the Badminton Korea Association's failure ... to make diligent efforts to keep the BWF informed about the players' whereabouts."

A doping hearing panel recommended that the Korean association should be fined and the BWF said it would determine whether additional sanctions were appropriate.

Both players have the right to appeal the decision to the Court of Arbitration for Sport, the statement said. South Korea's badminton association is scheduled to hold a news conference in Seoul later on Tuesday.—Reuters

Swansea sign French striker Ngog

LONDON, 28 Jan — Swansea City have completed the signing of French striker David Ngog from Bolton Wanderers, the Premier League club said on Monday. The former Paris St Germain and Liverpool forward has joined Swansea for an undisclosed fee until the end of the season.

"It's a delight for me," Ngog told the Swansea website. "I think Swansea are a very good club. They have shown over the last couple of years that they are a good Premier League side. "Swansea are a team who like to keep the ball and play good football. The manager (Michael Laudrup) was obviously a top player and as a manager he has proven he is very good as well. It will be really interesting to work with him." Swansea have slipped to 15th in the Premier League table and have been short of attacking options since losing last season's leading scorer Michu to injury last month.

Ngog could make his debut in the home league game against fellow strugglers Fulham on Tuesday.

The 24-year-old Ngog, who scored 19 goals in 94 games during his three years at Liverpool, joined Championship club Bolton for 4.0 million pounds ($6.63 million) in 2011.

Marussia to miss first day of testing

JEREZ, 28 Jan — Marussia will miss the start of Formula One's pre-season testing on Tuesday after a problem with their new car delayed its arrival in Spain.

A spokeswoman said the car had yet to leave the factory in Banbury in central England, due to what team principal John Booth called "a small and frustrating teething problem." "It makes sense to address this while we still have all of the equipment and technical personnel in one place," added the Briton.

Marussia, who have switched to Ferrari engines this season and have Britain's Max Chilton and Frenchman Jules Bianchi as drivers, have their trucks set up in the Jerez paddock along with nine of the other 11 teams.

Lotus are not attending what will be the first test of the new V6 turbocharged engines and their complex energy recovery systems. "Our aim is to solve this issue as soon as possible and send the MR03 on its way to Jerez," said Booth, whose team finished 10th overall last year without scoring a point.

More chemical weapons materials leave Syria: joint inspection mission

UNITED NATIONS, 28 Jan — The second batch of chemical weapons materials was loaded onto ships on Monday and transported out of Syria for destruction following the first consignment on 7 January, a UN spokesman said, quoting a report by the joint mission of the chemical weapons watchdog and the United Nations.

"The Joint Mission of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) and the United Nations says that a further shipment of chemical weapons materials from Syria has taken place today," acting UN deputy spokesman, Farhan Haq, said at a daily news briefing here. "The chemical weapons were verified by Joint Mission personnel before being loaded in Latakia port onto Danish and Norwegian cargo vessels for onward transportation," he said.

However, the joint mission did not say how much of the chemical weapons materials was loaded onto the vessels. "The vessels were accompanied by a naval escort provided by the People's Republic of China, Denmark, Norway and the Russian Federation," he said. —Xinhua

Germany's Puma ousts Nike as Arsenal kit supplier

LONDON, 28 Jan — German sportswear company Puma will become the kit supplier to English football club Arsenal from next season in a deal worth more than 30 million pounds a year to the Premier League leaders. Puma has ousted US group Nike which has provided Arsenal's red and white shirts for the past two decades.

The deal with Arsenal shows Puma's determination to re-establish itself as a core sports brand under new CEO Bjorn Gulden after moving more into lifestyle and fashion.

"Arsenal represents a major commercial and marketing opportunity to reinforce Puma's credibility as a global sports brand," Gulden said.

Puma, which supplies kit to German football club Borussia Dortmund and national teams including Italy, said it was aiming to establish itself as the clear number-three football brand behind market leaders Adidas and Nike.

Puma, majority owned by French luxury goods company Kering, warned in November that 2013 net profit would fall far below the 70 million euro figure in 2012. Gulden denied that Puma had overspent to win the Arsenal deal.

"Our analysis shows this is a good deal for us," he told Reuters. "We are convinced that this is the best deal that we could do. It's the team that fits us, it's a good commercial deal and will bring a lot for our image." Puma has also acquired the rights to produce other branded Arsenal merchandise that will be sold to fans around the world.

Financial details were not disclosed but Puma said the deal was the biggest ever for both itself and Arsenal. In 2012, Arsenal signed a contract renewal with airlines Emirates for shirt and stadium sponsorship worth 150 million pounds over five years.

Arsenal CEO Ivan Gazidis said the club had held talks with several sportswear companies before choosing Puma.

"They are a substantial company with the kind of scale that a club like Arsenal needs as we reach out to our global fan base," he told Reuters.

Arsenal were also impressed by Puma's focus on the club rather than juggling several big name partnerships.

"We'll be one of their primary partners," Gazidis said. He also told the news conference that the club expected manager Arsene Wenger to stay on at the club.

The Puma deal is no surprise after news of it leaked on social media late last year. However, Arsenal fans are likely to press the club to spend heavily before the player transfer window closes at the end of the month to boost the team's push for a first trophy since 2005.

Nike remain the kit suppliers to Manchester United and Manchester City. The Nike deal was worth 38 million pounds for United in 2012-13, including the club's share of profits from merchandise sales. United and Nike are in negotiations on a new deal. —Reuters
