Over 430 tonnes of avocados exported in first nine months of current fiscal year

MORE than 430 tonnes of avocados were exported to foreign countries in the first nine months of the current fiscal year (FY), according to a report in the Myanma Alin yesterday.

Myanmar shipped 46 tonnes of avocados to China via the sea route and border gates, 400 tonnes to Thailand through its border checkpoints, 0.24 tonnes to Hong Kong and 0.2 tonnes to Russia.

Avocado is a potential marketable fruit for Myanmar. To penetrate the export market, Myanmar's avocados must be relatively of the same size and of good quality, said an official from the Trade Department.

Besides being consumed, avocado is widely used as a value-added product in cosmetics and shower gels, among other things.

financial assistance and specific avocado zones, said U Sai Soe Naung, an avocado grower from Shan State. A think tank of the Myanmar Fruit, Flower and Vegetable Producer and Exporter Association has been conducting educational courses for avocado growers. Avocado groups are also being organised to share knowledge on growing methods among the farmers.

Myanmar's avocados are primarily grown in the Shan and Chin states, as well as the Sagaing Region and Pyin Oo Lwin areas in the Mandalay Region. —Zar Lin Thu (AMIA) ■

Untimely rain triggers onion price rise in Yangon market

DRIVEN by the unseasonal rainfall in the upper Myanmar, onion prices have soared to Ks3,250 per viss (1.6 kg), according to a report in the Myanma Alin yesterday.

More than 130,000 viss of onions have entered the Yangon market, but their prices are hovering on the high side.

The onion price in December was over Ks3,050 per viss. On 2 January, onion prices ranged from Ks1,800 to Ks3,000 per viss, depending on the varieties, while the price was up by Ks200 on 3 January, according to Bayintnaung commodity depot.

Untimely rainfall hit the onion crop in April, October, November and December in 2017, but there was no increase in the price at that time. This time, it has surged exorbitantly and unreasonably, said Ko Kyaw Lwin, a wholesaler.

For the last five months, foreign onions have been flowing into the local market at a bargain price.

Locally produced onions fetch some Ks3,000 per viss, whereas the price of imported onions is some Ks1,000 per viss.

Despite the inferior quality, the price of imported onions is just one third the price of locally produced ones.

The onion price in the local market was on an upward trend between 2015 and early 2018. Thus, consumers expect the concerned authorities to tackle the now exorbitant price of onions. —Khin Saing ■

UNFC willing to seek ways for reaching agreement on remaining points

THE United Nationalities Federal Council-UNFC would keep on seeking other ways for holding a meeting between the leaders of the two sides as part of efforts for signing the Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement-NCA.

UNFC made this remark in its announcement released following the two-day meeting of the committee which ended yesterday in Chiang Mai, Thailand.

“... regarding the peace process, the DPN and the Peace Commission held negotiations over the nine points, and to achieve answers for the remaining points, UNFC would continue to seek ways for holding a meeting between the leaders of the two sides,” said the statement.

During the meeting, they reviewed the works of UNFC and current measures taken by the Delegation of Peace Negotiation of the UNFC and discussions between the DPN and the Peace Commission over nine points proposed by the UNFC.

“The nine-points proposed by UNFC were aimed at signing the Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement. We review outcomes of every meeting. UNFC and Peace Commission also reviewed the latest development of the nine-points,” said U Tun Zaw, Member of the Central Committee of the UNFC.

“New Mon State Party (NMSP) and its central committee made a decision to sign the NCA. But, they did not say definitely when they will implement the decision. NMSP is a member of the UNFC. They made the remark to sign the NCA under the flag of UNFC,” he added.

The nine-points proposed by the UNFC have been discussed for more than 17 months between the DPN and the PC.

At the ceremony to introduce the Youth Policy of Myanmar, State Counsellor, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi made an address on youths in Myanmar, in which one third of the population was said to be youths between the ages of 15 to 35. Thus it highlights the fact that the role of youths in the country is of great importance.

As stated by the State Counsellor, there may be differences in attitudes according to the nature of the generation gap between the old and new generations. Thus must be deeply understood in laying down a youth policy. At the same time, the State Counsellor's statement that the education system is of vital importance in upgrading abilities, qualifications and skills of the youths of the new generation must be taken into deep consideration. Moreover, the State Counsellor's noteworthy advice for youths to cultivate the practice of working together in groups in the new education system really fulfills a great need in our country for future national development.

