Cancer registration course for local health care providers opens in Yangon

By Khaing Thanda Lwin

YANGON, 10 Sept — The first training course on cancer registration opened on Wednesday at the Department of Medical Research (Lower Myanmar) in Yangon, with the aim of controlling cancer diseases in Myanmar.

The three-day course is jointly organized by the Department of Medical Research (Lower Myanmar) and the Department of Health under the Ministry of Health in Myanmar, National Cancer Institution (NCI) in Thailand and International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) in France.

In his opening speech, Dr Kyaw Zin Thant, Director-General of DMR (LM), said that the cancer registration is a systematic collection of data on persons with cancers that plays a vital role in controlling the cancer.

So as to implement the national cancer registration service, the Ministry invited foreign experts from NCI and IARC to share their experience to the health care providers in Yangon, Nay Pyi Taw, Mandalay and Taunggyi as well as private hospitals, he added.

In the first day training, the experts gave lectures on types of cancer registries and its purposes, method of data collection, source of information, case identification, basic diagnosis and international classification of disease.

An official of the National Cancer Institute said that cancer registration is one of the important things for cancer control, adding that the NCI has a plan to collaborate in future with Myanmar in carrying out cancer control programme, the official added.

Asst Professor Epidemiology Dr Atul Budukh explained that the main objectives of population-based cancer registry (PBCR) are to provide the incident and morality rate of cancer in a defined population and to provide a framework for accessing and controlling the impacts of cancer in the community.

Cause-specific morality data are available in developed countries; however, it is lacking in developing countries. A PBCR is the only source for cancer morality in developing countries, he added.

According to a report, cancer is the leading causes of death in developed countries. Each year, about four million people die from cancer worldwide while more than 6 million people are diagnosed with cancer.

In Myanmar, lung cancer is most common cancers in male while ovarian cancer is the fastest growing health problem of female, source said.

Army air raid kills 35 militants in NW Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, 10 Sept — At least 35 militants were killed in an air strike launched by Pakistan army in the country's north-west tribal area of North Waziristan on Wednesday morning, an army statement said.

Inter Services Public Relations, the mouthpiece of Pakistan Army, said in a statement that the militants were killed when their three hideouts were targeted and destroyed by the army jet fighters. The air raid was carried out in Datta Khel area of North Waziristan, a restive tribal area at Pakistan-Afghanistan border, where security forces have been launching a major armed offensive against Taleban militants since 15 June.

To date over 900 militants have been killed in the operation that aims at wiping out the militant stronghold in the area.

Talking to media earlier last month, General Raheel Sharif, the country's chief of army staff, said that the armed forces are determined to flush out the militants with their highly-skilled trained and professional expertise even from remote and hard areas of North Waziristan (in the operation).

Media reports said that around 25,000 to 30,000 troops are participating in the ongoing operation.

Over 1 million people have fled the offensive in the area and are living in refugee camps in Bannu area of neighbouring Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Province.

Cambodia to restart Water Festival in November after 3-year hiatus

PHNOM PENH, 10 Sept — Cambodia will renew its annual Water Festival celebrations this November for the first time since 353 people were trampled to death or suffocated in a stampede on a bridge during the celebrations in 2010, a senior official said on Wednesday.

"This year's Water Festival will be celebrated on 5, 6 and 7 November after we have failed to hold it for a few years," Deputy Prime Minister and Royal Palace Minister Kong Sam Ol said during a preparatory meeting for the celebrations.

He asked all concerned ministries and the National Police to cooperate each other closely in order to run the festivities smoothly.

Water Festival is the largest annual festival in the Southeast Asian nation. Approximately 3 million Cambodians, especially those from rural areas, converge to Phnom Penh, the capital city of Cambodia, to enjoy the regatta.

Kong Sam Ol said that about 397 boats will join the races, which are usually held on the river in front of the Royal Palace.

The festival, which marks the Tonle Sap River's annual change of direction, has been canceled in the past three years due to floods in 2011 and 2013 and the death of King Father Norodom Sihanouk in 2012. During the celebrations of the Water Festival in 2010, a stampede tragedy happened on 22 November on a Diamond Island's bridge and killed 353 people. The investigation by the government's task force at that time found that the incident was caused by the panic which soon after led to the stampede.

Abu Sayyaf bandits release captive midwife in S Philippines

ZAMBOANGA CITY, (Philippines), 10 Sept — Abu Sayyaf gunmen freed unharmed a government health worker in southern Philippines on Tuesday after holding her captive for 12 days, a military officer said on Wednesday.

Lieutenant General Rustico Guerrero, commander of the Armed Forces of the Philippines' Western Mindanao Command, identified the victim as Lailani Bernabe, a midwife at a municipal health centre.

Guerrero said Bernabe and Abu Sayyaf militants walked for hours before the bandits abandoned her at Danag village, Patikul town in Sulu Province at 6 am, on Tuesday.

The military, however, could not confirm if ransom was paid for the release of the victim.

Guerrero said the health worker was freed after Sulu Provincial Board member Ismun Suhuri negotiated with the rogue group.

Bernabe was on her way to work in Panglima village, Estino town when she was seized by Abu Sayyaf militants on 28 August. The bandits had demanded ransom in exchange for her freedom.

