Nine bridges to be inspected for strength in Yangon Region

May Thet Hnin

THE Yangon Region government will examine the strength of nine bridges in Yangon, said U Phyo Min Thein, Yangon Region Chief Minister, at a media conference on 20 April.

"The Ministry of Construction regularly inspects the bridges' strength. Unfortunately, the Myaungmya suspension bridge collapsed this year. Therefore, the region government is planning to inspect other bridges," he added.

The nine bridges are Thanlyin bridge No 1, Aung Zeya bridge, Bayintnaung bridges No. 1 and No. 2, Shwe Pyi Thar bridge, Pan Hlaing bridge, Twante bridge, Dagon bridge No 2 and Mahabandoola bridge.

The chief minister said, "We have conducted emergency repairing of Thanlyin bridge No. 1, because the sand and stone from the bridge has been absorbed by the big boats. Currently, we don't need to worry about the other bridges' structural integrity."

Moreover, the authorities will no longer collect toll gate fees. However, the public is advised to follow the rules when using the bridges to ensure the infrastructure will be safe for all motorists. Overloaded heavy vehicles are not allowed on the bridges. Also, the authorities will take legal action against vehicles crossing the bridges with overloaded vehicles.

"For smooth transport and the safety of our citizens, we will conduct detailed inspections and assessments of 29 suspension bridges across the country within three months, with the co-operation of foreign experts. From among these suspension bridges, those bridges which may pose danger will be repaired within six months in order of priority," said President U Win Myint at the Myanmar New Year's speech on 17 April.

The Myaungmya suspension bridge in the Ayeyawady Region collapsed on 1 April, killing two people. The bridge collapsed when a truck passed over it and plunged into the river. ■

At the meeting, head of district Agriculture Department U Win Shwe, head of district Consumer Affairs Department U Than Po and U Than Tun Oo from a township mango plantation explained and discussed Good Agricultural Practices (GAP) and Good Handling Practices (GHP) to minimise the risk of microbial food safety hazards in production, packaging, handling and storage of fruits and vegetables; staying away from the chemical ripening of mangoes; crimes and penalties prescribed in the National Food Law; and contacting departments to obtain agriculture techniques. They also responded to questions raised by attending mango plantation farmers, it is learnt.

All over the country, national crops such as rice, pulses and beans, oil crops, industrial crops and fruits are produced for local consumption and export. Among these agricultural products, mango stands at the top of the list of exported agricultural products. There are nearly 250,000 acres of mango plantations all over the country, and in the year 2016, nearly 500,000 tons of mangoes were produced for local consumption, as well as exported to Asian countries such as China, Singapore, Malaysia, Bhutan, Brunei, Maldives and European countries. According to mango merchants, mangoes are exported after tests are conducted for chemical and other contaminations, as well as cross border control against crop diseases.

Based on ASEAN GAP, a 16-point Myanmar GAP process has been drawn up, and up to 15 crops are being produced according to this process. U Than Tun Oo said there are four GAP-certified mango plantations in Kanbalu Township. — Aung Win Nyein (Kanbalu) ■

Agro products exports down by $24 million in first two weeks of April

THE export of agricultural products from 1 to 13 April in the six-month transition period for the 2018-2019 fiscal year (FY) reached US$102 million, which showed a slight decrease of $24 million compared with the same period in the 2017-2018 FY, according to trade figures released by the commerce ministry.

The decrease in agro exports is attributed to slower trading in the pre-Thingyan period. Chinese buyers halted the purchase of rice to observe the market in early April, which is the harvest season both in China and Myanmar.

Additionally, mung bean and pigeon pea prices are also on the downward trend, following India's restriction on the importation of mung beans and pigeon peas.

Myanmar's main agricultural exports are rice and broken rice, pulses, corn and rubber. Fruits and vegetables, sesame, dried tea leaves, sugar and other agro products are also sent to foreign countries.

The commerce ministry is endeavouring to help deal with the challenges faced by farmers, such as high input costs, procurement of pedigree seeds, high cultivation costs and erratic weather conditions. — Mon Mon ■

Over 500,000 tonnes of cobless maize stock left

SHAN State growers have stocked more than 500,000 tonnes of maize without cob, while trying to boost the production, according to a report in Myanma Alinn yesterday.