By doing so, it will upgrade not only individual education and dignity but also the qualities and skills of all the youths in Myanmar society. Motor Vehicle Policy of Great Importance for the Nation

By Ti Kyi Maung

SINCE the time when motor vehicles were invented on the planet humans have been using vehicles more and more until now. With the advancement of techniques on motor vehicles, production and utilization of vehicles are increasing simultaneously. Being a sector of importance for every nation, emergence of strengthened laws, rules and policies on motor vehicles as well is very important for every nation.

Starting from 2012 when Myanmar entered the Era of the Myanmar Democratic Transition policies on imported vehicles were remarkably alleviated, and as a result myriads of various kinds of vehicles came into Myanmar car markets, making prices of cars plunge rapidly down.

Thus, many people from different classes of the society managed to drive their own cars. Yet, on the other hand Yangon populace is coming to suffer from problems of traffic jam and tremendously abundance of vehicles in the city because there are not yet any arrangements for construction of roads and car parking plots, almost every day.

Accordingly, it is of great importance to systematically make necessary arrangements after adjusting potential disadvantages concerning related sectors in implementing policies laid down for the convenience of the people.

According to the statistics from the government departments there were a total of 365000 cars registered in 2011, with more than 721000 vehicles registered in 2016.

Thus, the amounts of vehicle increased over 356000 within five years period. In other word, numbers of registered cars increased nearly two times within 5-year period.

It was estimated that there would be more than 2 million vehicles in 2020 according to the motor vehicle manufacturers, being three times the amounts of registered cars in 2016. In addition to this, it is expected that there will be 4 million or so in 2025 and 10 million or so in 2030. If so, one every 6-7 persons will drive their own cars in 2030, according to the expected population of 60-70 million in 2030.

ASEAN regional countries are the 5th biggest vehicle market in the world, importing over 3 million vehicles annually, with China, US, EU countries and Japan preceding it.

As regards manufacturing cars, the ASEAN became the hub of the global car production, producing over 4 million vehicles annually.

According to the statistics of ASEAN Automotive Federation Thailand manufactured a total of 1944417 vehicles in 2016, ranking 12th in the world, it was learnt. Thailand stood first in the production of cars among the ASEAN nations, mainly manufacturing pick-ups and truck with one-ton load. Thailand exported half of its production to other countries. And it managed to get US $ 7.6 billion as the national revenue from its car production.

It is in fact 12.5 per cent of the GDP. According to the statistics of the International Labor Organization (ILO), motor vehicles and its accessories production industries created more than 0.4 million jobs.

Indonesia stood second in production of cars among the ASEAN nations, producing 1177389 vehicles in 2016 with 1061859 sold out, it was learnt. Data of the ILO, in 2015 had showed that motor vehicles and its accessories production industries, Indonesia managed to create over 0.2 million jobs, followed by Malaysia ranking as the 3rd in ASEAN nations producing 545253 units and creating nearly 80000 jobs in 2016.

Vehicle manufacturing factories, car assembly plants and sale industries which achieve sustainable development are developing with great momentum in the regional nations including Myanmar. Under the situations of Myanmar's population and its area, Myanmar will still need to manufacture or import vehicles.

But, though the country is making efforts to produce cars presently, it was found that there were not yet necessary arrangements by looking at potential impacts over up-gradation of standards of roads, systematic management, implementation of car parking construction, increasing need of lubricants and other related sectors.

There are advantages which will be beneficial in every sector including national economic development, human resource development, SMEs' development, convenience of social lives and creation of job opportunities by developing the sector of vehicle manufacture. But, unless policies and laws are rightfully laid down and implemented, disadvantages will be greater than advantages. Actually it is the sector that the State Government should take it into consideration specifically.

Provided that Myanmar can implement for the greater development of motor vehicle production likewise the regional countries, Myanmar will be able to fulfill the needs of local markets with too much demands with reasonable prices as well as potential prospects for export to the global markets if internationally standardized vehicles can be manufactured. On the other hand, it is of great importance to take free competition in manufacturing sector which is a promising industry in Myanmar into consideration.

Today's technology is always developing. Bringing about the cutting edge technology can completely change social life patterns of the world. For example, emergence of IT Information Technology, invention of iPhone from Apple Company and establishment of Face-book are remarkable triumph of IT sector.