Former PM Mori to hand Abe's letter to Putin

TOKYO, 10 Sept — Former Prime Minister Yoshiro Mori plans to hand a personal letter from current Prime Minister Shinzo Abe to Russian President Vladimir Putin during his ongoing visit to Moscow, Japan's top government spokesman indicated on Wednesday.

The letter may mention February's agreement between Abe and Putin that the president will visit Japan this fall—a plan that has gone nowhere at a time when Russia has come under heavy international criticism over its actions in Ukraine.

Most political watchers say that Putin is unlikely to visit under the current circumstances, despite Tokyo's desire to advance bilateral issues such as that of the four Russian-held, Japanese-claimed islands off Hokkaido.

"I know that former Prime Minister Mori has Prime Minister Abe's personal letter," Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga said at a Press conference when asked if a Japanese newspaper report on Mori's plan in Moscow is true.

The purpose of Mori's visit from Tuesday is "to attend the Japan-Russia forum for civil exchanges, and the Japanese government is not directly involved in the forum," Suga said.

The major daily Mainichi Shimbun, one of the hosts of the two-day forum through Wednesday,

Fight against corruption raised to highest level

BELGRADE, 10 Sept — Serbian Justice Minister Nikola Selakovic said on Tuesday that he is not content with the results of the action plan for the implementation of the national anti-corruption strategy, which came into force a year ago. The government of Serbia has demonstrated a strong political will to address this issue by establishing an anti-corruption coordinating body on 7th August, headed by Prime Minister Aleksandar Vucic, said Selakovic, noting that this has raised the fight against corruption to the highest level. "It demonstrated our strong political will to resolve the issue of corruption," stressed Selakovic opening the first meeting of the coordinating body for the implementation of the national anti-corruption strategy, covering the period from 2013 to 2018.

The implementation of the anti-corruption action plan is a crucial part of Chapter 23 (on judiciary and fundamental rights) in Serbia's EU accession talks, he noted, adding that Brussels will insist on implementing every single element of this plan.

Selakovic said that he is only partly satisfied with the results of the implementation of the anti-corruption action plan over the past year. For that reason, legal provisions relating to the crimes against economy, as well as financial crimes, should be reviewed by the end of the year, the justice minister said.

The first major task will be to train judges for proper protection of whistleblowers and for financial investigations, while corruptive elements should be removed from regulations in the field of healthcare, explained Selakovic.

US, China security leaders spar over jet manoeuvres

BEIJING, 10 Sept — Top US and China security officials disagreed this week over what the United States said was China's intercept of a US Navy patrol plane near the southern island province of Hainan.

US National Security Adviser Susan Rice, on a three-day visit to Beijing, told several senior Chinese officials that China must halt the "dangerous intercepts", senior Obama administration officials said.

However, General Fan

Changlong, vice chairman of China's Central Military Commission, called on the United States to "reduce and ultimately cease naval and aerial reconnaissance activities near China", according to the official Xinhua news agency.

The row began in August when the United States complained that a Chinese military aircraft had launched a risky intercept of a US Navy patrol plane in international air space. The Chinese pilot flew a few yards from the US plane and performed acrobatic manoeuvres around it, the Pentagon said.

China said the pilot had done nothing wrong and that US surveillance patrols harm China's national security interests.

Despite the disagreement over the incident, Obama administration officials called Rice's dialogue with Chinese leaders on the issue "constructive" and added China took US concerns seriously. The two countries are working to adopt new confidence-building measures, they said, without elaborating on what the measures would entail.

Rice met Fan on her first official visit to China as national security adviser, along with President Xi Jinping, Foreign Minister Wang Yi and State Councillor Yang Jiechi. "When it comes to the issue of unsafe intercepts, this is risky behaviour that could imperil the bilateral relationship," a senior US administration official said.

Hainan is home to several Chinese naval bases as well as a sensitive submarine base.

In public remarks to Fan on Tuesday, Rice alluded to the issue, saying: "we certainly need to avoid any incidents that could complicate the relationship."

US and Chinese officials held talks at the Pentagon after the intercept incident about rules of behaviour for air and maritime activities.

British PM begs Scots: Don't rip our 'UK family' apart in independence vote

LONDON, 10 Sept — British Prime Minister David Cameron implored Scots on Wednesday to shun independence to keep the United Kingdom "family" intact as he scrambled to stem a steep rise in secessionist support ahead of the 18 September vote.

In a sign of panic within the British ruling elite, Cameron and opposition leader Ed Miliband scrapped their weekly question-and-answer session to visit Scotland on Wednesday to ask Scots not to ditch their 307-year union with England.

"We do not want this family of nations to be ripped apart," Cameron, 47, said in an opinion piece published in the Daily Mail newspaper. "The United Kingdom is a precious and special country."

But Cameron tempered the emotion with a clear warning: "If the UK breaks apart, it breaks apart forever."

Cameron has until now been largely absent from the debate after conceding that his privileged background and center-right politics mean he is not the best person to win over Scots, who are usually more left-wing than the English.

But if Scotland votes for independence, Cameron's job will be on the line ahead of a national election planned for May 2015.—Reuters

France to host conference on Iraq security crisis on 15 September

PARIS, 10 Sept — France will host an international conference on Iraq's security crisis on 15 September, French President Hollande's office said on Tuesday, as a multi-national coalition tries to marshal an offensive against Islamic State insurgents.

