Coalition launched in response to wild elephant skinning crisis

MYANMAR is losing at least one wild elephant per week to poaching and skinning, according to the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation, and if this continues, Myanmar could lose its wild elephants in a matter of years, officials said.

In a bid to reverse this decline, six conservation organisations have come together to form Voices for Momos (Voices for Myanmar Elephants), a multi-sector coalition in support of Myanmar's national plan to protect its elephants: the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Environmental Conservation (MONREC)'s Myanmar Elephant Conservation Action Plan (MECAP).

His Excellency U Ohn Win, the Union Minister for Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation said, "The Myanmar Elephant Conservation Action Plan has been developed and designed to reverse the decline in the wild elephant population and to secure their future for the next generation of Myanmar people. We welcome the partnership with Voices for Momos and look forward to working together in putting an end to elephant poaching and illegal wildlife trading."

Biodiversity and Nature Conservation Association (BANCA), Fauna & Flora International (FFI) Myanmar, Friends of Wildlife, Grow Back for Posterity (GBP), the Wildlife Conservation Society (WCS) and the World Wide Fund for Nature (WWF) are the founding partners of Voices for Momos, which calls on individuals and organisations to use their voice to drive awareness, education and call for the end of illegal wildlife sales in Myanmar.

"Myanmar's wild elephants will be wiped out unless we take action now. We are calling upon individuals and organisations across all sectors to join Voices for Momos and use their voice to speak up before our wild elephants are silenced forever," said Nay Myo Shwe, Taninthayi Conservation Programme Coordinator, Fauna & Flora International Myanmar.

A high demand for elephant body parts including skin has turned the country into a poaching hotspot.

Elephants are typically shot with poisoned darts or high-velocity rifles, and die a prolonged and painful death before being skinned, environmental officials said. Their skin, teeth, tusks and other parts are sold locally and overseas.

Elephant skin has long been part of the illegal wildlife trade, but never at these levels, conservation experts said. In 2016, 18 wild elephants were killed, according to the ministry, but by August, NGOs working in the field put the figure of poached and skinned elephants at "at least 30", averaging one per week. Official estimates put the wild elephant population in Myanmar at 1,400 to 2,000 but the actual figure could be far lower. ■

Indawgyi Biosphere Reserve Inauguration held last Tuesday near Indawgyi Lake

INDAWGYI Biosphere Reserve Inauguration was held last Tuesday at the Indaw religious building and Indawgyi Lake, the country's largest freshwater lake in Mohnyin District, Kachin State was recognised as UNESCO's Biosphere Reserve on 15 June.

At the ceremony, Union Minister U Ohn Win for Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation said that biodiversity helps develop the eco-system. On the other hand, the destruction of biodiversity leads to many challenges such as climate change, water scarcity, natural disasters and insufficient energy. In an attempt to reduce the loss of biodiversity and environmental degradation, natural sites are being established across the globe.

To preserve the eco-system in Myanmar, the country is also focusing on setting up natural sites. Ten per cent of the area of the country has been set as natural sites and forty sites have been established.

Setting Indawgyi Lake area as a Biosphere Reserve is a great opportunity for sustainable development of natural resource maintaining biodiversity and ecosystem. It is the third largest lake in South East Asia. The lake surrounding wetlands and forest is home to globally threatened water birds, turtle species, endemic fish, mammals, reptiles and primates. In addition to government and international assistance, the cooperation of the local residents plays a vital role to maintain the biodiversity and eco system. However, it takes time to develop the region, he added.

Union Minister and State Chief Minister Dr Khat Aung signed an inauguration record after recognition of Indawgyi Lake area as UNESCO's Biosphere Reserve.

H.E. Ms Dorothee Janetzke Wenzel, German Ambassador to

Myanmar delivered a speech. Chairman of Germany UNESCO Biosphere explained about international partner organizations and Mr. Matthew Walpole from Fauna & Flora Myanmar introduced about Biosphere Reserve.

Director of the natural resources and wildlife conservation division and director of Germany Biosphere Reserve signed a partnership agreement. Director-General of the Forest Department and Mr Matthew Walpole from Fauna & Flora Myanmar signed a Memorandum of Understanding.

Union Minister, State Chief Minister and ministers, the German Ambassador to Myanmar and her husband, Norwegian Ambassador to Myanmar, officials and representatives from Biosphere Reserve network, ASEAN center for Biodiversity, representatives from NGO, INGO, CBO toured Indawgyi Lake with boats.

There are 669 Biosphere Reserve sites in 120 countries. Myanmar's Inlay Lake and Indawgyi Lake have been recognised as Biosphere Reserves.

The lake was an ASEAN Heritage Park due to its rich biodiversity. It was also designated as a Ramsar Site in early 2016 and as a Man and Biosphere Reserve (MAB) in 2017.— IPRD (Kachin State) ■

Six Yangon townships to get modern sewage system by 2040

A modern sewage system in six townships in Yangon will be completed by 2040, said Yangon Mayor U Maung Maung Soe yesterday.

He made the remark in his answer to a question raised by Yangon Region MP Daw Kyi Pyar at the Yangon Region Parliament on whether the Yangon City Development Committee has plans to use modern machinery for the sewage systems in the six townships.

"We are cooperating with international organisations to modernise Yangon City, including the sewage system in six townships with future populations in mind. We have drawn the master plan for that," said U Maung Maung Soe.

Regarding the plan, the YCDC is working together with international organisations such as the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) and the World Bank to receive technical and monetary assistance.

Meanwhile, the YCDC has signed Memorandums of Understanding (MoUs) with Sumitomo Corporation to construct a sewage water treatment plant and to lay pipes in the city

"At present, the YCDC is working its best on the sewage systems with the use of compressors and manpower," said the mayor. The current sewage system in six townships including Kyauktada, Pabedan and Latha have been in use for more than 100 years.—Ko Moe ■

ing buildings at Myin Lut Ywar Thit Village, two guns in bag that were buried in the back of Adula Kane's house were discovered. No one is currently living at the house, authorities said.

Mung bean and pigeon pea prices rise due to foreign demand

May Thet Hnin

THE price of mung bean and pigeon peas increased slightly with demand from Bangladesh, Pakistan and the UAE, said U Min Ko Oo, secretary of the Myanmar Pulses, Beans and Sesame Seeds Merchants Association.