Similarly, industries of the global vehicle production technology are making researches by investing with the greatest lump sum for inventing electric cars and driverless cars.

If the currently used diesel and octane cars are out of date in near future, production of modern cars will rapidly soar up.

Accordingly, under the current situations Myanmar is following in the further back in the production of vehicles. But, if implemented through rightful plan and arrangement, it can push Myanmar toward the top, needing to firmly grasp the opportunity. Provided that it can be successfully implemented the sector of vehicle production can help for successful development of Myanmar's economy. To sum it up, the State Government should consult and cooperate with experts and professionals from home and abroad concerning the vehicle production. ■

Cooperation to curb Asia's climate risks still too rare – scientists

By Saleem Shaikh and Sugra Tunio

KATHMANDU—When heavy monsoon rains triggered unprecedented flooding last August in the area around western Nepal's Babai and West Rapti rivers, the swollen waters crossed the border into India within a few hours.

But swift warnings from Nepali authorities to the downriver Indian states of Bihar and Uttar Pradesh allowed officials there to move people to safety, Indian officials say.

Without that advice from Nepal's Department of Hydrology and Meteorology, "there would have been no possibility for the Indian authorities to ensure timely evacuation of the people, which (would have) otherwise led to huge loss of lives," said Anand Sharma of the Indian Meteorological Department.

As climate change increases the risk of flooding, glacial lake outbursts and cyclones, as well as droughts and heat waves, experts say that sharing information across borders is crucial to save lives and ensure economic stability in Asia's Hindu Kush-Himalaya (HKH) region.

The region, which stretches from Afghanistan in the west to Myanmar in the east, includes over 1.3 billion people in eight countries.

They are connected by 10 river basins, including the Indus, Ganges, Brahmaputra, Salween, Mekong and Yangtze, and some of the world's largest mountain ranges, the Karakoram, Hindu Kush and Himalayas, which are home to over 54,000 glaciers covering more than 60,000 square kilometres (23,000 square miles).

But the cooperation seen between India and Nepal remains too rare in the region, regional officials say.

Although countries face similar climate-related risks, political disagreements between countries, and a lack of legal arrangements for sharing information, are increasing the region's vulnerability to natural disasters, they say.

RISKS GROWING

David Molden, the director general of the Kathmandu-based International Center for Integrated Mountain Development (ICIMOD), warned in an interview that HKH countries will suffer increasingly severe impacts from climate change-related disasters, particularly floods, cyclones, droughts and land erosion, if they do not cooperate in sharing information and early warnings.

But in a bid to boost the region's climate resilience, political leaders, government policymakers and scientists from the region agreed at a conference in Nepal in December to work harder to boost collaboration to tackle common disaster risks.

Such cooperation would likely focus on everything from improving joint management of river basins to better monitoring of glacial melting and glacial lakes prone to outburst floods, Molden said.

Lyonpo Yeshey Dorji, Bhutan's Minister for Agriculture and Forest, said he was confident that political leaders of the region would "join hands with scientists and policymakers to boost intra-regional collaboration in data sharing, knowledge and technology transfer for enhancing the region's ability to withstand fallouts of climate change".

Dorji added that countries needed to better understand the advantages that would be gained by exchanging data, local knowledge and technology.

Yusuf Zafar, chair of the Pakistan Agricultural Research Council, agreed that cooperation between countries was urgently needed.

"Plugging the gap ... is vital to help people strengthen climate resilience, particularly those 210 million people in mountain areas," he said.—Reuters

Long-term upgrading of Twantay Canal project to cost Ks9,000 million

THE long-term upgrade work on the Twantay Canal will cost Ks9,000 million, according to a report in the Myawady Daily yesterday.

Erosions occur on the banks of the canal every year, especially in winter, destroying houses and farmlands, according to the local residents.

"The government has allocated a budget for the long-term upgradation of the canal. We will implement the project within a year or two. We are also conducting surveys systematically," said U Myint Lwin, a Pyithu Hluttaw representative from Twantay Township.

A master plan has already been drafted. Although the canal is temporarily being conserved with gravel-filled retaining walls, it does not work well. Therefore, the Township General Administration Department and MPs are discussing a plan to temporarily upgrade the canal.—GNLM

Construction zones to be established in 15 townships

The Yangon City Development Committee (YCDC) will designate 15 townships in the Yangon Region municipal area as high-rise construction zones, according to a report in the Myawady Daily yesterday.

