Myanmar seeks more investment from Japanese firms

By Yoshio Takahashi

TOKYO, 28 Aug—A Myanmar official in charge of foreign firms' investment on Thursday called on Japanese companies to invest more in the Southeast Asian country as the government is stepping up efforts to invite more foreign investments.

"We encourage Japanese investors to come and invest in Myanmar more and more," Cho Cho Wynn, deputy director general of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration, said at a seminar on her country hosted by the Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi UFJ, the core banking unit of Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group Inc.

The amount of Japan's investment in Myanmar ranks 10th, accounting for only 0.7% of the total foreign investment in the country, far behind the top three investors, China, Thailand and Hong Kong.

Japanese companies tend to take more time in conducting feasibility and other studies than other countries' investors before making a final decision, the official said. But once they decide on their investment projects, that is always huge contribution to the Myanmar economy, she added.

Myanmar emerged as the last untapped potential market in Southeast Asia after the country's military rulers gave way to a nominally civilian government in 2011, opening the resource-rich country to foreign investors.

Myanmar seeks more investment...

A fivefold growth in nominal gross domestic product over the last decade and the fifth-biggest population in Southeast Asia of over 60 million are attracting a number of companies from Asia, Europe and the United States.

Companies are also encouraged by a new foreign investment law enacted by the Myanmar government in 2012 in an effort to clarify rules that foreign companies need to know when they look to invest in the country.

"Myanmar is beginning to face a dramatic change now," Takeshi Morimura, deputy president at BTMU, said in an opening speech at the seminar.

Among recent plans unveiled by Japanese firms to enter the country, telecom company KDDI Corp. and trading house Sumitomo Corp. last month signed an agreement to jointly operate a mobile phone service in Myanmar with the state-run Myanmar Posts and Telecommunications.

BTMU, Sumitomo Mitsui Banking Corp. and Mizuho Bank also last month applied to the Myanmar government for banking licenses following a government policy change allowing a limited number of foreign banks to operate in the country.

Mirroring high interest in Myanmar among Japanese companies, a total of around 1,000 businesspeople from small to large firms attended the seminar which was held for three days through Thursday in Osaka, Nagoya and Tokyo. It was a record number of attendees for such a seminar, according to BTMU.—Kyodo

NAY PYI TAW, 28 Aug — The ASEAN Business Advisory Council has proposed a special “ASEAN Line” in its recommendations to ASEAN economic ministers to be introduced all major entries of ASEAN member states.

“It is also important to note that whilst there is now more freedom of movement across the region, there remain barriers of entries that hinder business travel across the region,” U Win Aung, chairman of the advisory council, said.

During the dialogue with ASEAN economic ministers Thursday in Nay Pyi Taw, ASEAN-BAC called on the ministers to support the council's implementation on past recommendations of ASEAN-BAC.

There remain a number of past recommendations of ASEAN-BAC that are still pending, according to the council.

The past recommendations of ASEAN-BAC, such as launching of the ASEAN Business Travel Card and the inclusion of women entrepreneurs in the economic pillar of ASEAN's cooperation, need to be accelerated to be able to enhance trade and investment opportunities across the region, according to the business council.

The key areas prioritised by ASEAN-BAC this year are micro, small, and medium-sized enterprise, women and young entrepreneurs.

ASEAN-BAC will organise the ASEAN Business and Investment Summit and the ASE-

AN Business Award on 12–13 November in Nay Pyi Taw this year, focusing on MSMEs, women and young entrepreneurs, according the chairman of ASEAN-BAC.

The council has recognized that many of these policy recommendations might require long-term investments on structural economic reforms and could serve as constructive inputs to complement the present and future process of ASEAN's economic integration initiatives.

Thai court dismisses murder charges against former PM, deputy

BANGKOK, 28 Aug — A Thai criminal court on Thursday threw out charges of murder and abuse of power faced by a former prime minister, Abhisit Vejjajiva, and his then deputy over a deadly crackdown on street protesters in 2010.

The decision, three months after the army seized power in a bloodless 22 May coup, is sure to spark the anger of Thailand's "red shirt" activists, who have spotlighted the country's long culture of impunity for holders of political office.

But with power firmly in the hands of military rulers who have quelled all dissent, the court's decision will hardly make a ripple in the country's political trajectory.

The court said it did not have jurisdiction to hear the case because the two men held public office at the time of the protest.

"The court has no jurisdiction to consider the case because the two were a prime minister and deputy prime minister," a judge said on Thursday. "The charges relate to political office holders. The criminal court therefore dismisses the charges."

Thailand's public prosecutors had charged the two over the crackdown on protesters who were mostly from the red shirt movement, formally known as the United Front for Democracy Against Dictatorship (UDD). Both men have denied the charges.

Abhisit, head of the conservative, pro-establishment Democrat Party, faced popular opposition in 2010, after tens of thousands of red shirt activists demanding fresh elections took to the streets of the Thai capital, accusing his government of being elitist and army-backed.

India's Modi eyes breakthrough nuclear pact on Japan trip

NEW DELHI, 28 Aug — India is hoping to win Japanese backing for a nuclear energy pact during a visit by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, and lure investment into its $85 billion market while addressing Japan's concern about nuclear proliferation.

India has been pushing for an agreement with Japan on the lines of a 2008 deal with the United States under which India was allowed to import US nuclear fuel and technology without giving up its military nuclear programme.

But Japan wants explicit guarantees from India, which has not signed the international Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, to strictly limit nuclear tests and to allow more intrusive inspections of its nuclear facilities to ensure that spent fuel is not diverted to make bombs. India, which sees its weapons as a deterrent against nuclear-armed neighbours China and Pakistan, has sought to meet Japan's concerns and over the past month the two sides have speeded up negotiations ahead of Modi's visit.

"Serious efforts are being made to resolve any special concerns that Japan has. Whether it will be fully resolved and ready for signing before the end of the PM's trip is unclear," said a former member of India's top atomic energy commission who has been consulted in the drafting of the energy pact.

Modi and Abe will not seal an agreement at next week's summit, TV Tokyo reported on Thursday, but the meeting will be closely watched for any progress toward a pact.

Japanese officials were tight-lipped about prospects for a nuclear deal.

Modi travels to Japan on Saturday for a five-day visit, his first major bilateral trip since taking over in May. The visit is being billed as an attempt by the two democracies to balance the rising weight of China across Asia. Modi and host Prime Minister Shinzo Abe are also expected to strengthen defence ties, speeding up talks on the sale of an amphibious aircraft to the Indian navy.

Abe is keen to expand Japan's network of security partnerships with countries such as Australia and India to cope with the challenge presented by China.

The two leaders will agree to have their countries jointly produce mixed rare earth minerals and metals, key elements in defence industry components and modern technology, the Nikkei business daily said on Thursday. Another focus is infrastructure, with the Indian leader seeking Japanese backing for the high-speed 'bullet' trains he promised to voters in his election campaign.