On Friday, Hollande will travel to Iraq to prepare the meeting and offer support to leaders combating the insurgents, becoming the first Western head of state to visit Iraq since Islamic State seized swathes of Iraqi territory this year.

Iraqi President Fuad Masum and leaders of regional and global powers will attend the conference in Paris, which comes days after the United States announced the creation of a 'core coalition' to combat Islamic State militants in Iraq.

The conference aims to coordinate efforts to fight the group and disrupt its financing, help Iraq form a new government, and accelerate humanitarian aid for populations in conflict areas, a French diplomatic source said.

While US President Barack Obama has said the coalition will only attack IS fighters in Iraq, coalition partners including Britain have raised the possibility of striking them in Syria without asking for Syrian government approval.

"We need to think of ways to attack Daesh (Islamic State), which may in addition weaken (Syrian President Bashar) al Assad," the source said, adding that the coalition was reviewing legal options to launch such operations.

Kerry arrives in Baghdad on tour to build coalition against Islamic State

BAGHDAD, 10 Sept — US Secretary of State John Kerry arrived in Baghdad on Wednesday as he began a tour of the Middle East to build military, political and financial support to defeat Islamic State militants controlling parts of Iraq and Syria.

Kerry on Monday had hailed the formation of a new, more inclusive, Iraqi government under Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi as a "major milestone", and Washington had said it was vital before there could be further US action to help push back the militants, who took over large parts of northern Iraq this year.

Kerry flew to Baghdad from Jordan, the first stop on his tour, which will also include Saudi Arabia and probably other Arab capitals.

Last week nine countries, most of them in Europe, were named as the core group of a coalition President Barack Obama says will degrade and eventually destroy Islamic State, which has declared a caliphate in the land it took over and executed many prisoners, including two American journalists who were beheaded.

In Washington, Obama will give a speech on Wednesday in which he will detail his plan to confront the radicals, which could take several years.

Australia says may raise terrorism threat level over Iraq, Syria

SYDNEY, 10 Sept — The head of Australia's national security agency said he was "very seriously" considering raising the country's terrorism alert level to "high" due to the involvement of Australians in militant groups and the spiraling conflicts in Iraq and Syria.

David Irvine, the outgoing head of the Australian Security Intelligence Organization (ASIO), said the number of Australians returning from fighting with Islamic State and other radical groups posed a growing risk.

Australia has been at the "medium" alert level since a four-tier system was introduced in 2003. A "high" alert level is used when officials believe an attack is likely.

"I would say that, at the moment, it is at a very elevated level of medium and I'm certainly contemplating very seriously the notion of lifting it higher," Irvine told the Australian Broadcasting Corp late on Tuesday.

Last month, Australia unveiled counter-terrorism measures aimed at preventing young people from becoming radicalized and going to fight in overseas conflicts such as Iraq and Syria.

Irvine said security agencies were aware of at least 20 people who had returned to Australia after fighting in the Middle East, posing a national security risk. Up to 160 people have either been involved in the fighting or actively supporting it, according to Australian officials.

Australia has also joined a multinational relief effort, dropping military equipment and aid to Kurdish forces fighting

Islamic State militants in northern Iraq.

Prime Minister Tony Abbott has refused to rule out participating in air strikes or sending combat troops as part of a US-led effort to defeat Islamic State. Should we hide our identity?

By Myint Win Thein

It is not a good idea to hide your phone number when you are making a phone call. Why do we use phones? It is clear we use phones to communicate with family members, relatives, friends and people related to our jobs or businesses. Why should we hide our phone numbers when we make phone calls? When they miss our calls, they can even call us back as soon as they know. We should not hide our identity wherever and whenever.

Now, Myanmar has entered into a new era of telecommunication by issuing new licences to more phone operators in its market. The people of Myanmar have the opportunity to choose better and cheaper services. It is really good news for the people as long as some people do not abuse the new technology. We have seen that many people using false identities on the social networking sites are causing trouble for the public. Similarly, it is likely that people who hide their identity will do something dishonest to others on the telephone networks.

Phone operators are now offering new services unheard of during the last five decades including the service that can hide the caller identity. The bright side of the service is that people who want to complain to the authorities but do not want to be identified can use it happily. We are glad we have more choices, but the operators should be well aware of the undesirable use of their new services. Unidentified phone calls will at least annoy us or steal our sleep or disturb our free time. Some people might even threaten us or blackmail us or spread rumours to us through unidentified calls. Are the phone operators ready to trace all the calls made through their networks or have they registered their users properly?

LIVING with DHAMMA

Kyi Mun

To love the Dhamma as a son cherishes and reveres his mother

The Purpose of Living with Dhamma

To live without a fault, we should abide by the guidelines of the Dhamma. To dare nobly, to will strongly and never to falter in the path of duty, we need to live in compliance with the teachings of the Dhamma. The following ideas are some of the profound Buddha Dhamma, which I borrow to express some salient ideas about living in the right, fruitful and productive way.