The price of mung bean increased from Ks425,000 to Ks490,000 a ton compared to last month's price. Similarly, pigeon peas rose from Ks310,000 to Ks335,000 a ton.

Following India's import restriction on pulses in August, mung bean and pigeon peas prices plummeted. Prior to this announcement, a ton of pigeon peas fetched up to Ks650,000, while mung bean price was Ks800,000 per ton.

In an attempt to control the pea prices, merchants united to form a committee and launched an investment fund of Ks50 billion to purchase the pulses. Starting from 12 October, more than 3,800 tons of mung bean and about 10,000 tons of pigeon peas were purchased so far, said U Min Ko Oo.

Around 100,000 tons of pigeon peas and nearly 200,000 tons of mung bean were stockpiled in August when India suspended pulses importation.

At present, a huge stock of around 70,000 tons of pigeon peas and 200,000 tons of mung beans are piling up. "The stocks will gradually decrease with local demand", he added.

Myanmar pulses are kept on display for sale in a shop at a market. PHOTO: ZAW MIN LATT

The growers cultivated pigeon peas in June and at least about 300,000 tons is likely to be produced in December. In order for the growers to do well during the time that India has suspended pea purchases, the government will buy directly from the local growers with a Ks15 billion fund.

"The fund allocated to purchase pulses was already vested in the Commerce Ministry.

It will make direct purchases from the growers in the respective regions and states during the harvest time of pigeon peas.

At the new harvest time, I'm satisfied with this action that the government will purchase the peas from the growers who need to cover their cultivation cost, according to the Law of Protection of Farmer Rights", said U Min Ko Oo.

However, details about set prices and purchase volume are not yet known. "I appreciate this action that the government considers for the growers to reap benefits.

If not, the growers will not be able to escape from the circle of debts and might end up giving up their cultivation land.

We hope the agriculture information to determine that which crop is better for this season or which crop might fetch a good price will widely disseminate", said U Zaw Khin, a grower from Shwebo District, Sagaing Region.

India's suspension on pulses imports forced the growers to tend to other crops in the coming pulses cultivation season.

India is the main buyer of Myanmar's pigeon peas, mung beans and green grams. About 1.5 million tons of pulses were exported to that market a year. ■

Rice bran oil mills to be established in Myaungmya, Kyaiklat and Twantay townships

May Thet Hnin

RICE bran oil mills will be set up in Myaungmya and Kyaiklat townships in Ayeyawady Region and Twantay Township in Yangon Region in order to produce value-added rice bran oil, said U Ye Min Aung, the secretary of the Myanmar Rice Federation.

Construction of the mills will start this fiscal year and the mills are slated to begin operation in early 2019, he continued.

Rice bran oil is highly nutritious and highly valued due to its health benefits. Also, it can be used in cooking and cosmetic products and the healthcare industry.

In addition to rice bran oil, de-oiled rice bran cake can be used as feedstuff. Thus, it helps support the domestic livestock industry.

"Myanmar is heavily reliant on imported edible palm oil. About 500,000 metric tons of palm oil is annually imported into the country. Domestic production of healthy oil like rice bran oil is a strategic planning. It will help reduce the import of palm oil.

Locally produced rice bran oil will ensure health safety to the public", said U Ye Min Aung.

The capital goods for rice bran oil mills will be imported from India, which will also share technology. Currently, there is ongoing discussion with organisations which will support machines and technology. ■

Short-term priority projects in northern Rakhine underway

NOW that Rakhine State has started to regain regional security and stability after the terrorist attacks by the Arakan Rohingya Salvation Army (ARSA) in northern Rakhine State, relevant ministries are implementing short-term priority projects in multiple sectors, it was learnt.

Starting from 5th September, there were no longer military operations in northern Rakhine State, according to the Union government. Out of the security forces which are launching measures for the rule of law, some columns of the Tatmadaw were made to withdraw from Buthidaung and Maungtaw conflict areas to be reformed as reserve forces and stationed on standby, officials said.

On 17 October, the Union Enterprise for Humanitarian Assistance, Resettlement and Development (UEHRD) was officially formed for effective performance of long-term project of freedom from conflicts.

Plans for University of Fish underway

By Ko Moe

PLANS are underway to establish the University of Fish by 2018, as the fishery sector is of vital importance in growing the nation's Gross Domestic Product (GDP), according to the Myanmar Fisheries Federation (MFF).

"The project for founding the University of Fish in the next year is underway. The project is being implemented as quickly as possible depending on human resources acquired.

Now, the teachers who instruct subjects related are being gathered", said Dr. Toe Nandar Tin, vice chairperson of the Myanmar Fisheries Federation.

The University of Fish will be founded and operated using international standards. After the founding the university, an academic institution of a high standard will be created, not a so-called "degree mill", Dr. Toe Nandar Tin said.

To be able to establish the university, negotiations are being made with related ministries for cooperation, she added.

Founding the University of Fish is necessary, even though the Department of Fisheries currently conducts training in cooperation with local and international organisations, Dr. Toe Nandar Tin said.

"Classes such as quality control, production and catching methods conducted by the Fisheries Department in the past were stopped for various reasons. Now classes and training need to be conducted by a university and vocational schools related with water resources", said U Myo Nyunt, secretary of Myanmar Fishery products Processors & Exporters Association.

At present, fish breeding in Myanmar is mostly done with a type of fish that needs a long time to reach full maturity. Technical assistance is needed to switch the breeding method.

The Yangon Region Government has said that the activities for the development of the fishery sector in Yangon will be carried out at the end of the rainy season this year.

In fiscal year 2016-2017, Myanmar aquatic products exported abroad were valued at US$600 million. ■

South Korea's Moon says cannot recognise North Korea as nuclear state

SEOUL/BEIJING — South Korea will never tolerate North Korea as a nuclear state, nor will Seoul have nuclear weapons, President Moon Jae-in said on Wednesday, as China pledged to work on denuclearisation after setting aside a dispute with Seoul over an anti-missile system.