But it is the nuclear pact that could transform ties in a way the deal with the United States did by establishing India as a strategic partner, although nuclear commerce with the United States has since foundered because of concern over India's liability laws.

Japanese companies are also reluctant to step in without clarity on nuclear disaster compensation, especially in the wake of the Fukushima catastrophe of March 2011, the world's worst since Chernobyl in 1986.

Malaysia, Australia to share costs for latest phase of MH370 search

SYDNEY, 28 Aug — Malaysia on Thursday said it would share with Australia the cost of the latest effort to uncover signs of missing Malaysia Airlines Flight MH370, in the hope of unlocking modern aviation's greatest mystery.

Months of searches have failed to turn up any trace of the missing Boeing 777 aircraft, which disappeared on 8 March, carrying 239 passengers and crew shortly after taking off from the Malaysian capital of Kuala Lumpur, bound for Beijing.

Malaysian Transport Minister Liow Tiong Lai told a news conference in Canberra that the two countries would evenly split the costs of the new search phase, estimated at up to A$52 million ($48.65 million). "So it is important here that we would like to thank Australia for leading this search and we have so far committed and spent about A$15 million and we are also going to match the Australians in the tender cost for the search," he said.

The latest phase of the search is expected to start within a month and take up to a year, focusing on a 60,000-sq-km (23,000-sq-mile) patch of sea floor some 1,600 km (1,000 miles) west of Perth.

Australia this month awarded a contract to Dutch engineering firm Fugro to search the sea floor, and the company is already conducting a detailed underwater mapping of the search area, along with a Chinese naval vessel. Fugro will use two vessels equipped with side scan sonar, multibeam echo sounders and video cameras to scour the seafloor, which is close to 5,000 m (16,400 ft) deep in places.

Australia has set aside A$80 million to A$90 million for the search, already the most expensive ever undertaken. Malaysia Airlines has been hit this year by the loss of two of its airliners, after Flight MH17 was shot down over a conflict zone in eastern Ukraine.— Reuters

Ex-PM Fukuda shares “sense of crisis” with Xi over frayed ties

Tokyo, 28 Aug — Former Japanese Prime Minister Yasuo Fukuda revealed on Wednesday he met with Chinese President Xi Jinping during his visit to Beijing last month and that they shared a “sense of crisis” over the strained ties between their countries.

Publicly admitting for the first time that he held a secret meeting with Xi, Fukuda said at a forum in Tokyo that they both “have the same sense of crisis” about bilateral ties soured by territorial and historical issues.

Tensions between Tokyo and Beijing centre on the ownership of the Japan-controlled, China-claimed Senkaku Islands in the East China Sea. China calls the uninhabited islets Diaoyu. The two countries also remain at odds over different perceptions of history.

Fukuda said there was a need for Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and Xi to hold talks on the sidelines of the summit of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum to be held in November in Beijing.

If the meeting does not take place, Japan-China ties will be in a “pretty difficult situation,” Fukuda said.

No summit talks have been held since Abe assumed the premiership for the second time in December 2012.

Fukuda, recounting his meeting with the Chinese leader in late July, said Xi was eager to mend Japan-China relations and “did not say anything bad about Japan” during their talks.

were on the same page over issues about China, Fukuda said he has communicated with Abe several times since last year.

Commenting on Fukuda’s remarks about his meeting with Xi, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Qin Gang said in Beijing that Japan “must take concrete actions to remove the political obstacles that affect development of bilateral relations.”

Qin said China maintains a “consistent” position on improving and developing bilateral relations.

China has said there will be no summit talks with Japan unless Tokyo acknowledges a dispute over the Senkakus.

Beijing also says a pledge by Abe not to make any more visits to the war-related Yasukuni Shrine in Tokyo is another condition for an Abe-Xi meeting.—Kyodo News

UNSG’s message for the International Day against Nuclear Tests

29 August 2014

On this day in 1991, Kazakhstan closed the nuclear test site near Semipalatinsk. On that same date in 1949, the Soviet Union conducted its first nuclear test, followed by another 455 nuclear tests over succeeding decades, with a terrible effect on the local population and environment.

These tests and the hundreds more that followed in other countries became hallmarks of a nuclear arms race, in which human survival depended on the doctrine of mutually assured destruction, known by its fitting acronym, MAD.

As Secretary-General, I have had many opportunities to meet with some of the courageous survivors of nuclear weapons and nuclear tests in Hiroshima, Nagasaki and Semipalatinsk. Their resolve and dedication should continue to guide our work for a world without nuclear weapons.

On this International Day against Nuclear Tests, let us all take a fresh look at those survivors’ stories. Listen to their words and imagine the effects of these detonations as if they were experienced by each of us. Only then can we better understand the imperative to renew our commitment to a world free of nuclear weapons and nuclear tests.

I wish to appeal particularly to citizens of those States that have not yet ratified the Comprehensive Nuclear Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT), especially the eight remaining Annex 2 States whose ratification is required for the Treaty’s entry into force: China, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, Egypt, India, Iran, Israel, Pakistan and the United States.

Together, let us demand an end to all nuclear tests, get on with the unfinished business of achieving a world free of nuclear weapons, and usher in a safer and more prosperous future.

US fighter plane crashes in Virginia, pilot’s fate unknown

WASHINGTON, 28 Aug — A Massachusetts Air National Guard F-15C fighter crashed in mountainous western Virginia on Wednesday and the fate of the pilot was unknown, officials said.

The fighter plane went down shortly after 9 am EDT (1300 GMT) in the George Washington and Jefferson National Forests about 100 miles (160 km) southwest of Washington, sending up a thick plume of smoke, a spokeswoman for the Augusta County Sheriff’s Office said.

“We have not located the wreckage or the pilot,” she said.

State and local police are trying to reach the crash site in mountainous terrain lacking cell phone coverage. There were no injuries on the ground, she said.

The single-seat plane was part of the 104th Fighter Wing of the Massachusetts Air National Guard, stationed at the Barnes Air National Guard Base in Westfield, Massachusetts.

Senior Master Sergeant Rob Sabonis, a wing spokesman, said the plane was on a cross-country flight for a system upgrade and was not carrying munitions.

The pilot reported an “inflight emergency” shortly before the base lost radio contact, he said. The pilot was not identified.

Colonel James Keefe, the wing’s commander, said in a statement: “We are not going to speculate on what occurred or the status of the pilot. We are hopeful that the pilot is OK, and the pilot will be in our thoughts and prayers as the events of this incident unfold.” The F-15 is a twin-engine fighter designed by McDonnell Douglas, a unit of Boeing Co It has been in US service since the 1970s.—Reuters

Grow more food but fairly distribute

By Kyaw Thura

Man is said to be a unique creature that possesses the ability to adapt itself to change as necessary.