The YCDC decided to design-nate specific zones as high-rise construction areas after it found that high-rise projects were not abiding by the law and had poor security and low quality.

Some five-to seven-storeyed buildings are being built in wards with 10-foot wide streets in some townships. In a bid to carry out the systematic designation of high-rise construction zones, the YCDC conducted surveys on land utilisation, in cooperation with the Japanese International Cooperation Agency.—GNLM

Eleven dead after gun battle erupts outside Mexican beach resort

MEXICO CITY — The aftermath of a gunfight on the outskirts of the Mexican seaside resort of Acapulco that pit residents of a small town against members of a local, self-appointed community police force has left 11 dead, state officials said on Sunday. The exchange of gunfire took place in the farming community of La Concepcion, just south of Acapulco, after elements of the community police detailed a young man for disorderly conduct during town festivities early Sunday morning. Eight local residents were killed in that exchange. After Army soldiers and state police later moved into the town, three members of the community police were shot dead after resisting them, Roberto Alvarez, a state security official, told reporters. Another 30 members of the local police, which had been authorized by state officials to operate in the small town, were arrested in the operation. Acapulco is the biggest city in the southern state of Guerrero, one of Mexico's most lawless and a center of opium poppy production. Violence in the state has also been fed by turf wars over the distribution of drugs like cocaine and methamphetamine. The beach resort is one of Mexico's most famous and for decades served as a playground for Hollywood stars. In recent years, however, Acapulco has been roiled by vicious gang warfare and is now ranked one of the most murderous cities in the world. —Reuters ■

Rescue crews wrestle to tame China oil tanker fire; body of mariner found

BEIJING/SEOUL — Rescue crews wrestled to bring a blaze on an Iranian oil tanker off China's east coast under control on Monday as fire raged for a second day following a collision with a grain ship, while the body of one of the 32 missing crew members was found on board.

Concerns were growing that the tanker, which hit a freight ship on Saturday night in the East China Sea and burst into flames, may explode and sink, the official China Central Television (CCTV) said on Monday, citing experts on the rescue team.

Poor weather continued to hamper the rescue work, Lu Kang, a spokesman at China's foreign ministry, told a regular news briefing.

The extent of the environmental harm and size of the oil spill from the ship were not known, but the disaster has the potential to be the worst since 1991 when 260,000 tonnes of oil leaked off the Angolan coast.

The remains of one of the 32 mariners on board was found on Monday afternoon, Iranian and Chinese officials confirmed.

Mohammad Rastad, head of Iran's Ports and Maritime Organization, was quoted by the ISNA news agency as saying that the body had been sent to Shanghai for identification. The fate of the remaining 31 sailors is not known.

The Sanchi tanker (IMO:9356608) run by Iran's top oil shipping operator, National Iranian Tanker Co, collided with the CF Crystal (IMO:9497050) on Saturday evening about 160 nautical miles off China's coast near Shanghai and the mouth of the Yangtze River Delta. —Reuters ■

India sparks outcry over press freedom by naming reporter in probe on database breach

NEW DELHI — The Indian government named a reporter in a police complaint after she wrote an article alleging a data breach in a federal identity database, drawing criticism from a journalist group that accused officials of trying to muzzle free speech.

The Unique Identification Authority of India (UIDAI), which runs the world's largest biometric identity card scheme called "Aadhaar", started investigating a report last week by The Tribune newspaper which said access to the identity database of more than 1 billion citizens was being sold for just 500 rupees, or $8 (6 pounds), on social media.

UIDAI on Sunday said four people were named in its complaint to police in New Delhi to investigate the incident, including the reporter, and also her newspaper, which is based in the north Indian city of Chandigarh.

The Editors Guild of India condemned UID-

AI's action, saying it was designed to "browbeat a journalist."

"It is unfair, unjustified and a direct attack on the freedom of the press," the Guild said in a statement on Sunday.

The UIDAI said in a statement on Sunday that it respects freedom of press, adding that it was duty bound to name everyone involved in the incident, including the reporter.

"It does not mean that those who are named in the report are necessarily guilty," the authority said.

The Tribune newspaper said it regretted the decision of the authorities.