The North Korea nuclear crisis will take centre stage when US President Donald Trump begins a trip to Asia at the end of the week and diplomacy has been ramping up ahead of that visit.

A series of weapons tests by Pyongyang and a string of increasingly bellicose exchanges between Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un in recent months has raised fears about an armed conflict. Speaking to parliament, Moon said there can be no military action on the Korean peninsula without the South's consent, adding the government will continue working for peace on the peninsula.

"According to the joint denuclearisation declaration made by North and South Korea, we cannot tolerate or recognise North Korea as a nuclear state. We too, will not develop nuclear (weapons) or own them," he said.

"Our government was launched in the most serious of times in terms of security. The government is making efforts to stably manage the situation it faces as well as to bring about peace on the Korean peninsula."

China's foreign ministry said Beijing and Seoul will continue to use diplomatic means to address the Korean peninsula issue, after a meeting in Beijing between Lee Do-hoon, South Korea's representative of stalled six-party nuclear talks, and his Chinese counterpart, Kong Xuanyou.

Moon's remarks and China's statement came a day after China and South Korea agreed to normalise relations to end a year-long standoff over the deployment of the US Terminal High Altitude Area Defence (THAAD) system.

The installation of THAAD had angered China, which feared its powerful radar could see deep into China. South Korea's tourism, cosmetics and entertainment industries bore the brunt of a Chinese backlash, although Beijing has never specifically linked that to the THAAD deployment.

North Korea's state media had no comment on the shift in ties between South Korea and China as of midday on Wednesday. It has not engaged in missile tests since mid-September or any nuclear tests since its biggest one early that month.

A senior Blue House official had said warmer bilateral ties had seemed to come about from better trust in Seoul by Beijing, which has expressed concerns regarding possible additional deployments of a US anti-missile defence system and military cooperation among South Korea, the United States and Japan.

Earlier this week, South Korea's Foreign Minister Kang Kyung-hwa had said South Korea has no intention to join a US missile-defence system in the region and would not host additional THAAD batteries. South Korea would not enter any trilateral military alliance with the United States and Japan, Kang added.

The United States is deciding whether three aircraft carriers currently in the Asia Pacific will carry out an exercise to coincide with Trump's trip to the region, two US officials said. Japan's navy is considering sending one or more ships to the exercise if it is held, a Japanese government source said.

Trump's trip includes Tokyo, Seoul and Beijing but he will not go to the heavily fortified demilitarized zone (DMZ) on the border of North Korea and South Korea, a senior White House official said. China's top newspaper, the Communist Party's official People's Daily, wrote in a commentary on Wednesday that China expected South Korea to take seriously its responsibility to protect regional peace now that they had set relations back on the correct track.

"The appropriate handling of the THAAD issue by China and South Korea can provide an opportunity for both countries to increase cooperation and communication on the peninsula issue," it said. But influential state-run tabloid the Global Times warned there would not be an immediate improvement in cultural and business ties, with South Korean firms having to make an effort to win back Chinese customers.

"Whether or not Chinese consumers buy South Korean products is not totally up to the Chinese government," it said in an editorial. The rapprochement meant both countries were able to walk away with gains, said John Delury, professor at Seoul's Yonsei University.

"It is arguably Moon's first foreign policy breakthrough, giving South Korea's economy a boost and enhancing his geopolitical leverage by strengthening the relationship with China," said Delury. "But Xi can also claim a victory — he made his point that Seoul needs to factor China's interests more seriously into its security posture, at least when it comes to things like missile defence that can alter the regional balance of power." —Reuters ■

Philippines arrests Indonesian pro-Islamist militant in Marawi

MANILA — Philippine security forces on Wednesday arrested an Indonesian national suspected to be among the pro-Islamist militants who seized control of parts of the southern city of Marawi in May, military and police officials said.

The seizure stoked concerns that the region had become a hub for Islamic State in Southeast Asia, triggering a five-month military effort to eject the militants, comprised of domestic fighters and foreigners such as Indonesians, Malaysians and Middle Easterners.

Community peacekeepers arrested the Indonesian on Wednesday morning, Colonel Romeo Brawner, deputy commander of the Marawi task force, told reporters.

The arrest highlights that "civilian participation is essential in our collective effort to secure our communities from terrorist elements," Zia Alonto Adiong, a politician who is assisting in rescue and relief, said in a statement.

The arrest came a day after a pro-Islamic State militant was gunned down and nine days after the Philippines wrapped up military operations. More than 1,100 people, mostly militants, died in the siege, which drove about 350,000 from their homes.

The militant identified himself as Muhammad Ilham Shaputra, 23, from Medan City in North Sumatra, said John Guyguyon, police chief of the province of Lanao del Sur, where Marawi is located.

His bag held a mobile phone, a .45-caliber handgun, a fragmentation grenade and Philippine and Indonesian currencies, along with some riyals, while he tried to escape through a lake, Guyguyon added.

"Our action is to file a case against him because he is part of the initial siege," Guyguyon told a news conference.

"We are preparing the investigation report so we can file cases of rebellion, terrorism and others," Guyguyon said, adding that the Indonesian confessed there were several gunmen still hiding in the main battle area in downtown Marawi.—Reuters ■

Cambodia's Angkor sees tourist, revenue surge in first 10 months

PHNOM PENH — Cambodia's famed Angkor Archeological Park received 1.94 million foreign visitors during the first 10 months of 2017, up 12 per cent compared to the same period last year, an official statement said on Wednesday.

The ancient site earned gross revenue of 84.2 million US dollars from ticket sales during the January-October period this year; up 71 per cent over the same period last year, said the state-owned Angkor Enterprise's statement. The sharp rise in revenue was due to the hike in ticket prices in February. Most visitors to the historic site were Chinese, South Koreans and Americans. The current entrance fee to the park is 37 US dollars for a one-day visit, 62 US dollars for a three-day pass, and 72 US dollars for a week-long pass. Located in northwestern

Cambodia's Siem Reap province, the Angkor Archeological Park, inscribed on the World Heritage List of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in 1992, is the country's most popular tourist destination.—Reuters ■

Rakhine State affair and cooperation

By Khin Maung Oo

IT was said there has been a growing concern among the global community that resurgent nationalism would appear in Myanmar concerning the Rakhine State affair. They are worried rising waves of nationalism will appear among social communities as a result of resurgent nationalism and thence become obstacles on Myanmar's road to reforms and democracy.