With the current population of the world reaching over 7.2 billion, scientists are finding ways to develop alternatives to natural resources. Some have claimed that most resources are consumable but non-renewable.

A growing population implies that more resources are being used up at a faster rate than the world can support. Scholars have offered suggestions on how best to tackle the problem. They have come up with some ideas of reducing the cumulative impacts on the world's resources.

Strategies for sustainability and technological advances are seen as a way to diminish negative impacts on natural resources, promote efficient use of existing resources and preserve biodiversity through better management and fair distribution.

One thing to take into consideration is that the production of more food resources as an answer to feeding the growing population will not work in the long term. How to distribute these food resources is more critical.

It is clear that the world is witnessing a continuous growth of population, which demands new urbanizations and challenges economic prosperity and higher living standards. To satisfy these requirements, more food resources and energy resources are in urgent need.

For the production of food sources, encouragement should be given to organic horticulture. Energy resources adequate enough for those in need should be extracted from such alternatives as solar, wind, nuclear, and hydroelectric sources.

Only then will there be fewer impacts on the environment.

The United Nation's Initiative on Zero Hunger Challenge

By Bui Thi Lan, FAO Representative in Myanmar

The Zero Hunger Challenge was initially launched by the United Nations Secretary-General on the occasion of the Rio+20 Conference on Sustainable Development in Brazil in June 2012. It called on all societies in the world to join forces to end hunger and achieve sustainable development with the five objectives (i) 100% access to adequate food all year round, (ii) Zero stunted children under 2 years, (iii) All food systems are sustainable, (iv) 100% growth in smallholder productivity and income, particularly for women and (v) Zero loss or waste of food, including responsible consumption. These objectives fully coincide with those of FAO mandates which includes boosting smallholder farmers' productivity, establishing sustainable food systems and reducing food loss and wastes. The objectives are not ambitious but attainable in our lifetimes if broad collations are mobilized with strong political commitment and if food and nutrition security is treated as a priority at the top of national development agendas.

In responding to the call at global level, the message of the Zero Hunger Challenge was underpinned at the High Level

Consultation on Hunger, Food Security and Nutrition held in Madrid in April 2013, which called upon the world community to eradicate hunger, food insecurity and malnutrition by 2025 in a sustainable manner. The United Nations Regional Thematic Working Group on Poverty and Hunger in Asia and the Pacific (RTWG-PH), chaired by FAO and co-chaired by UNDP and ESCAP, set out the Zero Hunger Challenge in Asia and the Pacific which was officially launched by the United Nations Deputy Secretary-General on the occasion of the ESCAP's 69th Commission Session in April 2013. The Ministerial Conference on Regional Economic Cooperation and Integration in Asia and the Pacific, organized by ESCAP in December 2013 hosted a side event that presented the Regional Guiding Framework for Achieving Zero Hunger in Asia and the Pacific. This Regional Guiding Framework has been prepared in order to provide guidance to countries in the Asia-Pacific region for the formulation and implementation of actions to respond to the Zero Hunger Challenge towards attaining zero hunger in the region by 2025.

The Asia-Pacific region as a whole has made good progress in reducing the proportion of the population suffering from chronic hunger and poverty. According to the latest revised estimates made by FAO, WFP and IFAD, the proportion of the undernourished in this region declined from 24.1 percent in 1990-92 to 13.5 percent in 2011-13 and the hunger target under MDG Number 1 will be met if the proportion declines further to below 12 percent by 2015.

However, the remaining 12 percent represents the most vulnerable and disadvantaged groups of people in the society who are to be targeted if "zero hunger" must be achieved. Very large numbers of people still suffer from chronic hunger in the Asia-Pacific region in 2011-13 (552 million), which constitutes about two-thirds of the developing world's total (827 million). Moreover, in Asia and the Pacific, it is estimated that more than 100 million children under the age of 5 were stunted as of 2010. It should also be noted that about 2 billion people (about 30 percent of the global population) suffer from micronutrient malnutrition, while some 1.4 billion people are overweight, about one-third of whom are obese and at risk of coronary heart disease, diabetes or other health problems. At the same time, globally, over 1.3 billion tonnes of food (nearly one-third of annual food production) is lost and wasted every year. Food losses in developing countries of the region across the entire supply chain, including food consumption, are as high as 45 percent for fruits and vegetables and nearly 30 percent for cereals. Poorly functioning food supply chains and systems, as well as lack of awareness of the importance of reducing food waste and losses are some of the major causes of food loss and waste. Many Asian countries are struggling with the growing problem of food waste caused by retailers, the food service sector and consumers discarding edible food and left-over food into the garbage. One of the root cause of hunger is food insecurity which is a multidimensional challenge that needs to be addressed in an integrated manner through cross-sectoral solutions. Agriculture remains the primary key to addressing these challenges. To begin with, this sector is necessary to feed a population that is expected to exceed nine billion in 2050. Estimates point to the need of increasing agricultural output by 60 percent until then. Moreover, seventy percent of the world's undernourished live in rural areas in developing countries.

Billions of people depend directly on agriculture for food and employment, including 500 million small-scale subsistence farmers who do not produce enough food to feed themselves. They are among the most important managers of natural resources. Sustainable agriculture can be used to promote win-win situations, driving inclusive growth and poverty reduction in economically depressed rural areas. For example, small scale production can be supported and social protection programs strengthened, such as cash for work and cash transfer programs. The extra income can be used to buy food locally produced by smallholders in the same community.

The Way Forward

The Zero Hunger Challenge is aimed at ensuring that everyone has year-round access to adequate food, that there are no stunted children under 2 years of age, that all food systems are sustainable, that small farmers double their productivity and income, and that there is zero loss or waste of food by 2025.

At regional level, the Guiding Framework is presented to senior officials of the UN Member States in the region on the occasion of the Ministerial Conference on Regional Economic Cooperation and Integration in Asia and the Pacific convened by ESCAP in December 2013. The Conference, in its Bangkok declaration, recognizes the importance of the Zero Hunger Challenge for regional cooperation to assist countries with special needs, such as least developed countries, landlocked developing countries and small island developing States.

The ultimate goal of this Guiding Framework is to assist Member Countries in Asia and the Pacific in the formulation and implementation of zero hunger initiatives through the process of multi-stakeholder consultation and coordination at country level. It provides a desirable set of goals as well as guidance and support to translate the Challenge into concrete actions in the area of food security. Indeed, national-level actions are key for the success, which should be initiated as soon as possible. At the initial stage, a selected number of pilot countries may be identified to formulate a national action plan and implement the national Zero Hunger Challenge with the support from the UN team.

In January 2014, Timor-Leste became the first country to take on the national challenge. The Zero Hunger Challenge program in Timor-Leste was launched by the Prime Minister at a special session of the Parliament. It is a concrete example of country-level execution of the challenge including a National Action Plan and two fold coordination mechanisms for its implementation. Following Timor-Leste, Laos, Bangladesh, Nepal and Myanmar are now boarding on the National Zero Hunger Challenge.