India last year slipped three places to 136th in the World Press Freedom Index of 180 nations, compiled by Reporters Without Borders.

Journalists in India have increasingly become targets of online smear campaigns, with prosecutorial actions being used to gag journalists who are overly critical of the government, the group said.

The Tribune newspaper last week reported that it was able to buy login credentials to the government's Aadhaar database, allowing it to acquire information such as the names, telephone numbers and home addresses of millions of people.

The alleged breach is the latest in the Aadhaar programme which is facing increasing scrutiny over privacy concerns.

After the report was published, the UIDAI said the "case appears to be an instance of misuse."

The Aadhaar scheme was introduced in 2009 to streamline welfare payments and reduce wastage in public spending. Since then, the government of Prime Minister Narendra Modi has been keen to mandate the use of Aadhaar for everything from filing income taxes to the registration of mobile phone numbers and booking railway tickets.

Peace Boat ship leaves Yokohama for Asia, Oceania tour

YOKOHAMA — A ship chartered by Japan-based Peace Boat, a nongovernmental organization working closely with last year's Nobel Peace Prize winner the International Campaign to Abolish Nuclear Weapons, left Yokohama Port on Monday to promote nuclear disarmament. The boat will visit eight countries through March including the Philippines and Australia. Terumi Tanaka, co-chair of the Japan Confederation of A- and H-Bomb Sufferers Organizations, is among the people on board. "Grassroots lobbying is an important activity. I am looking forward to meeting people of various towns in the countries we will visit," said Tanaka, who is participating in the Peace Boat tour for the first time.

The boat carries on its side the logo of ICAN, a coalition of NGOs that involves about 470 groups from more than 100 countries. Akira Kawasaki, an ICAN international steering committee member, told a press conference, "We must work toward realizing the goal of putting the Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons into effect."

The treaty was passed by 122 UN members in July last year but has not come into force. None of the nuclear weapon states or countries relying on nuclear deterrence, including Japan, endorsed the treaty. — Kyodo News ■

‘Three Billboards’ wins big as Golden Globes power through sex scandal

LOS ANGELES — Dark drama “Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri” was the big winner with four Golden Globes awards on Sunday on a night marked by scathing jokes about sexual harassment and passionate odes to those breaking their silence.

Mother-daughter comedy “Lady Bird” was named best comedy film and the indie A24 movie’s star Saoirse Ronan won for comedy actress.

Gary Oldman was named best drama movie actor for his role as British wartime leader Winston Churchill in Focus Features’ “Darkest Hour” and Frances McDormand took home the award for drama actress for her role as an angry mother seeking vengeance in Fox Searchlight’s “Three Billboards.”

James Franco won the comedy actor award for his cult movie homage “The Disaster Artist,” also from A24. Mexican director Guillermo del Toro won best director for magical fantasy “The Shape of Water.”

However, the night was dominated not by who took home prizes but by jokes and speeches about the sexual misconduct scandal that has rocked Hollywood.

“Happy New Year Hollywood! It’s 2018. Marijuana is finally allowed and sexual harassment finally isn’t,” quipped Globes host Seth Meyers in his opening remarks, bringing wild applause from the A-list audience in Beverly Hills.

Multiple allegations against actors, filmmakers and Hollywood agents since October 2017 have led to many of the accused being fired, forced to step down, or dropped from creative projects.

Referring to the male nominees gathered in Beverly Hills for the top television and movie awards, Meyers said: “This is the first time in three months it won’t be terrifying to hear your name read out loud.”

The evening began with the normally colorful red carpet transformed into a sea of black gowns as every actress showed solidarity with victims of sexual harassment inside and outside the entertainment industry. Many have given their own harrowing accounts.

Women kept up the theme inside the Beverly Hilton ballroom. “This year, we became the story,” Oprah Winfrey said in a rousing speech while accepting the annual lifetime achievement award. McDormand said she was proud to be a woman in the industry. “It’s great to be here and be part of the tectonic shift in our industry’s power structure,” she said.

Laura Dern, a supporting actress winner for “Big Little Lies,” said: “May we teach our children that speaking out without retribution is our culture’s new north star.”

The HBO TV series was one of several female-driven winners on Sunday.