A strong sense of nationalism did not occur in the minds of the people without rhyme or reason. Based on the false allegations that ethnic cleansing was being committed in Rakhine State, nationalistic spirit welled up in the hearts of the Myanmar people as the said accusations affected the national dignity and image of the country. The Myanmar people felt deeply hurt because they believed that the international community had decided to neglect the dangerous threats on Myanmar's national sovereignty by swallowing lock, stock and barrel the propaganda lines churned out by the numerous channels with dubious names but with one definite single intent – to bring shame to the Myanmar people, discredit our leaders and hurl continuous baseless accusations against the Myanmar Armed Forces. The ease at which the international community has fallen prey to the sight of crying babies or tales of human rights abuses, brings into focus the power of the internet, Face Book and other mass communications tools to sway public opinion towards a certain cause. Perhaps they did not find time to read the news reports in detail which stated that the border police outposts were surrounded not by a few dozen militants but by a host of villages armed with sticks and knives. This being the case, it seems natural that these same villages would have immediately decided to flee once they heard the Myanmar Armed Forces entering the area to conduct clearance operations. It certainly does not take a legal expert to come to the conclusion that all those villages who took part in the raids are also punishable under the anti-terrorism law. This fact may perhaps explain why nearly half a million people decided to cross over to the Bangladesh side of the border. At least this may be one of the many reasons. The other reasons could be the lure of easy money in the refugee camps and perhaps the hope of getting refugee status in a third country for economic reasons.

Actually the problems in the Rakhine State could be best solved by taking an objective look at the situation without being overwhelmed by feelings of emotions. This is because the problems require careful study and deep understanding of the underlying causes which cannot be analyzed in simplistic terms. It needs a willingness to approach the complex problem from many viewpoints – such as historic, political, social, economic, communal and religious. It has been clearly publicized that those who will comply with rules and laws will be granted citizenship rights after undergoing a strict and careful process of scrutinizing Bengalis said to have fled into Bangladesh. Every nation, institution and individual desirous of solving the Rakhine State affair with unadulterated minds are required to enthusiastically take part in implementing the process successfully. And they must collectively help by taking part in launching development projects in Rakhine State, as backwardness in economic development is one of the reasons which caused the current problem. We therefore humbly urge the international community to collectively solve the problem hand in hand with the Union Government in a spirit of cooperation, sincerity and genuine good intentions to alleviate the suffering of all communities in the Rakhine State. ■

MINDFULNESS is of paramount importance to achieve any goals and targets in our lives. Always be meditative, youthful, altruistic, nimble, munificent, astute and reliable. Knowledge (wisdom) is power and wish-to-do, work-hard (effort) and will (mind) are also powers for achieving our individual vision and missions as well as our global sustainable development goals by 2030. Enduring patience is the austere practice for all of us living in this planet.

Myanmar is rich with land and its scenic beauties (natural resources), labour (human resources) and famous with its abundant and unexploited resources; the capital (financial resources), machineries and equipment (physical resources) and technology (technological resources) yet need to be developed and improved. Youth population in the Republic of the Union of Myanmar is of great importance and more productive for the implementation of the goals and targets of sustainable development agenda 2030. All the leaders who know the way, go the way, show the way and lead the way need to work together in order to achieve the democracy with the people, for the people, of the people and by the people. No one is above the law and every citizen must abide by the rule of law in order to build a peaceful, harmonious, stable, prosperous and just planet. Man is not perfect; man makes mistakes; you make mistakes, he makes mistakes, she makes mistakes, they make mistakes, I make mistake and we all make mistakes; but practice makes perfect through insight meditation with the eightfold noble path. Aim high act local; all communities of the Union of Myanmar must think about community security and alert to strengthen the solidarity for the sovereignty; for that we must pool our resources available within the community through the saving schemes both in cash and in kind in order to make self-defence and help other needy communities in case of emergency. Right understanding, right thinking (thought), right speech, right action, right livelihood, right effort, right mindfulness and right concentration are eight in one noble path for the cessation of sorrows and sufferings in this world and the next.

Man matters most, money matters most, mind matters most and materials matters most; in practice man is the architect of the world to make just, peace and prosperity or to make conflicts/ violence/ war; money (capital/investment) makes many things but not everything; mind precedes all mental states, mind is their chief, they are all mind-wrought; mind leads the matter (body), inner peace of the body is most important for the outer peace; materials development makes the people to feel more comfortable. One by one, moment by moment, little by little, drops by drops filled the drum/ tank/ pot and we all Myanmar people must learn and get lessons from the history and forgive the past but not forget the invaders near and far with greed, hatred and delusion and we must strive on with diligence and vigilance to protect and safeguard the country with our might and means. Right resource mobilization in Myanmar's abundant resources is of great importance for the posterity and future of the Union of Myanmar and Balance Sheet Reading (how to read a balance sheet) is badly and deeply needed in State Economic Enterprises for public disclosure and there should be only one budget for the entire country. Efficiency is the ratio of input and output and maximum output using minimum input makes an enterprise to be thriving and boosting so that Myanmar people need to put and double their concerted efforts relentlessly in all economic sectors in order to reach the desired targets and goals. Ever grows the glory of him who is energetic, mindful and pure in conduct, discerning and self-controlled, righteous and heedful; by effort and heedfulness, discipline and self-mastery, let the wise one make for himself an island on which no flood can overwhelm.