Some 250,000 tonnes of maize are left after excluding wastage and consumption. The merchants are piling up the stocks hoping for a good price, said U Sai Kyaw Ohn from the Shan State Maize Producers and Exporters Association.

Currently, there are stockpiles of more than 400,000 tonnes in northern Shan State, more than 70,000 tonnes in eastern Shan State and 15,000 tonnes in southern Shan State, totaling more than 500,000 tonnes of stocks in the hands of merchants.

A viss of maize fetches Ks570 from China.

"The maize planting season starts in April, and it is harvested in October in Shan State. Last year, maize fetched a good price, prompting the growers to extend their planting acres. An acre produces 80 baskets of maize," said a maize grower.

There are some 300,000 acres of maize plantation in southern Shan State and 600,000 acres in northern Shan State.

Myanmar's maize without the central core is sent to nine countries, including China, Bangladesh, Singapore, Malaysia and Hong Kong. However, 98 per cent of the export is primarily shipped to China.

Myanmar exported some 1.2 million tonnes of maize, worth US$305 million in the 2015-2016 FY, and 1.3 million tonnes valued at $253 million in the 2016-2017 FY. — Zar Lin Thu (AMIA) ■

Performance in Two-Year Period by Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation

By Maw Si

THE Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation has been performing emphatically the tasks of reducing the climate change, fighting against the formation of deserts, conservation of different biological species and so on.

Here is the interview with the Union Minister for Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation who has been making concerted efforts for reducing the destruction of forest resources and conservation of environment in every way and departmental heads of the ministry.

U Ohn Win, Union Minister for Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation

Interviewer : Could you explain about the dramatic reforms regarding the forestry sector?

Union Minister : During the period-of-two year, the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation wood in the whole country in the financial year 2016-2017. This was done with the intention of conserving the forests.

Starting from 2016-2017, extracting logs from the Bago Yoma had been suspended nationwide and long-term projects have been initiated which can restore the forest area during the 10 years from 2017-2018 to 2026-2027 fiscal years. Also plans are under way to lay down 19 schemes which can contribute to the restoration of the trees across the country.

The Ministry had efforts to detect illegal logging and to introduce the Community Monitoring and Reporting System of nationwide scale.

During the two-year-period, we could open up to 18 elephant-based tourism camps and earn Ks 300 million. Moreover we are going to open many elephant conservation-based tourism camps across the country.

Interviewer : Could you explain about the implementation for the long-term development?

As we know that forests and trees are renewable energy, with minerals being the non-renewable resources which cannot develop again. Thus for long-term use, it has been arranged to leave reserved mineral resources for new generations.

development, there are three major panels under the ministry—social, economic and natural environment sectors. Among them, panel of natural environment conservation plays an important role.

Interviewer : Could you explain about sustainable development for environmental conservation?

Union Minister : We have drawn up National Environmental Policy, Myanmar National Climate Change Policy, Myanmar Climate Change Strategy and Action Plan in accordance with the changes of economic, social, political situations.

Moreover, we had drawn up a draft of Green Economic Policy Framework and National Waste Management Strategy for the time being. Some six committees were also formed including Central Committee and Working Committee to cooperate with Regions and States. The formation of Environmental Conservation Department has extended up to 19,229 service personnel from 2017-2018 to 2025-2026 fiscal years totalling 9 years in 73 districts and 330 townships across the country.

Interviewer : How about international cooperation which can develop mining sectors?

Union Minister : We have joined the Coordinating Committee for Geoscience Program in East and Southeast Asia (CCOP) since 2015 and attended many workshops, seminars and conferences regarding geology. We have successfully hosted 68th Steering Committee, 16th ASEAN Senior officials Meeting on Minerals (16th ASOM) and ASOMM + 3) and 6th ASEAN Ministerial Meeting on Mineral-AMMIN in Myanmar.

Interviewer : Could you explain about the process of the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI)?