Oxfam briefing paper calls on government, donors, private parties to invest in Myanmar's small scale farming

By Ye Myint

YANGON, 28 Aug — Oxfam, a global confederation of 17 organizations working with partners and local communities in more than 90 countries, launched a report titled "Delivering Prosperity in Myanmar's Dry Zone" on Thursday, calling on the government, donors and private investors to realize the economic potential of the agriculture sector on which livelihoods of more than 70 % of the country's population rely.

The report, based on findings as the result of research into small-scale agriculture in the Mandalay and Magway Regions, said rural people employed in small-scale farming encounter many barriers to gaining benefits from the country's agriculture sector.

The information was revealed at Chatrium Hotel in Yangon where a launch ceremony for the Oxfam briefing paper was held in conjunction with a panel discussion on Myanmar's agribusiness with farmer representatives and those from local and international organizations.

U Bobby, CEO of Network Activities Group that contributed its findings in Minbu to the report, said in the dry zone, where climate change causes a severe effect on the region's rain-fed agriculture, soil ability to retain water is very low, farmers cannot generate more income due to a lack of job opportunities after the harvest is over and loan disbursement varies depending on the crops they grow.

Voices of farmers at the roundtable discussions indicated their current predicaments include possible a farm-worker shortage due to the population shift from rural to urban areas that is intensified by the low market price for rice, inadequate water for their small-scale farms and rising interest rates that makes it impossible to repay debts.

U Kyaw Hsan Lin, a farmer from Thazi Township in Mandalay Region, pointed out that climate change, financial constraints and some rules and regulations that provide ineffective protection for farmers could force farmers to leave for the cities.

"We are very willing to keep doing agribusiness, but a question I would like to ask is who will improve our livelihood. I would like all stakeholders to really be aware of our problems and to provide us with effective protection," the Thazi farmer said.

The chairman of Myaungmya Farmers' Union criticized the system of contract farming because farmers have lost land they were living on due to the system, leaving them to end up squatting in the neighbourhood of a city.

According to the Oxfam briefing paper written in cooperation with its colleagues in Myanmar, parties concerned, including the government, donors and private investors, are encouraged to prioritize the needs of small-scale farmers rather than marginalizing and displacing them.

The right policies and investments could lead to success of the country's poverty alleviation and rural development scheme, it adds.—NLM

Singapore's Phillip Capital acquires Malaysian-owned Cambodian bank

PHNOM PENH, 28 Aug — The Singapore-based Phillip Capital Group has purchased a Malaysian-owned Hwang-DBS Commercial Bank in Cambodia for 40 million US dollars and rebranded it as Phillip Bank on Thursday, a bank's chief said.

Phillip Bank's chairman Lim Hua Min said the Phillip Capital Group, which is an Asian financial service provider, acquired the bank in March this year after Hwang-DBS (Malaysia) Bhd decided to exit its business in Cambodia.

"Cambodia has a young population with much promise and potential," he said in a Press conference. "Beyond microfinance and banking, our group is keen to expand our participation in other financial services, such as leasing, life insurance and general insurance."

He said the group has also held stakes in three microfinance institutions in Cambodia since 2009.

Neav Chanthana, deputy governor of the National Bank of Cambodia (NBC), said the presence of Phillip Capital Group clearly showed foreign investors' confidence in Cambodia's financial industry. "I have confidence that the new investment will bring new experience and technical expertise for the banking and financial development to the bank in particular and to the banking sector in general," she said. The Southeast Asian nation has the population of about 14.8 million with 35 commercial banks in operations. According to the NBC, those banks are serving approximately 2 million borrowers and 3 million depositors. As of June this year, a total asset in Cambodia's whole banking system was up to 14.5 billion US dollars, said Neav Chanthana.—Xinhua

China's economy faces challenges despite steady performance

BEIJING, 28 Aug — China's economy is facing multiple domestic and international challenges despite its steady performance in the past seven months, said a senior economic official in Beijing on Wednesday.

China is dealing with complicated situations with strong uncertainty at home and abroad, said Xu Shaoshi, minister in charge of the National Development and Reform Commission, during the ongoing bi-monthly meeting of the country's top legislature.

Internationally, the internal drive of a global recovery has remained weak and a strong rebound may not happen in the near future despite positive signs so far this year, Xu said, elaborating on a report regarding national economic and social development.

China's economy is going through key adjustments with serious problems and conflicts that hinder its stability, he said.

"The foundation for stable economic growth is not solid enough and there are things to be worried about behind the positive signs," he said.

To tackle these problems, in the following months the central government will continue stable macroeconomic policies and adopt flexible microeconomic policies, he said.

The government will speed up reforms in removing administrative approvals, industrial barriers, budget management and pushing forward private bank trials, he said.

Measures will be made to improve public service and encourage private capital to further open up the service sector.

The government will try its best to guarantee a good harvest of farm produce this year.

As for the country's exports, Xu said the focus will be on updating its export-oriented industries, encouraging service exports and cross-border e-commerce.

In the first half of this year, the country's economy grew by 7.4 percent year on year with an unemployment rate of 4.08 percent, both of which met expectations, according to Xu's report.

The net income of rural residents per capita increased by 9.8 percent year on year in the first half of this year while the disposable income of urban residents rose 7.1 percent.

From January to July, a total of 8.58 million new jobs were added, 140,000 more than the figure released at the same time last year.

The consumer price index increased by 2.3 percent, lower than the annual target of 3.5 percent. — Xinhua

Persistent inflation hurting India's sovereign ratings — Moody's

MUMBAI, 28 Aug — India's sovereign ratings are constrained by persistently high inflation that is weighing on an otherwise promising economic recovery, Moody's Investors Service said in a release on Thursday.

"Recurrent inflationary pressures ... keep domestic capital costs high, erode domestic purchasing power as well as savings and lower international competitiveness," the rating agency said.

Moody's also said the supply response to inflation has been weak and the government-directed food distribution system has made worse the food supply constraints. Without a significant increase in food output, the risk from continued inflation could limit India's growth prospects, Moody's said. — Reuters

Ebola causing huge damage to West Africa economies

FREETOWN, 28 Aug — The worst ever Ebola outbreak is causing enormous damage to West African economies as foreign businessmen quit the region, the African Development Bank said, while a leading medical charity branded the international response "entirely inadequate."

As transport companies suspend services, cutting off the region, governments and economists have warned that the epidemic could crush the fragile economic gains made in Sierra Leone and Liberia following a decade of civil war in the 1990s.

At least 1,427 people have died of the deadly hemorrhagic virus since it was first detected in the remote jungles of southeast Guinea in March and spread quickly to neighbouring Liberia and Sierra Leone. Five people have also died in Nigeria.

Air France, the French network of Air France-KLM said on Wednesday it had suspended flights to Sierra Leone after advice from the French government.