The Meaning of Dhamma

D for Devotion with a Single-mindedness
H for Harmony Within and Without A for Avoiding All Evil
M for Mind/Mental Culture/Concentration
M for Meditation/ Contemplation
A for Altruism

DEVOTION

Devotion with a single-mindedness to: (In Pali)

- Charity, Generosity, Liberality (Dāna)
- Morality, Ethics, Rules of Behavior (Sila)
- Meditation, Contemplation (Bhāvanā)
- Reverance, Respect (Appacāyana)
- Service, Helping Others in Need (Veyāvacca)
- Sharing One's merits (Pattidāna)
- Delighting in Other's Merits (Pattānumodanā)
- Hearing the Dhamma (Dhammasavana)
- Delivering the Dhamma (Dhammadesanā)
- Straightening One's View (Dhīthijukamma)

HARMONY

Harmony Within and Without

Dhamma teaches us that "you should protect yourself within and without". (In Pali : Evam Gopetha Atānam) We should take good care of having physical health and mental well-being on the one hand, and cultivating good and mutually fruitful relationships with other people, on the other.

AVOIDING ALL EVIL

We have to avoid the following evil things:

- Killing (Pānātipātā)
- Stealing (Adinnadhānā)
- Sexual Misconduct (Kamesumicchāchārā)
- Lying (Musāvādā)
- False Witnessing (Pisunavācā)
- Harsh Speech (Pharussavācā)
- Frivolous Speech (Samphappalāpavācā)

- Covetousness (Abhijjā)
- Perturbed Mind (Vyāpāda)
- False View (Micchādhīthi)

MIND CULTURE

Mental culture can best be cultivated by a single-minded concentration of the mind. It is called SAMADHI in Pali. You make a consistent practice of keeping your mind with one-pointedness, barring all the hindrances of :

- Sensual Desires Kāmyicchanda
- Perturbed Mind Vyāpāda
- Sloth & Torpor Thina Midda
- Distraction of Mind & Regret Uddaccakukkucca
- Doubt Vicikicchā

MEDITATION / CONTEMPLATION

You whole-heartedly and convincingly devote yourself to the contemplation of the meaning and essence of Impermanence (Anicca), Imperfection or Suffering or Unsatisfactoriness (Dukkha), and Impersonality or Soullessness or No Soul (Anatta).

ALTRUISM

By contemplating on the Impermanence, Imperfection and Impersonality, you gradually realize that you or any other human beings are just like tiny particles of sand on a sea beach. Thus, you begin to eliminate the coarse or crude forms of :

- P = Passion
- R = Restlessness
- I = I-centered Egotism
- D = delusion
- E = Enmity

And gradually you find yourself walking on the road to ALTRUISM AND ENLIGHTENMENT WITH SERENITY.

Fiji says 45 peacekeepers held by Syrian rebels to be released soon

SUVA, 10 Sept —The head of Fiji's army said on Wednesday that he expected 45 Fijian UN peacekeepers seized two weeks ago on the Golan Heights by an al-Qaeda-backed militant group, the Nusra Front, to be released within days.

"Al Nusra has confirmed to the UN headquarters in New York that the Fijian peacekeepers will be released within the next few days," Brigadier General Moses Tikoitoga told a news conference in the Fijian capital, Suva.

Syria's three-year civil war reached the frontier with Israeli-controlled territory last month when Islamist fighters overran a crossing point in the line that has separated Israelis from Syrians in the Golan Heights since a 1973 war.

The fighters then turned on the UN blue helmets from a peacekeeping force that has patrolled the ceasefire line for 40 years. After the Fijians were captured, more than 70 Filipinos spent two days besieged at two locations before reaching safety.

The Nusra Front, a Syrian affiliate of al-Qaeda, had a list of demands including compensation for fighters killed during the confrontation, humanitarian assistance for its supporters and its removal from the UN list of terrorist organizations.

Tikoitoga told reporters that the group had dropped all of its demands and that no conditions had been placed on the peacekeepers' release.

But the government seemed to back away at least slightly later in the day, saying that negotiations on the specifics of the release were still ongoing.

"Fiji's Ambassador-At-Large Major General Ioane Naivalurua says that all efforts to release the Fijian peacekeepers are continuing," the government said in a statement on its Facebook page.

Blast kills leader of Syrian Islamist group, other top figures

BEIRUT, 10 Sept—An explosion killed the leader of one of Syria's most powerful Islamist insurgent groups Ahrar al-Sham on Tuesday, the group said, and an organization that monitors violence in the civil war said at least 28 of its commanders had died.

Ahrar al-Sham is a hardline Islamist group and part of the Islamic Front alliance that has been in armed conflict with the Islamic State group which has seized swathes of territory in Syria and Iraq.

A statement posted on Ahrar al-Sham's official Twitter feed said the blast had hit a meeting in Idlib province in northwest Syria and confirmed Hassan Aboud, the group's leader, among at least 12 dead.

"We don't know the cause of the explosion yet," Abu Mustafa al-Absi, a member of Ahrar al-Sham's politburo told Al-Jazeera TV in an interview. "We do not rule out the infiltration of elements who were able to plant a bomb," he added.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, the monitoring group, said some 50 of the group's leaders had been gathered at a house when the blast went off. Rami Abdulrahman, who runs the Observatory, said the blast had occurred inside the meeting.

Ahrar al-Sham, which is widely believed to have received funding from Gulf states, aims to implement Islamic sharia law in Syria. It was at one point considered the strongest insurgent group in the Syrian civil war.

Syrian state TV flashed an urgent news headline reporting Aboud's death.

Syria descended into civil war after an uprising against President Bashar al-Assad's rule in 2011. The United Nations recently put the death toll above 191,000 people.