Union Minister : It is of great importance to be transparent in extracting mineral resources. As regards to this, EITI was initiated as of 2012, so Myanmar became a Candidate Country in 2014. The first report had been submitted to EITI Board in 2016. After that a Tripartite Committee consisting of Government, Private and Civil Society was formed. Likewise, Work Implementation Committee was formed in 2016 to promptly carry out EITI works. 2nd Report of the EITI was under-way to submit to the international EITI Board in March 2018.

Interviewer : Could you tell me about the arrangements for the long-term benefits of mineral resources as for the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation?

Union Minister: As we know that forests and trees are renewable energy, with Minerals being the non-renewable resources which cannot develop again.

In our accomplishments, the tasks of sharing knowledge are required in the long run so that respective departments, organizations, NGOs, civil societies, private entrepreneurs and the whole populace will participate.

Thus for long-term use, it has been arranged to leave reserved mineral resources for new generations.

In mining minerals, EMP (Environmental Management Plan) was drawn up, since the time when the new government took office in 2016-2017. With effect from 1 March 2016, permits allowing limited mining were granted. Starting from 1 April 2016, it was strictly prohibited to grant new mining plots in the interest of future generation.

We need to take into consideration of the impact assessment guideline such as including EIA / SIA / IEE / EMP and the maximum benefits in terms of ecosystem services as well as in terms cash income. Cooperation among all-sector-related ministries, private organizations, civil society organizations and the people are essential to implement the policies successfully.

U Khin Latt Gyi, Director General Department of Mining

Plots for exploring minerals are being made in accord with the EMP (Environmental Management Plan). In performing the tasks of exploring jades and gems in gem-producing areas, instructions are issued for drawing up the plans for management of natural environment.

Dr. Ye Myint Swe, Director General, Geological Survey and Mineral Exploration Department

In mining minerals, EMP (Environmental Management Plan) was drawn up and licenses were given out to continue mining. If not so, the permission to dig up was suspended. Presently, digging was granted with limitation.

Dr. Nyi Nyi Kyaw, Director General,

U Hla Maung Thein, Director General, Environmental Conservation Department

Conservation of the natural environment and climate change must be done practically on the ground. In carrying out the tasks of industrial development, we must work hard in unity and with full conscientiousness and special care needs to be given so as to leave a better and sustainable natural environment for our future generations.

U Zaw Ko Ko, Academician

In our accomplishments, the tasks of sharing knowledge are required in the long run so that respective departments, organizations, NGOs, civil societies, private entrepreneurs and the whole populace will participate.

contributing in giant global organizations that would attract several employment and investment opportunities for the nation. Investment has to be done positively in the direction of human capital development and fostering research and creativity in the students. If unavailability of fund is a major cause of concerns then the policymakers may think upon the alternative ways of the funds for these schemes.

* MEMS can play Crucial Role: Myanmar Enterprise Monitoring System (MEMS) focuses on small and medium size enterprise (SME) as industrial enterprise that would create awareness in youth, for which only required the effort to bring the SME initiatives to the youth and making them part of it. This could do wonders in skill development and enriching human capital in native areas of scope in the industrial sectors.

* Sharing and Caring the Talent: The country is rich in producing vegetables, fruits and paddy and this needs a lot of scientific revolutions so as to make few significant contributions in these areas that would not only help productivity but attract more and more foreign investments. The collaborative investments get the talents of Myanmar as well as other parts of the nation in exploring the possible research based economy in the area of agriculture by combining the efforts and scientific knowledge of local youth and other researchers from the world. So, sharing its native knowledge; updating with latest knowledge; involving others from outside would help develop human capital in the nation itself.

* Strengthening ICT Initiatives: As far ICT (Information and Communication Technology) tools and initiatives are concerned, the nation has to take very bold steps so that common ICT tools are available to common masses and they can use all ICT enabled services for service sector and other beneficial schemes aimed at elevating the poor and common masses. In addition to this, modern and global education needs ICT support very much and therefore ICT efforts that are already being put by the country, needs to be speeded up for facilitating the e-based or ICT based education and then the outreach of education would benefit faster and larger.

* Knowledge Management Platform can act as Big Brother: The country's knowledge management platform launched for bringing big financial services to Myanmar, can act as big brother in helping the institutions and young minds in becoming good human capitals that would further attract other developed countries in Myanmar for joint academic and research activities.