Most of Myanmar people are Buddhists who are the last defenders for the Theravada Buddhism in this planet and our active, bright, courageous, disciplined, equable, fast and generous people of the Union of Myanmar must protect ourselves and our religion and must safeguard our sovereignty and must defend our territorial integrity International community are warmly and friendly requested to learn more about Myanmar history, geo-politics, her richness of resources and most of Myanmar people are smiling always and famous for their generosity/charity/ philanthropic activities and we are easy to forgive and forget though we dare to fight for our sovereignty, peace and independence. Neither in the sky nor in mid-ocean, nor by entering into mountain clefts, nowhere in the world is there a place where one may escape from the results of evil deeds. Do not give way to heedlessness; do not indulge in sensual pleasure; only the heedful and meditative attain great happiness; the foolish and ignorant indulge in heedlessness but the wise one keeps his heedfulness as his best treasure. Follow not the vulgar way; live not in heedlessness; hold not false views; linger not long in worldly existence; arise! Do not be heedless! Lead a righteous life; the righteous live happily both in this world and the next. Understanding clearly the excellence of heedfulness which is the path to the Deathless and the heedful die not; the wise exult therein and enjoy the resort of the Noble Ones. Let a man guard himself against irritability in thought, speech and bodily action; let him be controlled in mind, speech and deed; abandoning mental misconduct, verbal misconduct and bodily misconduct, let him practice good conduct in thought, speech and deed.

May all Myanmar People be free from all dangers, sufferings and enmity, be happy, healthy, prosperous and peaceful!!! ■

Outcome Statement of Workshop on Consideration of a Moratorium on the Application of Death Penalty, pending its abolition

THE Workshop on the Moratorium of the Death Penalty was held at Hotel Max, Nay Pyi Taw on 30-31 October organised by the Myanmar National Human Rights Commission and supported by the Asia Pacific Forum of National Human Rights Institutions (APF).

The workshop was attended by 33 participants including parliamentarians, senior government officials, representatives from civil society organisations, the media and Members of the Myanmar National Human Rights Commission.

The objective of the workshop is to ask the government to consider initiating a moratorium on the application of death penalty, pending its abolition.

The workshop commenced with welcoming remarks by U Win Mra, Chairman of the Myanmar National Human Rights Commission. In his remarks, the chairman stated that Myanmar has not carried out an execution since 1988 and that it is considered abolitionist in practice, although the death sentence is imposed on offenders in serious crimes.

The chairman requested the participants to freely express their views and comments with regard to considering a moratorium on the application of the death penalty based on prevailing practices.

Presentations were made by the international expert Dr. Jon Yorke, Professor of Human Rights in the School of Law, Birmingham City University in the United Kingdom and Director of the Centre for Human Rights. He shared his views and experiences regarding the Evolution of the UN Legislative Mandate Towards the Abolition of the death penalty, and on the theme of Multilateralism and the Movement Towards Global Abolition, based on the human rights perspective on the death penalty.

Dr. Yorke raised pertinent points regarding the denunciation of the death penalty as an expression of legitimate contemporary state sovereignty and the solidity of the human rights standards for rejecting the use of the death penalty and for enhancing the human dignity of the victims of crimes.

It was then followed by a presentation made by U Soe Phone Myint, a member of the Myanmar National Human Rights Commission, focusing on the relevant provisions of the domestic criminal laws, rulings and precedents relating to the imposition of the death penalty in serious crimes, and granting of pardon by the President under the Constitution of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar.

U Khin Maung Lay, a member of the Myanmar National Human Rights Commission also made a presentation, discussing his experiences with regard to the 6th World Congress on the Abolition of Death Penalty.

Since Myanmar is considered abolitionist in practice, the workshop recommends the government to consider a moratorium on the application of the death penalty, pending its abolition. — Myanmar News Agency ■

Saudi-led air strike kills 26 people in Yemen

DUBAI — An air strike by a Saudi-led military coalition killed 26 people at a hotel and an adjoining market in Yemen's northern Saadah province on Wednesday, according to medics and a Reuters witness at the scene.

The attack which struck the Sahar district of the vast territory, on the border with Saudi Arabia, demolished the budget hotel and reduced market stalls outside to a heap of twisted sheet metal.

Medics gathered corpses and laid them in a group.

A military alliance led by Saudi Arabia has launched thousands of air strikes against Yemen's armed Houthi movement, which hails from Saadah and now controls much of the country.

The 2-1/2 year war effort has yet to achieve its goal of restoring to power the internationally recognized government, but the conflict has unleashed one of the world's worst humanitarian crises and killed at least 10,000 people.

Man arrested after trying to sell original of Bosnia's peace treaty

SARAJEVO — A Bosnian Serb man was arrested after trying to sell an original document from the 1995 Dayton peace agreement that ended Bosnia's war, police said on Wednesday. The document had gone missing a decade ago.

Media identified the man as Zeljko Kuntos, a former driver for a Bosnian Serb ex-parliament speaker, and said he had been trying to sell the document for 100,000 Bosnian marka ($60,000).

The US-brokered peace treaty that ended the war was reached at a US air base in Dayton, Ohio in November 1995 by the then presidents of Bosnia, Serbia and Croatia, the three sides involved in the conflict in which more than 100,000 died.

Under the treaty, Bosnia was split into two autonomous regions, the Federation shared by the Bosnian Croats and Muslim Bosniaks, and the Serb-dominated Serb Republic.

"The person ZK, who obtained during 2017 the original document written in English of the Dayton peace agreement, is suspected of offering it for sale in order to gain illegal benefits," police said in a statement. They gave no further details.

In 2008, a then presidency member revealed that the original document of the peace treaty in English was missing.

Kuntos was arrested on Thursday in Pale, the Bosnian Serb wartime stronghold near Sarajevo. It is not clear how he obtained the document.—Reuters ■

Iraq plans parliamentary elections for 15 May

BAGHDAD — Iraq plans to hold parliamentary elections on 15 May to choose a prime minister, a statement from the prime minister's office said late on Tuesday.

Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi hasn't yet said if he plans to seek a new term. Most executive power is held by the prime minister, who is also commander of the armed forces.

The 15 May date, agreed at a government meeting on Tuesday, has yet to be approved by parliament.

Abadi took over the premiership in 2014 from Nuri al-Maliki, a close ally of Iran held responsible for the army's collapse as Islamic State militants swept through a third of Iraq.

Abadi is credited for quickly rebuilding the army and defeating Islamic State in its main Iraqi stronghold, Mosul, last July, with strong assistance from a US-led coalition.

Maliki holds the ceremonial title of vice-president. As head of the Shi'ite Dawa party and the largest block in parliament, he remains a powerful political figure.

The prime minister's office is reserved for Iraq's majority Shi'ite Arab community under a power-sharing system set up after the 2003 US-led invasion that toppled Saddam Hussein, a Sunni Arab.