African Development Bank (AfDB) chief Donald Kaberuka said on a visit to Sierra Leone he had seen estimates of a reduction of up to 4 percent in gross domestic product due to Ebola.

"Revenues are down, foreign exchange levels are down, markets are not functioning, airlines are not coming in, projects are being cancelled, business people have left — that is very, very damaging," he told Reuters late on Tuesday. Liberia has already said it would have to lower its 2014 growth forecast, without giving a new one.

Sierra Leone Deputy Minister of Mineral Resources Abdul Ignosis Koroma said the government would miss its target of exporting $200 million in diamonds this year because of the Ebola outbreak. It exported $186 million of diamonds in 2013.

He said miners were too afraid to go to alluvial diamonds pits in the Ebola-stricken east and tough border controls to curb the spread of the virus were also hurting the trade.

NASA says new heavy-lift rocket debut not likely until 2018

CAPE CANAVERAL, (Florida), 28 Aug — NASA's new heavy-lift rocket, designed to fly astronauts to the moon, asteroids and eventually Mars, likely will not have its debut test flight until November 2018, nearly a year later than previous estimates, agency officials said on Wednesday.

NASA is 70 percent confident of making a November 2018 launch date, given the technical, financial and management hurdles the Space Launch System faces on the road to development, NASA associate administrators Robert Lightfoot and Bill Gerstenmaier told reporters on a conference call.

NASA estimates it could spend almost $12 billion developing the first of three variations of the rocket and associated ground systems through the debut flight, and potentially billions more to build and fly heavier-lift next-generation boosters, a July 2014 General Accountability Office report on the programme said.

NASA's Space Launch System (SLS) 70-metric-ton configuration is seen launching to space in this undated artist's rendering released on 2 Aug, 2014.

REUTERS

While the rocket might be ready for a test flight in December 2017, as previously planned, the new assessment showed the odds of that were "significantly less" than the 70 percent confidence level NASA requires of new programmes, Gerstenmaier said.

"We want to commit to this (November 2018) date and show that we can meet it," added Lightfoot.

The schedule assumes flat annual budgets of about $1.3 billion for the SLS rocket and another $1.5 billion for Orion crew capsule and associated ground launch systems at the Kennedy Space Centre in Florida. The GAO report found that NASA's SLS rocket programme was about $400 million short of meeting its December 2017 target.

The rocket is a modified version of the shuttle-derived, heavy-lift booster developed under NASA's previous exploration initiative known as Constellation. The US space agency spent about $9 billion on Constellation, which included the Orion capsule, from 2005 to 2010, before President Obama axed the programme. Its goal was to return astronauts to the surface of the moon by 2020.

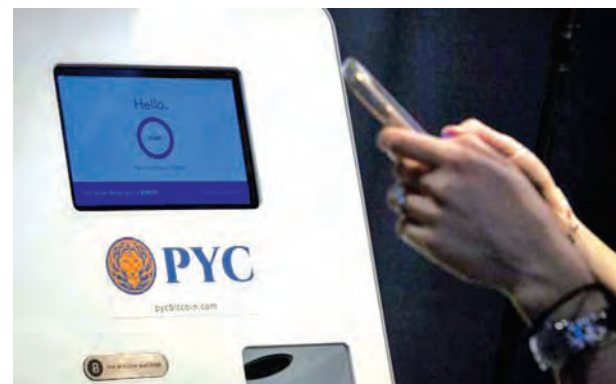

Instead, the White House and Congress approved a flexible path toward Mars, including a visit to an asteroid that will be robotically relocated into a high lunar orbit.

NASA did not say if the 11-month slip in the new rocket's debut flight, which will be an unmanned test run around the moon, would impact the second mission, slated for 2021, with a two-member crew.—Reuters

Bitcoin shows staying power as online merchants chase digital sparkle

NEW YORK, 28 Aug — Bitcoin is catching on at US online merchants including Overstock.com and Expedia, as customers use a digital currency that just a few years ago was virtually unknown but is now showing some staying power.

Though sales paid for in bitcoin so far at vendors interviewed for this article have been a fraction of one percent, they expect that as acceptance grows, the online currency will one day be as ubiquitous as the internet.

"Bitcoin isn't going anywhere; it's here to stay," said Michael Gulmann, vice president of global products at Expedia Inc in Seattle, the largest online travel agent. "We want to be there from the beginning." Expedia started accepting bitcoin payments for hotel bookings on 11 July. Until recently a niche alternative currency touted by a fervent group of followers, bitcoin has evolved into a software-based payment online system. US judge rejects Apple bid for injunction against Samsung

SAN FRANCISCO, 28 Aug — A US judge rejected Apple Inc's latest bid for a permanent injunction against Samsung Electronics Co Ltd in another sign of the diminishing impact of the smartphone patent wars.

Apple won a $120 million jury verdict against Samsung earlier this year over three Apple patents. However, US District Judge Lucy Koh in San Jose, California, on Wednesday denied Apple's request to stop Samsung from selling infringing features on its smartphones related to those patents.

An Apple spokeswoman declined to comment. In a statement, Samsung said it welcomed the ruling. "We remain committed to providing American consumers with a wide choice of innovative products," Samsung said.

Until this year, the two leaders in mobile technology had been engaged in global patent litigation over Samsung's phones that use Google's Android operating system. However, Apple and Samsung agreed earlier this month to drop all patent lawsuits outside the United States.—Reuters

China supplier of Samsung, Lenovo denies using child workers

BEIJING / SEOUL, 28 Aug — A China-based supplier for Samsung Electronics Co Ltd and Lenovo Group Ltd said on Thursday it had never hired child labourers, denying allegations by a US-based activist group. Samsung Electronics also said it had found no children or students working on the Samsung production line at the Huizhou-based factory of supplier HEG Technology, which was cited as violating China's labour laws by the New York-based watchdog China Labor Watch.

A Lenovo spokeswoman said the company would look into the report.

In a statement, China Labour Watch said it had found more than 10 children working at the HEG factory during an investigation that took place in July and August. It also said the probe had found over 100 student workers who were not being paid overtime wages or a night shift subsidy.

The watchdog said it had shared the evidence with Samsung last week and that Samsung demanded the supplier pay some students' wages. It did not say whether Samsung took any action on the matter of child labour or whether it had reached out to Lenovo with the information.

An employee sur-named Zeng at HEG Technology's human resources department told Reuters the company had never hired children, and that it had facial recognition systems in place to ensure workers were not underage.

For Samsung products, HEG employs workers aged 18 and over while the minimum age for workers on Lenovo's product lines is 16 years, she said. The company relies on an outsourcing company to hire students, she added.