In January another senior Ahrar al-Sham leader, Abu Khaled al-Soury, was killed in a suicide attack. Soury had fought alongside al-Qaeda founder Osama bin Laden and was close to its current chief Ayman al-Zawahri.—Reuters

China deploys troops to UN force to protect South Sudan oilfields

MALI, 10 Sept—China has begun deploying 700 soldiers to a UN peacekeeping force in South Sudan to protect oil fields and Chinese workers amid a rebellion in the African country, The Wall Street Journal reported.

The newspaper quoted a spokesman for South Sudan's president as saying on Tuesday that the airlift of a Chinese infantry battalion to the South Sudanese states of Unity and Upper Nile was expected to take several days.

China is the biggest investor in South Sudan's oil industry.

UN officials have previously said it would be the first time China had contributed a battalion to a UN peacekeeping mission. Last year China sent a smaller "protection unit" to join a UN mission in Mali.

China has played an unusually active diplomatic role in South Sudan.

Beijing last month pressed South Sudan over renewed violence in the oil-rich state, demanding an immediate ceasefire and political dialogue in the country.

Under its mandate, UN peacekeepers are allowed to use "all necessary means" to protect civilians at oil installations, The Wall Street Journal said. If attacked, the Chinese soldiers are "combat ready and can fight back", the South Sudan presidential spokesman, Ateny Wek Ateny, said.

Chinese officials have been in regular contact with Western diplomats to help African mediators push for a halt to the fighting in South Sudan. China has pushed rival factions loyal to President Salva Kiir and rebel leader Riek Machar to talk. Around five percent of China's oil imports came from South Sudan when it was pumping at full tilt. Obama tells lawmakers he has authorization for Islamic State fight

WASHINGTON, 10 Sept—President Barack Obama told congressional leaders on Tuesday that he had the authority he needed to take action to destroy the militant group Islamic State, signaling again that the White House will not ask Congress to vote to approve his plan.

Obama met with top Democratic and Republican leaders ahead of a speech on Wednesday evening to lay out his plan to fight the group, also known as ISIL.

"The president told the leaders that he has the authority he needs to take action against ISIL in accordance with the mission he will lay out in his address tomorrow night," the White House said in a statement.

Dollar stays in lower 106 yen as traders lock in gains after rally

TOKYO, 10 Sept — The US dollar remained in the lower 106 yen zone in Tokyo on Wednesday morning as traders paused after the dollar's rapid rally, awaiting fresh signs corroborating a firm recovery in the US economy.

At noon, the dollar fetched 106.30-33 yen compared with 106.15-25 yen in New York and 106.31-32 yen in Tokyo at 5 pm on Tuesday.

The euro was quoted at $1.2928-2929 and 137.43-44 yen against $1.2932-2942 and 137.37-47 yen in New York and $1.2876-2877 and 136.89-93 yen in Tokyo late Tuesday afternoon.

The dollar had climbed to a nearly 6-year high of 106.47 yen at one point in New York on Tuesday on expectations the Federal Reserve is gearing up to raise interest rates. But the US currency stabilized against the yen in Tokyo as traders locked in gains, with fresh data out of the United States thin on the ground for now.

Traders held off moving the dollar higher as they await the Federal Open Market Committee meeting next week, the next potential stage for hawkish comments from Fed members, said Shinichiro Kadota, foreign exchange strategist at Barclays Bank.

Market expectations remained high for an early rate hike as traders brushed off soft August US jobs data released last Friday, with a report from the San Francisco Fed on Monday spurring dollar buying by suggesting that policymakers hold a more hawkish view than investors had been speculating.

"The FOMC meeting and Scotland's independence referendum are both looming as risk events next week, so it's understandable that the dollar's rally would pause in the absence of fresh US data," Kadota said.

The euro, which had fallen after the European Central Bank announced fresh interest rate cuts last Thursday, traded narrowly against the dollar and yen in Tokyo after gaining some ground in New York overnight.—Kyodo News

A high-soy diet may drive breast tumour growth : study

A bushel of soybeans are shown on display in the Monsanto research facility in Creve Coeur, Missouri, on 28 July, 2014. — REUTERS

NEW YORK, 10 Sept — For some women with breast cancer, taking soy protein supplements boosted the expression of tumour genes associated with an increase in tumor cells, in a recent randomized trial.

Many women take tremendous amounts of soy thinking it will prevent breast cancer based on epidemiological studies, said lead author Dr Moshe Shike of Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Centre in New York.

Some studies of Asian populations have found that as soy intake increased, breast cancer risk decreased, but those studies couldn't prove a beneficial effect of soy — they could only identify an association, Shike said.

The new study, however, looked at women who had already been diagnosed with breast cancer.

Soybeans contain phytoestrogens, which can mimic, at least weakly, some effects of the hormone estrogen — and "estrogen is no good at any time after breast cancer diagnosis," said V Craig Jordan of the Georgetown University Lombardi Comprehensive Cancer Centre in Washington, DC, in a phone interview.

Most breast cancers, including all those in the new trial, are estrogen-receptor positive, meaning the tumors may respond to signals from estrogen in the body. For that reason, as soon as a woman is diagnosed with breast cancer, she will be asked to avoid hormones and will usually receive anti-estrogenic drugs like tamoxifen after surgery, said Jordan, who wrote a commentary accompanying the new study.