The largely ceremonial office of president is reserved for a Kurdish member of parliament. The speaker of parliament is drawn from Sunni Arab MPs.—Reuters ■

Gunfire heard in Eritrea's capital as protests break out, US embassy says

NAIROBI — The US embassy in Eritrea said on Tuesday it had received reports of gunfire in several parts of the capital, Asmara, after protests erupted in one of Africa's most secretive nations.

"The Embassy advises US citizens to avoid the downtown area where protests appear to be more prevalent," it said in a statement. "Avoid areas where demonstrations are taking place and exercise caution when in the vicinity of any large gatherings, protests, or demonstrations."

It was not immediately clear what had caused the protests.

Several UN reports have accused the Eritrean government of crimes against humanity including torture, rape and murder. It denies the charges. A UN Commission of Inquiry report last year said that atrocities — including an indefinite military national service programme that amounted to mass enslavement — had been committed since the country's independence in 1991 and were ongoing.—Reuters ■

Russia may use Su-34 bomber to develop one-seat attack aircraft

MOSCOW — A Russian multi-purpose fighter bomber may get a one-seat variant as an attack aircraft, Russia's Aerospace Force ex-commander and Chairman of the Federation Council Defence and Security Committee Viktor Bondarev told TASS on Wednesday.

"My opinion is that a new attack aircraft should be made on the basis of the Su-34 after all. This is a splendid plane. It is maneuverable and has eight tonnes of the bomb load against four tonnes carried by the Su-25. It has excellent characteristics... I believe that it is simpler and easier to make a cockpit for one pilot and leave all the rest as it is," he said. A new attack aircraft will actually have the same engines as the Su-34, he added.

"An attack aircraft will always be needed. The Su-25 has been upgraded to the Su-25SM3 version. It has a very reliable airframe and huge modernization and repair potential. I believe it will fly for another 10-15 years. Naturally, we will have to replace it eventually and today various options are being considered," the Aerospace Force ex-commander said.

As a source in the defence industry told TASS, experimental design work on developing an attack aircraft on the basis of the Su-34 bomber is expected to begin in 2018.

Russia's Defence Ministry signed the first contract on the delivery of Su-34 aircraft to the troops in 2008. The Russian Armed Forces are expected to get a total of 150-200 such planes. This aircraft can carry up to eight tonnes of combat load and develop a speed of up to 1,900 km/h and its operation range is 4,000 km.—Tass ■

Netherlands to hold referendum on new surveillance law

AMSTERDAM — The Netherlands will hold a referendum on legislation giving law enforcement authorities far-reaching surveillance powers, the Dutch Voting Commission said on Wednesday. A range of activists, politicians and media groups want to overturn the "tapping law", which was passed by parliament in July and allows agencies to gather data covertly from large groups of people at once. Dutch law obliges the government to hold a non-binding referendum if a petition with at least 300,000 signatures is submitted to the Voting Commission. The agency said it had received more than 384,000 valid signatures and that the referendum would be held on 21 March together with municipal elections. Opponents argue that innocent civilians will be dragged into the sights of intelligence agencies, while the government says the powers are needed to counter national security threats.

The referendum law is itself controversial and may be repealed by the newly appointed right-of-centre government under Prime Minister Mark Rutte.

After it was passed in 2015, a referendum was used to block the Dutch government from ratifying an economic treaty it and other European Union countries had negotiated with Ukraine. A large "no" vote on the referendum embarrassed The Hague and forced Rutte to seek minor amendments to the treaty with the other EU states, eventually leading to the Dutch ratifying it.—Reuters ■

British PM May's deputy denies inappropriate sexual advance

LONDON — Damian Green, number two in the British government, has denied an allegation that he made an inappropriate sexual advance on a young woman as discussion about an unhealthy culture of abuse by powerful men in British politics continues to swirl.

Green, Prime Minister Theresa May's deputy, said it was not true that he had touched the woman's knee and told her that his "wife was very understanding" during a meeting in a pub in which the pair discussed her career aspirations and gossiped about sexual affairs in parliament.

As the shockwaves from the Harvey Weinstein sexual harassment scandal reverberate around the world, the Westminster parliament is among institutions now facing allegations of improper behaviour by men in powerful positions.

The allegation against Green came from Kate Maltby, an academic and critic three decades younger than him. She first met him as an acquaintance of her parents, and both are involved in a liberal Conservative group called Bright Blue.

"He offered me career advice and in the same breath made it clear he was sexually interested," Maltby wrote in an article in the Times newspaper describing the meeting in the pub in early 2015.

"It was not acceptable to me at the time and it should not be acceptable behaviour in Westminster in the future," she said.

A spokesman for May's Downing Street office said Green strongly denied the allegation made against him.

"The prime minister has referred the matter to the cabinet secretary to establish the facts and report back as soon as possible," the spokesman said.

Maltby wrote that she had no contact with Green for a year after the meeting in the pub because she "wanted nothing to do with him".

A year later, Maltby wrote an article for the Times about the history of corsets, which was published with a picture of her wearing one.

After the article appeared, she received a text message from Green that said: "Long time no see. But having admired you in a corset in my favourite tabloid I feel impelled to ask if you are free for a drink anytime?"

The Times quoted Green as saying: "It is absolutely and completely untrue that I've ever made any sexual advance on Ms Maltby." He said the allegation of the advance in the pub was deeply hurtful from someone he considered a personal friend, and that the text he sent her referring to the corset picture was sent in the spirit of friends agreeing to meet for a regular catch-up.—Reuters ■

Abe re-elected as Japan PM, eyes promoting constitutional debate

TOKYO — Liberal Democratic Party leader Shinzo Abe was re-elected as Japan's prime minister in a special Diet session Wednesday following the LDP's overwhelming victory in the 22 October lower house election, putting him on course to promote debate over a first-ever revision to Japan's Constitution.

Abe, who has been the country's leader for nearly five years, faces the pressing tasks of reining in North Korea and pulling Japan out of its decades-long deflation with his "Abenomics" economic policy mix. His re-election — and the re-appointment of all members of the Cabinet reshuffled in early August — comes just days before US President Donald Trump arrives on a three-day visit to Japan.