In its statement, Samsung said it had proposed to China Labour Watch that they conduct a joint on-site investigation "for more precise verification" of the allegations.—Reuters

IBM launches Watson system for research, hopes for breakthroughs

WASHINGTON, 28 Aug — International Business Machines Corp on Wednesday launched a computer system that can quickly identify patterns in massive amounts of data, an ability that IBM said should hasten breakthroughs in science and medical research.

The computer system, Watson Discovery Advisor, understands chemical compound interaction and human language and can visually map out connections in data, the company said in a statement.

IBM will make the service available through the cloud. Some researchers and scientists have already been using Watson Discovery Advisor to sift through the sludge of scientific papers published daily.

Johnson & Johnson is teaching the system to read and understand trial outcomes published in journals to speed up studies of effectiveness of drugs.

Russia sees chance to lift Iran sanctions through international talks

Moscow, 28 Aug — Russia said on Thursday the possibility of lifting sanctions on Iran had emerged thanks to international talks on Teheran's nuclear programme and urged all countries involved to show political will to reach a deal.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif will meet his Russian counterpart Sergei Lavrov in Moscow on Friday to discuss the negotiations with world powers on a decade-old standoff over the Islamic republic's nuclear ambitions.

"Despite the difficult course of the negotiating process, a possibility is emerging to satisfy in full all integral rights of Iran as a member state of the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, including the right to enrich uranium and lifting the sanctions regime," Russia's foreign ministry said. "We presume all parties in the talks will show political will to reach a final, mutually acceptable agreement that would allow to fully restore the international community's trust in the exclusively peaceful character of Iran's nuclear programme." The six world powers — the United States, Russia, Germany, China, Britain and France — and Iran failed to meet a 20 July deadline to negotiate a comprehensive agreement under which Iran would curb its nuclear activities in exchange for an easing of sanctions that have crippled its economy.

However, they agreed to extend the talks by four months and the Russian ministry said in its statement it still hoped a deal was possible no later than November.

Istanbul's water reserve alarming: experts

ISTANBUL, 28 Aug — Istanbul has launched a water-saving campaign as water levels of dams have hit a record low, Istanbul Water and Canalization Management (ISKI) announced on Wednesday.

With merely 16.31 percent of its water reserve left, according to ISKI, the 14 million people in Turkey's largest city have been warned not to wash their cars, balconies or carpets with pipes that enables water to flow continuously. The authorities have even asked people to close the water tap as they wash face or brush teeth, and take their shower short.

Periodic water cut in Istanbul began in June, and is expected to be more frequent as the water level keeps falling each day.

ISKI statistics show that the latest rain falls were far from filling the empty dams, leaving the current water reserve at a historic low of 142 million cubic meters, way below the 525 million cubic meters last year and that between 2009 and 2011.

Istanbul has been supplying its drinking water need from 10 different dams, of which Sazlikdere Dam, which is providing drinking water to the European side of Istanbul, has almost dried out with less than six percent of water reserve left. Although ISKI did not revealed how long Istanbul and its 14 million population can resist to the water shortage, experts said in early August that "Istanbul has almost 55 days of water reserves."—Xinhua

32 seriously injured as ferry catches fire in waters off Jakarta, Indonesia

JAKARTA, 28 Aug — As many as 32 people suffering from serious wounds have been rushed to hospitals after a ferry caught fire on its engine on Wednesday in waters off Jakarta, the capital of Indonesia, an official said here.

The accident occurred at midday when the ferry sailing from Muara Angke port in Jakarta, was about to arrive at Gusung Sekati island, still near the capital, Sutopo Purwo Nugroho, spokesman of the national disaster management agency said.

"As many as 32 people suffer from serious injury and are being treated at a nearby hospital at Pramuka island," he told Xinhua over phone, referring to an island not far from Gusung Sekati island.

bers and 67 passengers, according to him.

Prior to the accident, 47 passengers had already exited from the ship at two other islands, said Sutopo. Police are investigating the cause of the accident, he said. Ferry is a favourite transport means in the British police commissioner urged to resign amid child abuse scandal

LONDON, 28 Aug — Police commissioner of South Yorkshire has been severely criticized and urged to resign by political leaders since an inquiry exposed shockingly child sexual abuses in Rotherham on Tuesday.

According to an independent inquiry carried out by professor Alexis

Jay released on Tuesday, about 1,400 children in Rotherham, a large town in South Yorkshire, were sexually exploited from 1997 to 2013. The report said that children were raped by multiple perpetrators, trafficked to other towns and cities in the north of England, abducted, beaten, and intimidated. Some had been doused in petrol and threatened with guns, and forced to witness violent rapes. "There was growing evidence that child sexual exploitation was a serious problem in Rotherham," it said, adding that the collective failures of political and officer leadership were blatant.

Roger Stone, leader

of Rotherham council, resigned on Tuesday in wake of the publication of the report. Shaun Wright, Police and Crime Commissioner of South Yorkshire refused to resign although leaders from different sections called him to stand down from his position on Wednesday.

Abe, Ishiba to discuss Cabinet, LDP executive changes on Friday

TOKYO, 28 Aug — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe plans to meet with Liberal Democratic Party Secretary General Shigeru Ishiba on Friday afternoon to discuss what position he may give to Ishiba when he reshuffles his Cabinet and LDP executive lineup next Wednesday, party officials said on Thursday.

Abe has asked Ishiba to assume the new post of state minister in charge of national security legislation, but the former defence minister will likely turn down Abe's offer in their meeting at the prime minister's office.

Attention will be focused on what Abe will do for Ishiba, who is concerned about some different views between the two on security policy that could be a target of criticism from opposition parties.

Ishiba hopes to retain his post in the LDP, while Abe is considering having someone replace him as secretary general, according to people close to them.

NEW YORK, 28 Aug — Actress Katherine Heigl and Duane Reade have come to an agreement in a lawsuit accusing the New York pharmacy of improperly posting to its social media accounts a paparazzi photograph of her leaving one of its stores.

A lawyer for Heigl, who starred in the film “Knocked Up” and television show “Grey’s Anatomy,” confirmed on Wednesday a deal was agreed with the Walgreen Co.-owned chain to resolve the lawsuit, filed in April in New York federal court.

The terms are confidential, but a statement from Heigl’s lawyer Peter Haviland called it “mutually beneficial.”

As part of the deal, he said, Duane Reade will make a contribution to a foundation focused on animal welfare, established in 2008 after Heigl’s brother was killed in a car accident.—Reuters

Grand Theft Auto maker says

Lindsay Lohan sued to get attention

Actress Lindsay Lohan

NEW YORK, 28 Aug — The maker of the popular Grand Theft Auto video games said Lindsay Lohan’s lawsuit accusing it of basing a character on her without permission is frivolous and an effort by the actress to attract attention.

In papers made public on Tuesday in a New York state court in Manhattan, Take-Two Interactive Software Inc called Lohan’s claim “so legally meritless that it lacks any good-faith basis and can only have been filed for publicity purposes.” Take-Two wants to dismiss the 1 July lawsuit and have Lohan pay its legal fees.