The Golden Globes ceremony, the first of the major awards shows in the run-up to the Oscars in March, marked the first big test for how Hollywood would handle the scandal. — Reuters ■

“Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle” ascends to top spot at North American box office

LOS ANGELES — Sony’s “Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle” sped past “Insidious: The Last Key” and “Star Wars: The Last Jedi” to the top spot at North American box office in its third weekend with an estimated 36 million US dollars.

The action adventure comedy film has brought in a massive 244.3 million dollars in total in North American theatres to date, according to the studio figures collected by comScore. Directed by Jake Kasdan and stars Dwayne Johnson, Jack Black, Kevin Hart and Karen Gillan, the sequel to 1995’s “Jumanji” follows four teenagers who are transported into the video game world of Jumanji and must work together to beat the game in order to return to the real world.

Universal’s supernatural horror film “Insidious: The Last Key” opened surprisingly in second place with an estimated 29.2 million dollars in its debut. The fourth installment of the “Insidious” series from Blumhouse Productions was directed by Adam Robitel and stars Lin Shaye, Angus Sampson and Leigh Whannell. The film follows a brilliant parapsychologist, Elise Rainier, as she investigates a haunting in her childhood home.

Disney’s release of Lucasfilm’s “Star Wars: The Last Jedi” landed in third place in its fourth weekend with an estimated 23.5 million dollars, pushing it total to a whopping 572.5 million dollars in North America to date. The film passed “Beauty and the Beast” as the top grossing film in North America in 2017 after only half a month of its debut. The eighth installment in the “Star Wars” saga has grossed around 1,205.2 million dollars worldwide through Sunday.

20th Century Fox’s musical biopic “The Greatest Showman” came in fourth with an estimated 13.8 million dollars in its third weekend. Universal’s musical comedy film “Pitch Perfect 3” finished fifth with an estimated 10.2 million dollars in its third weekend. —Xinhua ■

Akshay not bothered with possible clash of Padman, Padmavati

MUMBAI — There is a buzz that Sanjay Leela Bhansali’s “Padmavati” may hit the theatres the same day as “Padman”, but actor Akshay Kumar is hopeful that both the movies do well in the holiday weekend.

“Padmavati”, which missed its 1 December release date due to controversy over its plot, has been finally given a go ahead by the censor board and according to grapevine the producers are planning 25 January release — the same day as R Balki-directed “Padman”.

The Central Board of Film Certification (CBFC) recently gave U/A certification along with some modifications and suggested to change its title to ‘Padmavat’.

Asked about his reaction on the possible clash of the two films, Akshay said, “It is not about competition, it is a very big day, a big week, so all the films can come. Both the films can release on that day.

“Every film has the right to release whenever they (makers) want, and I am happy for them,” he told reporters.

Viacom18 Motion Pictures and Sanjay Leela Bhansali Productions are yet to announce the official release date of the film.

Akshay’s “Padman” co-star, Sonam Kapoor said she would wait for an official announcement from the team of “Padmavati”.

Sonam said, “It is not announced officially, isn’t it? If it is, it is good. There is a need for competition when it comes to films and (it is) high time that the film releases.

Good cinema is good cinema, I don’t believe in competition. —PTI ■

Thousands of Belgians brave cold to take dip in wintry North Sea

OSTEND (Belgium) — Thousands of people braved the biting cold of a Belgian winter on Saturday to take a dip in the North Sea in Ostend's traditional New Year's plunge.

Undeterred by air temperatures of 6 degrees Celsius (43 degrees Fahrenheit) and equally chilly water, 4,500 people, many clad in fancy dress, ran down the beach in front of the city's neoclassical Royal Galleries.

While some did little more than wet their ankles, others took advantage of the presence of many lifeguards to take a proper dive into the chilly waves.

"When you go in, it's cold but once you are in longer, it's very good, very nice," said Joris, wearing a caveman outfit.

Organisers said the 27th edition of the New Year's plunge was average in terms of temperature and attendance, following an exceptionally cold 2017 edition when brisk winds pushed temperatures well below freezing.

"It's our fifth year now. We had to skip last year because it was on New Year's day and we would have been a little drunk from the day before," said Jordy Velders from the Flemish town of Lokeren, who, like his friends, was dressed up as a penguin. —Reuters ■

John Young, 'most experienced' US astronaut, dies at 87

NEW YORK — US astronaut John Young, who walked on the moon in 1972 and even smuggled a corned beef sandwich into orbit during a career that made him the only person to fly with three NASA space programmes, has died at age 87, officials said on Saturday.