The 63-year-old premier was re-elected by voting in both the upper and lower houses of the Diet on the first day of a special session through 9 December. Abe's fourth Cabinet was formally launched after an attestation ceremony at the Imperial Palace in Tokyo. Major immediate tasks facing the Cabinet include drawing up a policy package totaling 2 trillion yen ($17.5 billion) by the end of the year to address Japan's low birthrate and aging population.

At the first meeting of the new Cabinet later Wednesday, Abe plans to order the compilation of a supplementary budget for fiscal 2017 centered on improving child care support, including building nursing facilities, according to a government source.

Abe dissolved the House of Representatives in late September for the general election. He has already decided to retain the top LDP executives, including Secretary General Toshihiro Nikai.

During election campaigning, Abe said he needed a fresh mandate for his administration's handling of the North Korean nuclear and missile threats and its intention to spend some revenue from a planned consumption tax hike in October 2019 on child care and education. Abe is scheduled to hold talks with Trump who arrives in Japan on Sunday, and the two leaders are expected to confirm coordination in efforts to address Pyongyang's nuclear and missile threats.

The election outcome strengthened the prospects of Abe running in the LDP leadership contest next September and becoming Japan's longest-serving prime minister, after he returned to power in late 2012. At present, he is the third longest-serving Japanese leader in the postwar era. As his long-cherished goal, Abe wants to amend Japan's pacifist Constitution. As part of its election platform, the LDP vowed to discuss changes including an explicit mention of the status of Japan's Self-Defense Forces.

The SDF is currently governed by its own law and is not referred to in the supreme law, Article 9 of which requires Japan to renounce war and the maintenance of "war potential." The LDP currently aims to submit its constitutional reform proposal to the ordinary Diet session to be convened in January in the hope that parliamentary debate on the issue commences in earnest. The ruling coalition of the LDP and the Komeito party as well as forces supportive of amending the Constitution comprise the two-thirds majorities in both Diet chambers required to formally propose a revision, which must then be approved by a majority of voters in a national referendum.

Earlier in the day, the lower chamber re-elected Speaker Tadamori Oshima and picked as vice speaker Hiroataka Akamatsu, a member of the Constitutional Democratic Party of Japan, the largest opposition party in the lower house.

The ruling and opposition parties agreed that the special Diet session will run for 39 days, during which Abe is expected to deliver a policy speech and answer questions from party representatives.

The ruling parties are arranging to set the date of Abe's speech in the Diet on 17 November, a senior ruling party lawmaker said.—Kyodo News ■

Singapore slaps prohibition orders on 2 people over 1MDB-related breaches

SINGAPORE — The Monetary Authority of Singapore (MAS) on Wednesday said it has barred two individuals involved in breaches related to Malaysia's 1MDB fund from taking part in financial services management and advisory activities.

The MAS said it has issued six-year prohibition orders against Ang Wee Keng Kelvin and Lee Chee Wai, which took effect from 30 October.

The orders will bar them from roles such as providing any financial advisory services and taking part in the management of any financial services firm in Singapore.

The MAS said Ang, a former representative of Maybank Kim Eng Securities Pte Ltd, was convicted of an offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act for bribing Lee with S$3,000 to expedite the preparation of a valuation report on PetroSaudi Oil Services Limited (PSOSL).

Lee, who was the primary person in NRA Capital Pte Ltd working on the valuation of PSOSL, had accepted the bribe from Ang and applied inappropriate methodology and assumptions in the valuation of PSOSL, the central bank added.—Reuters ■

LOS ANGELES — Priyanka Chopra, Taylor Swift, Josh Groban and Ryan Seacrest are among the celebrities who have condemned the attack in New York's Lower Manhattan.

At least eight people were killed and 11 other injured in the area after a gunman in a truck plowed through a busy bike path, an incident the US termed as an "act of terrorism".

Activist Rose McGowan claims drug case is attempt to silence her

NEW YORK — Actress Rose McGowan, who has emerged as a prominent voice speaking out against sexual assault in Hollywood, said a months-old warrant for her arrest on drug possession charges was an attempt to silence her.

McGowan is one of more than a dozen women who have accused movie producer Harvey Weinstein of sexual assault or sexual harassment.

The felony drug charge stems from an investigation of personal belongings that tested positive for narcotics after being left behind on a United flight arriving at Washington Dulles International Airport in Virginia on 20 January, according to police.

"Are they trying to silence me?" McGowan said on Twitter on Monday. "There is a warrant out for my arrest in Virginia. What a load of horseshit."

ton Airports Authority Police Department said in a statement on Monday that on 1 February it had issued the warrant for possession of a controlled substance.

"The Airports Authority police have attempted to contact Ms McGowan so she can appear in a Loudoun County, Virginia, court to respond to the charge," the statement said.

McGowan, who on Twitter has accused Weinstein of sex assault, was linked publicly to him following reports by the New York Times and the New Yorker.

She was the keynote speaker Friday at a women's conference in Detroit, where she urged attendees to speak out on sex assault. McGowan, whose acting career included a featured role in the 1996 horror film "Scream," also has tweeted regularly about the subject on Twitter with the hashtag #ROSEARMY.

The Times reported that Weinstein, 65, had reached eight previously undisclosed settlements with women who accused him of sexual harassment and unwanted physical contact.

The New Yorker reported that 13 women had claimed that Weinstein sexually harassed or assaulted them.

Weinstein has denied having non-consensual sex with anyone. Reuters has been unable to independently confirm any of the allegations.—Reuters ■

Press show of “We Were Kings,” discovery of royal family of King Thibaw

By Thi Thi Min

Screening the documentary film, “We Were Kings,” the discovery of Myanmar’s lost royal family of King Thibaw’s as cast and press show and press conference was held at 2 pm yesterday at the Strand Square on Strand Road, Yangon.

Mr Alex Bescoby, producer of the documentary, “We Were Kings,” said that Myanmar’s history was thoroughly studied some 10 years ago. He wanted the people to be well convinced of the Myanmar History.

He continued to say that he has a plan to continue filming about Myanmar, urging Myanmar people to shoot about Myanmar with zealous efforts.