* Recognizing Native Intelligence and giving them Opportunity to Flourish: Most importantly, all native intelligence in different areas of industrial and societal growth need to be given importance. The local intelligence of youth has to be promoted; encouraged; flourished and propagated all across the world.

There are so many things that could be written on how to improve knowledge economy of a nation but this article has attempted to bring important points that would help the nation in developing the human capital so that knowledge economy is improved significantly on continuous basis that would ultimately benefit the common masses and the nation at large. Threatened Cambodia river dolphins making ‘historic’ rebound

PHNOM PENH — The population of Cambodia’s critically endangered river dolphin is growing for the first time in decades, conservationists said on Monday, hailing a major turnaround for the freshwater species.

The Irrawaddy dolphins, known for their bulging foreheads and short beaks, once swam through much of the Mekong river but in recent decades have been limited to a 190 km (118 mile) stretch from central Cambodia to its northern border with Laos.

The population has been in steady decline since the first census was taken in 1997, dropping from 200 that year to 80 in 2015 due to habitat loss and destructive fishing practices.

But new births — including three calves in 2018 — and a decline in deaths has put the species on the path to recovery.

The number of dolphins in the Mekong has increased from 80 to 92 in the past two years, according to a survey by Cambodian authorities and the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), which called the rebound a “historic increase”.

“After years of hard work, we finally have reason to believe that these iconic dolphins can be protected against extinction,” said Seng Teak from WWF-Cambodia.

The group attributed the turnaround to the work of river patrol teams and the removal of illegal gillnets — vertical mesh fishing nets that are left in the water for long periods and can trap and drown dolphins. Tourist boat operators were also hailed as a “secret ingredient” for their help in reporting poaching and illegal gillnets to authorities.

But conservationists and officials warn that significant threats remain, including other illegal fishing practices involving grenades, electronic gear and poisonous bait.

Major infrastructure projects, such as dams in Laos, also endanger the animals’ fragile recovery.

Eng Cheasan, the director of Cambodia’s fisheries administration, hailed the dolphins as a “national treasure” and said the government was committed to “eliminating all threats to the survival of this species”.

Underwater survey reveals secrets of Australia WWI wreck off PNG

SYDNEY — Researchers on Monday voiced renewed hope of discovering why Australia’s first submarine sank, after a detailed underwater survey of the long-lost wreck off Papua New Guinea led by Microsoft co-founder Paul Allen.

HMAS AE1, the first of two E Class submarines built for the Royal Australian Navy, vanished on 14 September, 1914 near the Duke of York Islands.

The disappearance of the sub, carrying 35 crew members from Australia, Britain and New Zealand, was the nation’s most enduring military mystery until the wreck was found in December following 12 previous expeditions.

The new survey, conducted earlier this month with Allen’s research vessel the R/V Petrel, used a remotely-operated vehicle to inspect the sub and collect more than 8,500 high-resolution photos and several hours of video footage.

James Hunter of the Australian National Maritime Museum, an archeological observer to the US-Australia expedition, said the fresh imagery should help unravel the mystery of what happened to AE1.

“We’re not there yet, we’re still looking through all the footage... it’s going to give us the detail that we need that we didn’t have before,” he told AFP.

He said the researchers, who also came from the Royal Australian Navy, Curtin University, the Western Australian Museum and the Submarine Institute of Australia, previously only had low-resolution overhead shots of the wreck.

“We’re going to be looking for all sorts of clues. Even the seemingly most innocuous clues may actually help us move forward and have a better understanding of what happened to the submarine,” he added.

So far, the images that have been reviewed reveal that the sub’s stern torpedo tube cap was open, although it is not known why, Hunter said.—AFP ■

Vatican's Sistine Chapel hosts first live online concert

VATICAN CITY — The Vatican's Sistine Chapel, an artistic Renaissance jewel, opened up to the digital age on Sunday with the first live concert streamed over the internet from the famous sacred space.

It was a performance of Scottish composer James MacMillan's acclaimed version of the "Stabat Mater."