A lawyer for Lohan did not immediately respond on Wednesday to requests for comment.

The 28-year-old “Mean Girls” star accused Take-Two and its Rockstar Games unit of basing the Lacey Jonas character in “Grand Theft Auto V” on her.

She said Jonas had a similar voice, image and clothing, and was also chased by paparazzi, and that “multiple people” had noticed a resemblance. Lohan’s lawsuit seeks unspecified damages.

Take-Two countered that Jonas did not look like Lohan, apart from being young and blond.

It also said “expressive works” such as video games are “fully protected” under the US Constitution.

Lohan has starred in a number of hit movies including “The Parent Trap” and “Mean Girls,” but has in recent years become known for multiple legal woes and visits to rehab clinics.—Reuters

‘Game of Thrones’ director wants to helm ‘Black Widow’ movie

LOS ANGELES, 28 Aug — ‘Game of Thrones’ director Neil Marshall is keen to helm a film with strong female lead like the 1987 ‘Black Widow’.

‘Black Widow’ is a crime drama centred around two women, played by Debra Winger and Theresa Russell.

Marshall, who has directed ‘The Descent’ and ‘Centurion’, also said he loved Scarlett Johansson’s characters in ‘Captain America’ and ‘Avengers’ films, said The Hollywood Reporter.

“I think I’d like to do a big movie with a strong female lead, whether or not she would be a superhero. I would love to do a Black Widow movie,” he said.

Wiz Khalifa knocks ‘Guardians’ from atop Billboard’s album chart

LOS ANGELES, 28 Aug — Rapper Wiz Khalifa knocked the “Guardians of the Galaxy” soundtrack from the top spot on the weekly US Billboard 200 album chart on Wednesday, scoring his first No. 1 album.

Khalifa’s “Blacc Hollywood” sold 90,000 copies in its first week, according to figures from Nielsen SoundScan.

It outpaced last week’s chart-topper, the retro “Awesome Mix Vol 1” soundtrack from Marvel’s “Guardians of the Galaxy” film, which sold 64,000 copies in its fourth week of release. The film climbed to the top of the box office over the weekend as well.

Country music artist Chase Rice debuted at No 3 with “Ignite the Night” selling 44,000 copies.

Other new entries in the top 10 included “Nashville Outlaws: A Tribute to Motley Crue,” a compilation of tracks featuring country music artists such as LeAnn Rimes, at No 5 and former Kiss musician Ace Frehley at No 9 with his solo album “Space Invader.”

For the week ending 24 August, total album sales clocked in at 3.97 million copies, down 19 percent from the comparable week in 2013, while year-to-date sales stood at 154.5 million, down 15 percent from the same point last year, Billboard said.

On Billboard’s digital songs chart, pop singer Taylor Swift debuted at No 1 with “Shake It Off” selling 544,000 copies, the fourth biggest digital song debut behind Flo Rida’s “Right Round,” Swift’s own “We Are Never, Ever Getting Back Together” and Katy Perry’s “Roar.”

“Shake It Off” is the first single from Swift’s upcoming October album “1989,” and the singer performed it live at Sunday’s televised MTV Video Music Awards, or VMAs.—Reuters

FIFA and other groups sued in US over concussions

SAN FRANCISCO, 28 Aug — A group of parents sued several football organizations including the sport's international governing body FIFA, saying they have failed to do more about concussions among children.

The lawsuit, filed on Wednesday in a California federal court, says FIFA and other groups such as the American Youth Soccer Organization have not done enough to reduce preventable injuries from repetitive ball heading.

The risks of head injuries in sports has been a recurring concern in the United States. Last month the National Collegiate Athletic Association agreed to settle a head injury lawsuit by creating a $70 million fund for concussion testing. Some of the same lawyers involved in that case filed the football lawsuit.

"Younger players are typically not provided professional medical supervision, either during practices or at matches," the lawsuit said. The lawsuit seeks to institute a medical monitoring programme, as well as attorneys fees.

FIFA representatives could not immediately be reached for comment.

In a statement, the AYSO said its "highest priority is creating a safe and nurturing environment where kids can play and have fun," adding that it requires any player exhibiting signs of a concussion immediately be removed for the remainder of the day.

"For many families soccer is seen as a terrific alternative to football," the lawsuit said. "Parents are often relieved when their children choose soccer. However, soccer ranks among the top sports in the number of concussions per game."

The case is Rachel Mehr et al. vs. Federation Internationale de Football Association a/k/a/ FIFA et al., in US District Court, Northern District of California No. 14-3879.

BERLIN, 28 Aug — World heavyweight champion Vladimir Klitschko will fight Bulgarian Kubrat Pulev for the IBF title on 15 November, in Hamburg, after the Ukrainian postponed next month's bout due to injury, he said on Wednesday.

Klitschko, who also holds the WBO, WBA and

Senegalese WHO doctor with Ebola arrives for treatment in Germany

HAMBURG, 28 Aug — A Senegalese doctor who contracted Ebola while working for the World Health Organization (WHO) in Sierra Leone arrived in Hamburg on Wednesday for treatment at a tropical medicine unit, becoming Germany's first patient with the disease.

At a news conference on Wednesday the clinic's tropical medicine specialist said the man would not be given new experimental drugs such as ZMapp but that his treatment would at first focus on managing his symptoms. The Senegalese doctor arrived in Germany on a specialist plane and was transferred to the university clinic Hamburg-Eppendorf in a special isolation ambulance, accompanied by a police guard.

The WHO had approached the clinic on Saturday to ask if they would accept the patient, Rico Schmidt, health spokesman for Hamburg city senate told reporters. Doctors at the clinic declined to give details about the man's condition due to patient confidentiality, but said the fact he was able to enter the aeroplane himself suggested he was well enough to benefit from treatment.

The patient, who has not been named, had worked in a laboratory in Sierra Leone that was testing for Ebola, the WHO has said. It shut the laboratory on Tuesday after he became infected. Hamburg-based tropical medicine specialist Stefan Schmiedel said they would not be using drugs such as ZMapp, which has been given to some Ebola patients including a British volunteer nurse recently repatriated to London.

Treatment would at first consist of managing the patient's vital functions, pain and fever levels. "We believe through these simple measures the threat of Ebola can be reduced," Schmiedel said.

Bilbao oust shambolic Napoli, Arsenal qualify again

BERNE, 28 Aug — Athletic Bilbao took advantage of shambolic defending to beat Napoli 3-1 on Wednesday and reach the Champions League group stage for the first time in 16 years, leaving the Italians counting the cost of their premature exit.

Arsenal qualified for a 17th successive season with a nervy 1-0 win at home to Besiktas and Malmo made it for the first time with a 3-0 win over Salzburg, whose participation ended in the qualifiers for the ninth time in a row.