With support from the Breast Cancer Research Foundation, Shike and his coauthors studied changes in the molecular structure of early-stage breast cancer cells obtained from biopsies done at diagnosis and again few weeks later, when the tumor was removed.

The 140 women in the study were taking either soy protein or milk protein supplements in the meantime, in the form of two 25.8 gram packets mixed into water or juice each day.— Reuters

CFTC keeping tabs on LME amid aluminium warehousing crisis

NEW YORK, 10 Sept — The US commodities markets regulator is still keeping tabs on the London Metal Exchange as the 137-year-old exchange tries to resolve an ongoing crisis over its warehousing policy that end users say has inflated prices and distorted supplies.

In an interview with Reuters, Timothy Massad, the newly installed chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) said the regulator has been in touch with the LME as it prepares to launch a new aluminium contract in a bid to ease concerns that global aluminium pricing is broken.

"We've had a dialogue with them (the LME) about some of those issues and will continue to do that," he said. The comments come a year after the CFTC launched a probe into complaints from consumers like Coca-Cola Co (KO.N) and MillerCoors LLC, which use the metal to make cans, about long wait times to take physical delivery of metals and record high prices. Consumers say Wall Street banks, including Goldman Sachs Group Inc (GS.N), and major commodity merchants like Glencore Plc (GLEN.L) have run a lucrative business building up big aluminium stocks, charging rent to store the metal and delivering it only at a limited rate. Massad on Tuesday declined to comment on the status of the CFTC probe, but the comments were his first on the matter since being appointed to lead the agency in June and some of the most candid by a CFTC commissioner since the controversy flared up last summer.

Soft bounce in Japan machinery orders leaves doubts on outlook

Heavy machinery is seen in a construction site in Tokyo on 13 March, 2014. — REUTERS

TOKYO, 10 Sept — Japan's core machinery orders rose for a second straight month in July, but analysts said the data failed to dispel some doubts about the strength of business investment that is needed to propel Japan out of the slump caused by April's sales tax hike.

The 3.5 percent rise in core orders, a highly volatile data series regarded as an indicator of capital spending in the coming six to nine months, was less than the median estimate of a 4.0 percent increase in a

Reuters poll of economists.

That followed a 8.8 percent rise in June and a 19.5 percent drop in May, which was the biggest drop in data going back to 2005.

The data followed a recent run of weak economic indicators that suggest a rebound expected this quarter from April's slump may not prove as strong as originally thought.

Weak readings cloud the prospects of a planned increase in the sales tax in October 2015, while keeping policymakers under pressure to provide fresh stimulus to prop up the economy.

"Some companies are still cautious about demand. I expect the second sales tax hike to happen, but keep an eye out for more stimulus from the government," said Hiroaki Muto, senior economist at Sumitomo Mitsui Asset Management Co.

The core orders were boosted by one big order from a chemicals producer, a government official said, adding that excluding the one-off factor overall growth in July was moderate. The Cabinet Office data showed orders from manufacturers for new machinery rose 20.3 percent in July — thanks to the big order from a chemicals producer — while those from non-manufacturers fell 4.3 percent.

"The rebound was weak. Manufacturers may be turning cautious about capital spending due to sluggish exports and consumption, and the decline in orders from nonmanufacturers likely reflect weak domestic demand," said Koya Miyamae, senior economist at SMBC Nikko Securities.— Reuters

Cuba estimates total damage of US embargo at $116.8 billion

HAVANA, 10 Sept — US economic sanctions against Cuba have cost the island nation $3.9 billion in foreign trade over the past year, helping to raise the overall estimate of economic damage to $116.8 billion over the past 55 years, Cuba said on Tuesday. The figures were published in a report that Cuba prepares for the United Nations each year in requesting a resolution urging an end to the comprehensive US economic embargo and other sanctions against Cuba's Communist government. The United Nations has passed the resolution for 22 straight years with overwhelming support. Last year the vote was 188 to 2, with only the United States and Israel voting against the resolution.

Although many US allies join Washington in criticizing Cuba's one-party system and repression of political opponents, the Americans have lost nearly all international support for the embargo since the collapse of the Soviet Union. No other nation besides the United States has an economic embargo against Cuba. Cuba in turn uses the embargo to counter internal discontent over a stagnant economy. " ... There is not, and there has not been in the world, such a terrorizing and vile violation of human rights of an entire people than the blockade that the US government has been leading against Cuba for 55 years," Deputy Foreign Minister Abelardo Moreno told reporters.

After Fidel Castro's rebels came to power in Cuba in 1959, the United States imposed initial sanctions in 1960, and then a full embargo in 1961.

Other US laws have strengthened the embargo over the years, imposing fines on companies from third countries that have business in Cuba and also in the United States.

Japan nuclear plant gets safety OK, moves closer to resumption Tokyo, 10 Sept — A nuclear plant operated by Kyushu Electric Power Co obtained a safety clearance from regulators on Wednesday, becoming the first to meet new regulations imposed following the 2011 Fukushima nuclear disaster.

With Nuclear Regulation Authority approval, two reactors at the Sendai power plant in Kagoshima Prefecture, southwestern Japan, achieved the first step toward restarting the country's nuclear power industry.