A British choir group The Sixteen and chamber orchestra ensemble Britten Sinfonia took to the stage against the backdrop of Michelangelo's masterpiece of The Last Judgement, while lovers of classical music from around the world tuned in to watch on the web.

The "Stabat Mater" is a 13th century poem most likely written by Franciscan friar Jacopone da Todi (1230–1306), but sometimes ascribed to Pope Innocent III, which portrays the Virgin Mary's suffering during Jesus Christ's death by crucifixion.

MacMillan, 58, who has composed many pieces of sacred music, was commissioned by the Genesis Foundation, which has been working since 2001 to support young artistic talent and develop the link between art and faith. His version of "Stabat Mater" was heaped with praise upon its premiere at London's Barbican Centre in 2016, and Cardinal Vincent Nichols, Archbishop of Westminster, pushed for the composer to present his work at the Vatican.

Some 300 people filled the Sistine Chapel Sunday evening for the concert while live video of the performance was streamed over the website of Classic FM. As the British choir began to sing the audience there and online was reminded that the acoustics as much as the frescoes have made the chapel world famous over the centuries.

The Sistine Chapel attracts some six million visitors each year as part of the Vatican Museum, but it is also "a musical centre where composers have written for the liturgy for hundreds of years, some of the great composers of Western civilisation, Palestrina, Allegri, Josquin... And to have my music played here is a very special privilege," said MacMillan.

Conductor Harry Christophers added that "these great sacred places always have something special about the acoustics. The details we can hear, the resonance, is fantastic; it's so emotional." And for him the performance at the Sistine Chapel was the chance of a lifetime.

"These occasions, you are lucky if they appear once in a lifetime, and here we are, I can't think of anything greater."—AFP ■

'A Quiet Place' sneaks back to top of the box office

LOS ANGELES — Sci-fi horror film "A Quiet Place" snuck its way back to the top of the North American box offices over the weekend, beating out noisier action flick "Rampage," industry estimates showed on Sunday.

"A Quiet Place," an almost wordless Paramount production, stars actor/director John Krasinski and real-life wife Emily Blunt as a couple silently struggling to protect their family from invading aliens that are blind but can track their prey by sound.

The film took in a $22 million for a total of $132.4 million since opening atop the box office early this month.

Fallen from the top spot to number two was "Rampage," starring hard-working Dwayne (The Rock) Johnson as a primatologist who befriends an albino gorilla — which grows to enormous size after a rogue experiment and then teams with Johnson to stop invading monsters. Naomie Harris co-stars.

The video-game inspired "Rampage" took in $21 million for the weekend for a total of $66.6 million in two weeks, against a budget of $120 million.

In third place was "I Feel Pretty," an Amy Schumer film about a self-conscious woman who suffers a head injury and subsequently sees herself as beautiful, which made $16.2 million on its debut weekend.

In fourth was "Super Troopers 2" — the long-awaited sequel to the 2001 film about a ne'er-do-well group of cops — in which the protagonists are tasked with replacing a Mountie unit in a Canadian town that is found to be part of the US. The partially crowd-funded film made $14.7 million on its first weekend.

In fifth was "Truth or Dare," a supernatural thriller starring Lucy Hale and Tyler Posey as spring breakers caught up in an innocent game that turns deadly. The film made $7.9 million on its second weekend.—AFP ■

A Syrian dancer's journey from hell to the Paris stage

PARIS — Yara al-Hasbani was putting the finishing touches to her make-up for a performance of "Romeo and Juliet" in Damascus when she found out her father had been tortured to death.

It was the moment the dancer's world turned upside down.

"The little girl in me died at that moment," says the 24-year-old, who had protested alongside her family against Syria's regime in 2011 at the start of the brutal civil war.

Six years on, Hasbani may be living a new life in Paris, but her feelings on the war at home spill onto the stage through her poignant contemporary choreography. Her first Parisian performances, in the public squares at Republique and Trocadero, right by the Eiffel Tower, were tributes to the hundreds of Syrian children killed in a chemical weapons attack in 2013.

"I took inspiration from the photos," Hasbani says. "I imitated the positions of the children's curled-up bodies."