Young, who went to space six times, died on Friday night at his home in Houston following complications from pneumonia, National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Allard Beutel said in an email.

The former US Navy test pilot was the ninth person to set foot on the moon, an experience shared by three others after Young. He eventually became one of the most accomplished astronauts in the history of the US space programme.

He flew into space twice during NASA's Gemini program in the mid-1960s, twice on the Apollo lunar missions and twice on space shuttles in the 1980s. He was the only person to fly on all three types of programs. "Astronaut John Young's storied career spanned three generations of spaceflight. We will stand on his shoulders as we look toward the next human frontier," NASA Administrator Robert Lightfoot said in a statement. Young, described in a NASA tweet as "our most experienced astronaut," retired in 2004 after 42 years with the US space agency. The Apollo 16 mission in April 1972, his fourth space flight, took Young to the lunar surface.

As mission commander, he and crewmate Charles Duke explored the moon's Descartes Highlands region, gathering 200 pounds (90 kg) of rock and soil samples and driving more than 16 miles (26 km) in the lunar rover to sites such as Spook Crater. —Reuters ■

Japanese security firm finds success with ninja-clad guards

OTSU, (Japan) — A security firm in a western Japanese city known as the birthplace of a prominent ninja school is enjoying success by providing guards dressed as the medieval martial arts warriors.

SCC Co in Koka has tapped into the city's growing fame for ninja tourism since its ninja-clad security guards debuted in a traffic control mission at the opening of a coffee franchise in the city in 2016.

The company's special ninja squad has continued to be hired for new jobs and its head, Maya Miyoshi, is now hoping to gain a contract to work for the 2020 Olympics and Paralympics in Tokyo.

"Ninja are world-class icons and we want people to feel familiar with security at sports facilities," said Miyoshi, who was dressed in the guise of a kunoichi, or female ninja.

Wearing a dark red judo-style uniform and armed with toy shuriken (ninja throwing blades) and a samurai sword-shaped truncheon, the 36-year-old said, "I've always liked to do something different. I want to make a change in the security industry which appears to be old-fashioned and sober."

Miyoshi has surprised many in the industry since taking over SSC, a spinoff from a security unit of her husband's company, in 2011. Her experience of studying design in high school inspired unorthodox ideas such as dressing the security guards yellow uniforms.

SCC's ninja-clad security guards have been popular with the public, including high school students and foreigners, who have asked for photos.

Miyoshi's dream is to take her security ninjas to the 2020 Games in Japan's capital. "We want to contribute to the Tokyo Olympics. If we draw attention, it will cheer the industry as well."

The All Japan Security Service Association said the industry bloomed in the country after its success at the 1964 Tokyo Olympics, when its work in guarding the athletes' village was widely acknowledged by the public and in the business sphere. —Kyodo News

Versatile Coutinho will be great asset for Barca, says coach

Barcelona's new signing Philippe Coutinho. PHOTO: REUTERS

BARCELONA — Philippe Coutinho's versatility makes him a great acquisition for Barcelona, coach Ernesto Valverde said on Sunday as the Brazilian made his first public appearance at the Nou Camp following his 142-million-pound move from Liverpool.

"I think he will give us many things — he has a good goal-scoring record, he gives assists, he'll be able to help us a lot in attack and can play in the middle or on the wing," Valverde said.

The coach has yet to decide where the new signing will fit into his fluid side, who are unbeaten in the Liga and Champions League.

"He's versatile and we can make the most of that. We're going to see how he trains first and then we'll decide," Valverde said.

"I've seen him play in a lot of positions for Liverpool and for his country, although I don't imagine we'll be putting him in goal."

Barca beat Levante 3-0 at home on Sunday with goals from Lionel Messi, Luis Suarez and Paulinho, to stay nine points clear at the top of the La Liga standings and after the game Coutinho put on a club tracksuit to pose for photographs at the Nou Camp.

Coutinho, who will sign his five-year contract with Barca and be officially presented to the media on Monday, is the third most expensive transfer ever after Neymar Jr and Kylian Mbappe, both at Paris St Germain, and ahead of new Barca team mate Ousmane Dembele, who cost the Catalans 105 million euros ($126.35 million).