The pro-nuclear government of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe is eager to bring reactors back online amid a surge in fuel costs for thermal power generation, which has made up for the absence of atomic power.

A restart of the Sendai plant, however, is not likely to happen before December, as Kyushu Electric still needs to get some paperwork done to complete the NRA screening process.

The regional utility also needs to obtain consent from local authorities and undergo on-site operational checks. On Wednesday, the five-member decision-making panel of the nuclear safety regulator unanimously approved the final version of its screening report.

Reflected in the document were some of more than 17,800 comments received from the public after the panel approved a draft version on 16 July.

The comments included those criticizing the regulator's judgment that the chance of volcanic eruptions affecting the Sendai plant — located in the region of active volcanic sites — were small, while others conveyed technical concern that safety measures against a variety of possible hazards such as tsunami and cyberattacks are inadequate.

Major amendments, however, were not made to the report.—Kyodo News

Canada finds ship from doomed 19th-century Franklin expedition

OTTAWA, 10 Sept — Canadian explorers have found the wreck of one of two ships lost in the 1845 Franklin expedition to Canada's Northwest Passage, solving an enduring historical mystery and bolstering Canada's claim to the key Arctic trade route.

Sir John Franklin and his 128 crew in the British ships HMS Erebus and HMS Terror were seeking the fabled Northwest Passage between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans when they became stuck in ice. The men all died and the ships vanished.

"I am delighted to announce that this year's Victoria Strait expedition has solved one of Canada's greatest mysteries, with the discovery of one of the two ships belonging to the Franklin Expedition," Prime Minister Stephen Harper said in a statement.

"Finding the first vessel will no doubt provide the momentum — or wind in our sails — necessary to locate its sister ship and find out even more about what happened to the Franklin Expedition's crew." The mystery has gripped Canadians for generations, in part because of the crew's grisly fate. Tales handed down through the aboriginal Inuit people describe cannibalism among the desperate seamen.

Harper, who has visited the Arctic territory of Nunavut every year since taking power in 2006, said the discovery was an historic moment for Canada.

"Franklin's ships are an important part of Canadian history given that his expeditions, which took place nearly 200 years ago, laid the foundations of Canada's Arctic sovereignty," he said.

Global warming is rapidly melting the Arctic ice sheets, opening up the possibility that ships travelling between the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans could use the Northwest Passage as a short cut.

Canada says it has sovereignty over the passage but the United States does not acknowledge this, saying the channel lies in international waters.

This year's bid to locate the ships included money spent on seabed mapping to make "Canada's Arctic both safer and more secure," according to a Parks Canada release at the time of the expedition. Parks Canada archaeologists discovered the wreck using a remotely operated underwater vehicle. An image released showed a largely intact wooden ship resting upright on the seabed only 11 meters (36 feet) below the surface. Some of the deck structures were still intact, although the main mast had been sheared off.

Harper said experts did not yet know whether the ship found was the Erebus or the Terror. — Reuters

South Korea shooter Jin wins world title, breaks record

SEOUL, 10 Sept — Triple Olympic champion Jin Jong-oh will be on a high heading into this month's Asian Games in Incheon after breaking a long-standing record and winning the 50 metres pistol event at the shooting world championships.

The South Korean scored a combined 583 points on the way to winning the title in Granada on Tuesday, breaking the world record set by Russian Alexander Melentiev at the 1980 Olympics by two points.

It was a first individual world title for Jin, who won 50m pistol gold at the 2008 and 2012 Olympics and also added the 10m title at the London Games.

"Every time I shot a match, ever since I started competing, I have been trying to reach that result. It feels awesome," Jin told the International Shooting Sport Federation's (ISSF)'s official website.

The 34-year-old won 50m team gold at the 2010

World Championships in Munich, and 10m and 50m team gold at the Asian Games in Guangzhou the same year.

"Winning the world championship title is a great achievement for me," added Jin, who scored 192.3 points in the final and hopes to win a fourth Olympic gold in 2016. "The road to Rio is still long. I will have to shoot well in the next two years to be there."

India's Jitu Rai won silver after scoring 191.1 points in the final and China's Pang Wei took bronze (172.6). The shooting competition at the 17th Asian Games in Incheon, west of Seoul, starts on 20 September. — Reuters

Former F1 champion Schumacher leaves hospital for home

GENEVA, 10 Sept — Michael Schumacher has left hospital to continue his recovery at home but the former Formula One champion faces "a long and difficult road ahead" after his skiing accident last year, a statement said on Tuesday.

"Henceforth, Michael's rehabilitation will take place at his home. Considering the severe injuries he suffered, progress has been made in the past weeks and months," said the brief statement issued by manager Sabine Kehm.

"There is still, however, a long and difficult road ahead.

"We ask that the privacy of Michael's family continue to be respected, and that speculations about his state of health are avoided."

A spokesman for the university hospital in Lausanne, confirmed that the 45-year-old German, a seven-times world champion, had been discharged earlier in the day. No details were given on Schumacher's condition.

Simple for Simone as Italy tame toothless Norway

OSLO, 10 Sept — Simone Zaza made the most of the suspended Mario Balotelli's absence up front by scoring the opening goal to pave the way for Italy's comfortable 2-0 win over Norway in a Euro 2016 Group H qualifier on Tuesday.