U Soe Win, one of the great grand children of King Thibaw recounted, “They want to make documentary film about the king, the last dynasty, who disappeared as they deposed. On our part, we took part in the film as casts, for being born with the history of absolute sovereignty, with a view to helping to develop Myanmar.”

He added, “They will show what they want to say in their country. We assume that they come to help.” Essence of the film is to show the past of Myanmar. They want to give a message that we will go forward in future from the present.”

The documentary film started to have been shot since 2014, with playing period 56 minutes or so long.

It won the prize in the competition of documentary films held in England, and it was shown in London for the first time, in Myanmar for the second time.

Hastings Pier scoops Britain's top architecture prize

LONDON — A pier rebuilt after a devastating fire in a town famed for one of England’s most famous battles won the most coveted prize in British architecture Tuesday night.

RIBA, the Royal Institute of British Architecture awarded the 2017 Stirling Prize to Hastings Pier.

The award was announced at a glittering ceremony at the Roundhouse in London when six short listed projects were in the running for the prestigious prize, described as the most coveted award in British architecture. The old pier, built in the days of Queen Victoria when thousands of people thronged to seaside resorts, was destroyed seven years ago.

It has taken the Hastings Pier Charity since then to see the pier rise from the ashes.

Designed by dRMM Architects, the pier has again become a major attraction in Hastings, famed as the scene of the Battle of Hastings which took place in 1066, with a famous victory for William the Conqueror, starting the Norman Conquest of England.

In their citation, the judging panel said: “It has taken a seven-year heroic collaboration to turn a smoldering pier in disrepair and decline into a vibrant public space with a palpable sense of ownership”.

The judges said the decision not to follow tradition by deciding there would be no buildings at the end of pier was an extremely powerful move.

“The large open space provides a sense of calmness and delight, with a strong connection to the sea and the seafront,” the judges said. The citation said from a conservation perspective, the project has reinvigorated a fire-damaged historic structure and facilitated a contemporary and appropriate new 21st century use. Material from the original pier has been incorporated in the new design, with the process of restoration used to help train a new generation of craft specialists.—Xinhua ■

Green tea cafes aim to revive interest in Japan's traditional beverage

TOKYO — With Japan’s consumption of green tea in steady decline, a new breed of casual cafe specializing in the traditional brew aims to reverse the trend by introducing customers to a wide variety of brands, as well as unconventional serving methods.

Customers including visitors from overseas and young Japanese are able to learn about green tea and perhaps find a new favorite variety at such cafes.

Tokyo Saryo opened in January in the Sangenjaya district of the capital’s Setagaya Ward.

Part of the cafe’s appeal is that customers can not only drink tea but also discuss it with staff.

In an overheard conversation, a customer said, “This tea tastes deep.” A staff member replied, “When you make tea at a low temperature you get the (taste of) amino acids. Some told me the color of tea looks like broth.”

The cafe’s location is fitting, as the name Sangenjaya, literally “three tea houses,” is derived from the fact three popular tea houses stood there hundreds of years ago.

The cafe staff makes tea using a method resembling the brewing of hand-drip coffee — pouring hot water by hand onto tea leaves instead of brewing them in a pot.

It offers different menus each month, presenting a selection from among 25 brands of tea. Customers are served the first cup of tea brewed at 70 C to taste its richness, and the second cup brewed at 80 C for a bitter and astringent taste, according to the staff.—Kyodo News ■

Myanmar misses final in 2017 AFF Futsal Championship

MYANMAR missed the chance to go to the finals of the AFF Futsal Championship 2017 by losing to a world-class Thailand team by a score of 3-8 outcome in yesterday's semifinal at Phu Tho Indoor Stadium in Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam yesterday.

Both teams played carefully at the start, and the Myanmar defence seemed to be too strong for Thai's strikers to score an opening goal.

But Myanmar eventually made a mistake in their defense and Thailand was able to break the deadlock off a quick counter from Nawin Rattanawongswa in the early minutes.

Four minutes later, Thailand's Muhammad Osamanusa doubled their advantage with Captain Nattavut Madyalan providing the corner.

Myanmar's players played stronger in the second half. Just a minute in, Pyae Phyo Maung, the most prolific scorer of this tourney, stroked in a goal by passing the Thai defence of Kanison Poophun.

Roma make peace with the Champions League

ROME — The Champions League has often spelt trouble for AS Roma in recent seasons but their 3-0 win over Chelsea went a long way towards mending their previously unhappy relationship with the competition.

Roma had won only three of their previous 19 matches in the competition before Tuesday's game. Their poor series of results included a 7-1 home defeat by Bayern Munich, a 6-1 thumping at Barcelona and a 3-0 home defeat by Porto, which cost them a place in last season's group stage.

Go further back and a 7-1 defeat against Manchester United also sticks in the memory.

"We said in the dressing room before the match that we have not had many great nights in the Champions League and there have been a few where we have been battered," captain Daniele De Rossi said.

"Few believed in us, but we are top of the group and deservedly. But we don't win matches like this so we can take photos and put them on the mantelpiece; we must push on from here."

Roma lead Group C with eight points from four games and are one win away from a place in the last 16.

They have won eight out of 10 matches in the league and not conceded a goal in their last four outings in all competitions.

Yet they started the season amid uncertainty.

Two of their key players, winger Mohamed Salah and defender Antonio Ruediger, left during the transfer window and, for the first time since 1993, there was no Francesco Totti in the squad, the talismanic player having retired at the age of 40.

Coach Luciano Spalletti also departed despite guiding them to second place in Serie A with a record points haul last season and was replaced by Eusebio Di Francesco, who had no previous experience coaching a big club.

But the 48-year-old has galvanised the team and the players have adapted quickly to his 4-3-3 formation.

"I like the results and the way we are trying to play," said De Rossi.

"The coach has changed the way we confront the opponent. We are always aggressive, against everyone, even against teams that in the past we would have waited and been timid with."

Remembering their goalless draw at home to Atletico Madrid in September, De Rossi was quick to point out that opinions can change very quickly in football.

"We didn't deserve the stick we got for that result and we mustn't get carried away now," he said.

"Football is much more difficult that it seems when people are talking about it in a bar." —Reuters ■