Barcelona midfielder Ivan Rakitic told reporters he was looking forward to seeing Coutinho play at the club.

"My opinion about his price doesn't matter, it went up a bit, the market dictates how much you have to pay, but we are the biggest club in the world, we want another player, and he is one of the best around," he said.

"The important thing is that every player feels welcome so we can fight for our objectives together. We will welcome him as one more member of the family. We all know all about him and we're going to really enjoy his football."

Coutinho was also welcomed to Barca by former Liverpool team mate Suarez, with whom he spent two years at Anfield, coming agonisingly close to winning the Premier League title in 2014.

"I'm very happy as a team mate and a friend of his, I think he's going to contribute a lot to the team," Suarez said.

"Everyone knows how much quality he has, he has spent many years at the elite level. We will help make him feel at home and ensure he adapts well." Coutinho's Barca debut could be delayed due to a thigh injury which kept him out of Liverpool's last two games against Burnley and Everton, while he cannot play again in the Champions League this season after already appearing in the competition. —Reuters ■

Matsuyama drops to 12th at Tournament of Champions

KAPALUA, HAWAII — Japan's Hideki Matsuyama slid down the leaderboard into a five-way tie for 12th in Saturday's third round of the Sentry Tournament of Champions in Hawaii.

Matsuyama, who started the round four strokes off the lead and tied for eighth, had an up and down round featuring four birdies and three bogies, leaving him to card a 1-under-par 72. He sits tied for 12th at 7-under after 54 holes at Kapalua Resort's Plantation Course in Maui.

"There were some times when my putting felt good, but I didn't get what I expected," Matsuyama said. "Of course, they won't go in if you're anxious."

Matsuyama missed a putt to drop a shot on No 2 and gave up a golden chance for eagle when he missed a 4-footer on the fifth, settling for a birdie instead. He struggled on the 13th, bogeying after spraying his tee shot right, and again on No 16, where he narrowly missed an 11-foot attempt after consecutive birdies on 14 and 15.

"It's still a long (season) from here, the last day will be an important round. I want to finish strong," Matsuyama said.

The 25-year-old is currently nine strokes behind the leader, world No 1 Dustin Johnson of the United States, who shot an equal Saturday best 7-under 66 for a 16-under three-round total. His compatriot Brian Harman is two strokes behind, and Spain's Jon Rahm is two shots further back in third after matching Johnson's 66. —Kyodo News ■

We feel like we are sinking, says Real's Marcelo

VIGO — Real Madrid players feel like their La Liga title hopes are "sinking" into a black hole after they let a 2-1 lead against Celta Vigo slip through their fingers in the final eight minutes, leaving them 16 points adrift of leaders Barcelona.

Real were leading with eight minutes to go against Celta after Gareth Bale's quick-fire double had overturned Daniel Wass's opening strike.

But Maxi Gomez's headed goal in the 82nd minute ensured the match finished in a 2-2 draw and piled more pain on Zinedine Zidane's side, who had lost 3-0 to arch rivals and runaway leaders Barca in their last Liga outing.

"It is how it looks from the outside — we are sad, angry and we feel like we are sinking," Brazilian defender Marcelo told reporters.

"It is one of the worst situations I've experienced here," added the 29-year-old who has been with the club for over a decade.

"We'll try to work hard and fight so we can win our next game but we don't like this situation at all, it's difficult because the more games you draw or lose the more pressure you are under." The last time Real were 16 points behind the Liga leaders was during Jose Mourinho's tension-filled final campaign in 2012-13, when they finished 15 points adrift of Barca.

"There's nothing else we can do other than keep our heads up and fight and do our best to start winning again," added Marcelo, who has won four La Liga and three Champions League titles since joining Real in 2007.

"We can't do anything more, we're trying to play good football, to move the ball around and score goals but it's not coming off."

Real coach Zidane usually leaps to the defence of his players after negative results but he was not in a forgiving mood on Sunday.

"The main thing we lacked today was we didn't play the second half," said the Frenchman, who last season guided Real to their first Liga and European Cup double since 1958.

"We played very well in the first 45 minutes but not in the second half and a game lasts 90 minutes." Zidane also refused to comment on whether or not his side were out of the title race. "We're not going to talk about the league every week-end. If we keep losing points we're not going to get there. We have to focus on each game now and try to win them," he said. —Reuters ■