The Sassuolo striker, surprisingly brought into the squad by new coach Antonio Conte, struck with a deflected shot after 16 minutes and also hit the crossbar and had another effort cleared off the line before being substituted.

The 23-year-old Zaza repaid Conte's faith immediately, winning a penalty on his debut in the 2-0 friendly victory over Netherlands in Bari on Thursday before scoring in Oslo.

"He is a player of great desire and pride and he and the others have given a good example of that tonight," Conte told a news conference.

The Norwegians offered little resistance, enjoying plenty of possession in front of a sell-out crowd but failing to threaten Gianluigi Buffon's goal.

Their best attacks came down Italy's left flank as livewire Mats Moeller Daehli displayed his full bag of tricks and dribbles but the winger faded in the second half, as did the home team's chances.

Missing Balotelli and playmaker Andrea Pirlo, Conte's first competitive game in charge saw him field a relatively young team that favoured industry over flair.

With Mattia De Sciglio and Matteo Darmian playing wide in a five-man midfield, Italy began by probing the spaces behind Norway's full backs.

from the front, with Zaza and Ciro Immobile energetically leading the chase to win the ball back when their side gave it away.

The visitors took the lead fortuitously when Zaza's effort took a deflection and wrong-footed keeper Orjan Nyland before bouncing into the net.

Norway's defence was too passive for the goal and should have shut down the Italy striker before he shot.

Captain Leonardo Bonucci again punished Norway in the 62nd minute, rising unmarked to power home a downward header from substitute Manuel Pasqual's cross.

Italy could have made it 3-0 in the 77th minute when Zaza went one-on-one with Nyland but his rising shot cannoned back off the crossbar and Alessandro Florenzi's header from the rebound was palmed away by the keeper.

Zaza had another one-on-one with Nyland a few minutes later. This time his delicate chip was cleared off the line and he was replaced by Mattia Destro soon after.

Conte said his side played an "almost perfect game", adding "it's important to create that kind of team spirit, a team with a capital T".

FIFA medical officer wants strict new rules on concussion

Tottenham Hotspur's goalkeeper Hugo Lloris (C) is attended to by medical staff after being involved in a collision with Everton's Romelu Lukaku (R) during their English Premier League soccer match at Goodison Park in Liverpool, northern England on 3 Nov, 2013.—REUTERS

MANCHESTER, 10 Sept — Referees will be instructed to stop a match immediately for three minutes when a player is suspected of being concussed, if a proposal from FIFA's chief medical officer is accepted.

Michel D'Hooghe, the chairman of FIFA's medical committee and a UEFA executive committee member, told delegates at the Soccerex Global Convention on Tuesday that he will put his proposal before the European governing body at their executive committee meeting on 18 September and to FIFA's executive on 25 September.

Although cases of concussion are relatively rare in soccer, D'Hooghe said there were five suspected cases at the Brazil World Cup.

There have also been some high profile incidents that have raised concerns at FIFA such as when France international goalkeeper Hugo Lloris was concussed playing for his club Tottenham Hotspur against Everton last year.

"If there is a suspected concussion we will ask the referee to stop the game for three minutes. The referee will only allow the player to continue playing with the green light of the team doctor — nobody else," the Belgian said.

D'Hooghe told reporters that as this proposal does not constitute a change in the laws of the game, but just in the rules of competition, it could come into force as early as 1 October. If approved, it would apply initially to matches in World Cup qualifying games, European Championship qualifiers, Champions League and Europa League matches, but not at the domestic level.

"FIFA issued our first paper on concussion in 2003 and we have organized four concussion meetings, but it is true we have no strict rules, but we will have them if UEFA and FIFA approve it, and why not from 1 October?" D'Hooghe said.

"There are sports like American Football where they have 200 concussions a year and in Australian Football they have 120 a year. "In soccer we have a concussion case once in 20 games so it is not frequent, but that does not mean it is not a serious problem.

"Now the medical committee is proposing that where there is a suspected concussion the referee must stop the game for three minutes which will give the team doctor the chance to evaluate medically the condition of the player. "Of course if he is unconscious it is not difficult, but if he is not, it gives the doctor the chance to talk to him and give him a brief neurological examination and then take a decision.

"The referee can only allow the player to continue with the green light of the team doctor.

Missing Europe will help United recovery, says Charlton

MANCHESTER, 10 Sept — Manchester United director Bobby Charlton believes the club's absence from European competition this season will aid their recovery as they begin a "great adventure" under new manager Louis van Gaal.

The former European Cup and World Cup winner, who scored 247 goals in 754 appearances for United, said he was sure the team would improve after taking two points from three Premier League games and were "set fair" to revive the club's glory days.

"It seems strange that Manchester United is not involved in European football for a season," he said in a report on the club website. "It's crazy, but maybe it can make things easier for us.

"We have started with some new players, we have not been playing well, but we will play well. I think that it's going to be a great adventure of how we pull ourselves back around and get back to the way it used to be."

United are without a win in four games this season, including a humiliating 4-0 League Cup defeat at third tier MK Dons, and await their first competitive victory under Van Gaal.

United dominated the European transfer activity during the summer window, spending more than 150 million pounds ($241.58 million) in a spectacular spree to bring in six international players, including a British record fee of 59.7 million pounds (96.09 million US dollar) for Argentine winger Angel Di Maria.—Reuters