Ludogorets centre back Cosmin Moti, forced to go in goal after keeper Vladislav Stoyanov was sent off, saved two penalties as his team beat Steaua Bucharest 6-5 in a shootout to qualify for the first time.

Forgotten German striker Stefan Kiessling scored twice to help Bundesliga side Bayer Leverkusen storm past FC Copenhagen 4-0 to complete the line-up.

The group stage draw, featuring only two Italian teams following Napoli's exit, will be made in Monaco on Thursday.

Napoli's defensive nightmare will prove expensive as the group stage earned them around 38 million euros (30.25 million pounds) last season in appearance fees, performance bonuses and television rights.

It will also pile pressure on coach Rafael Benitez, whose expensively-assembled side did the bare minimum expected of them last season by finishing third in Serie A and winning the Italian Cup.

Held 1-1 at home last week, Napoli survived a difficult first half before taking the lead immediately after halftime when Marek Hamsik collected a headed clearance on the edge of the area and scored with a low shot into the corner.

But it all went wrong in the 61st minute when Aritz Aduriz escaped his marker at a corner to equalise.

It got worse for Napoli eight minutes later when a long ball out of the Athletic defence was completely misjudged by Raul Albiol, who collided with goalkeeper Rafael Cabral, allowing Aduriz to score into an empty net.

Five minutes later, Unai Lopez's through ball caused more havoc in the Napoli defence and Ibai Gomez nipped in to drill the third past Rafael and seal Athletic's place in the group stage for the first time since 1998/99.

"We took the lead, but in a few minutes we made some significant mistakes and lost control of the game," Benitez told Sport Mediaset. "We knew it could end up like this, we are all disappointed, but we have to look forward."

Arsenal squeezed past Besiktas in a tense and absorbing contest when Chile forward Alexis Sanchez slotted home a loose ball in first-half stoppage time.

Besiktas, held 0-0 in the first leg, were always menacing and a nervy Arsenal had to sweat it out after Mathieu Debuchy was sent off in the 75th minute for a second booking.

"We needed to keep our nerves," Arsenal manager Arsene Wenger told Sky. "For us it is a weight off our shoulders because we can focus on the Premier League."

Reuters

Malmo, runners-up in the old European Cup in 1979, raced to a 2-0 lead inside 20 minutes against Salzburg with a Markus Rosenberg penalty and a bizarre, looping left-foot volley by Magnus Eriksson.

Rosenberg struck again with six minutes left as Malmo became the first Swedish club to qualify since Helsingborg in 2000-01.

Ludogorets sent their tie against former champions Steaua into extra time when Brazilian Wanderson scored with a spectacular shot in the 90th minute to give them a 1-0 win on the night and make it 1-1 on aggregate.

There was more drama when goalkeeper Stoyanov was sent off for a professional foul in the final minute of extra time and, with the Bulgarians having made all three substitutions, Moti went in goal.

Having converted his side's first penalty, Moti saved Paul Pirvulescu's second attempt for Steaua and Cornel Rapa's sudden-death effort as Ludogorets won 6-5 in the shootout.

Radwanska out, Sharapova survives Open threat

Maria Sharapova (RUS) hits to Alexandra Delgheru (ROU) on Ashe Stadium court on day three of the 2014 US Open tennis tournament at USTA Billie Jean King National Tennis Centre in New York on 27 Aug, 2014.

REUTERS

NEW YORK, 28 Aug — The US Open heated up on Wednesday with China's Peng Shuai upsetting fourth-seeded Agnieszka Radwanska and fifth seed Maria Sharapova averting an early exit on a sweltering day in Flushing Meadows.

French Open champion Sharapova lost the first set to 95th-ranked Alexandra Dulgheru of Romania, but the five-times grand slam winner bounced back to reach the third round with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory in warm breezes at Arthur Ashe Stadium.

Radwanska was not so fortunate as she fell 6-3, 6-4 to world number one doubles player Peng, who supplied a shock start to second-round play in Louis Armstrong Stadium.

Men's first-round play was completed with sixth-seeded Czech Tomas Berdych dismissing 2001 champion Lleyton Hewitt of Australia 6-3, 6-4, 6-3, and seventh seed Bulgarian Grigor Dimitrov a 6-2, 7-6, 6-2 victor over local wild card Ryan Harrison.

Other men's seeds reaching the second round included Ernests Gulbis of Latvia (11), Marin Cilic of Croatia (14), South African Kevin Anderson (18) and Feliciano Lopez of Spain (19). Cilic and Lopez advanced in abbreviated fashion. Cilic was leading 6-3, 3-1 when Marcos Baghdatis of Cyprus retired with an ankle injury, while Lopez was at 1-1 in the fifth set when Croat Ivan Dodig could no longer continue due to cramping. World number two Simona Halep of Romania beat the heat by hurrying past Jana Cepelova of Slovakia 6-2, 6-1 to reach the third round.

Halep, who overcame US college champion Danielle Collins in the opening round after losing a first-set tie-break, wasted little time as temperatures soared.

"I started to be more aggressive and hit the ball," said second seed Halep, the French Open runner-up. "I feel great now that I could win so fast today because it's so hot outside."

Johanna Larsson of Sweden, ranked 96th, sent another seed to the exits with a 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 upset of 21st-seeded American Sloane Stephens, a 2013

Australian Open semi-finalist.

Peng used piercing, two-handed groundstrokes to put Radwanska on the defensive and claimed the biggest scalp of the tournament so far on her third match point with a backhand crosscourt winner that brushed the corner lines.

A winner in the Montreal hardcourt run-up event to the US Open and semi-finalist at this year's Australian Open, Radwanska was outplayed on critical points. Peng won three of five break points against Radwanska, who succeeded only once in seven break opportunities. "Every game was pretty tight and a lot of rallies," lamented Radwanska. "Every game could go either way. But in the important moments, I think she was just playing a little bit better."

Sharapova looked in trouble after making a massive 22 unforced errors in losing the first set against Dulgheru, who had risen to a high ranking of 26 in 2011 before knee injuries set her back. But the 2006 champion recovered. Sharapova broke in the sixth game of the second set to lead 4-2 and served out to claim the second set and start a run of five games in a row that took her to 4-0 in the third set and victory in the two hour 38 minute struggle.

It was a familiar formula for Sharapova, who leads the tour with 17 three-set victories this year.

"We started under the sun and finished under the lights. That's what you call the US Open, I guess," said Sharapova. "I'm very happy I was able to come back and come through and win this match."

As for being able to win the long matches, the Russian said: "A lot of hard work. You have to put in the hours and the miles, I guess." The 28-year-old Peng, the French Open doubles champion, had 28 winners in the 96-minute upset of Radwanska.

"I had two match points and didn't make it," Peng said about two backhand errors that prolonged the match.

"But I just said 'fight, fight' and it's an amazing time for me," added the 39th-ranked Peng, who in February became the first Chinese player to become a world number one in tennis.