She is just kicking off performances of "Unstoppable," a 12-minute solo retracing her journey to exile, at a dance festival organised by the Arab World Institute in Paris, running until 23 June.

Leaps into a new life

Hasbani, who sports a bleach-blond pixie haircut and a nose piercing, has slowly rebuilt her life through dance after it fell apart with her father's death.

His body was returned to the family 23 days after he was arrested by Syrian authorities. They claimed he had died of a heart attack.—AFP ■

‘Mini-Me’ actor Verne Troyer dead at 49

LOS ANGELES — Verne Troyer, best known for his role as Mini-Me in the “Austin Powers” movies, died Saturday. He was 49.

While no cause of death was given, a statement on the actor’s social media accounts said he had gone through a “recent time of adversity” and alluded to suicide and depression as “serious issues.”

“Over the years he’s struggled and won, struggled and won, struggled and fought some more, but unfortunately this time was too much,” it added.

“Depression and Suicide are very serious issues. You never know what kind of battle someone is going through inside. Be kind to one another. And always know, it’s never too late to reach out to someone for help.”

Troyer, who lived in Los Angeles, was taken to hospital early this month for unspecified treatment. The actor spoke about his alcohol addiction during another hospital stay a year ago.

One of the world’s shortest men at just two feet eight inches (81 centimeters) due to achondroplasia dwarfism, according to reports, Troyer was born in 1969 in Sturgis, Michigan.

He first entered show business as a stunt person in “Baby’s Day Out” (1994).

“In 1993, I was working for Sprint in customer service, and a friend of mine who was the president of LPA — Little People of America — got a phone call from the producers of ‘Baby’s Day Out,’ and they were wondering if there was anyone close to a stand-in size,” he recalled in a 2012 interview with Hollywood Chicago.

“I guess they searched worldwide and couldn’t find anyone. I sent in my picture, and they flew me out to Hollywood to meet with them. Two days later, they offered me the job, and I quit my job at Sprint.”

‘Extremely caring’

Tributes poured in for the small man with an outsized personality.

“Verne was the consummate professional and a beacon of positivity for those of us who had the honor of working with him,” Mike Myers, his “Austin Powers” co-star said in a statement. “It is a sad day, but I hope he is in a better place. He will be greatly missed.”

Oscar-winning actress Marlee Matlin said she was “so sad” over the news of Troyer’s death.

“A lovely smile with a caring and big heart, he helped raise money on behalf of @starkey-cares for free hearing aids for deaf and hard of hearing people. RIP,” added Matlin, who is deaf.

Ludacris posted on Instagram a photograph of himself with Troyer strapped to him in a baby carrier, taken from the rapper’s “Number One Spot” music video. The pair are wearing the same gray costume.

“R.I.P Verne Troyer aka Mini Me. You made it to that #1 Spot Glad we got to make history,” Ludacris wrote.

In addition to his breakout role as the “Mini-Me” — a diminutive, hairless clone of villain Dr Evil — in the first Austin Powers movie “Austin Powers: The Spy

Who Shagged Me,” Troyer was also known for playing Griphook in “Harry Potter and the Sorcerer’s Stone.”

“Verne was an extremely caring individual. He wanted to make everyone smile, be happy and laugh. Anybody in need, he would help to any extent possible,” added the post on Troyer’s social media accounts.

“He inspired people around the world with his drive, determination and attitude.”—AFP ■

World’s oldest person, Japan’s Nabi Tajima, dies at 117

KAGOSHIMA (JAPAN) — Nabi Tajima, a Japanese woman who had been the world’s oldest person, died Saturday due to advanced age at a hospital in southwestern Japan, local officials said. She was 117.

Born in 1900, Tajima, a resident of Kikai Island in Kagoshima Prefecture, raised seven sons and two daughters and had more than 140 descendants.

She had been spending most of her time in bed recent years at a nursing home and was hospitalized about a month ago.

“She passed away as if falling asleep. As she had been a hard worker, I want to tell her ‘rest well,’” said Tajima’s 65-year-old grandson Hiroyuki.

IN the Week-12 match of MPT Myanmar National League (U-21) 2018, Southern Myanmar FC beat Myawady FC by a score of 2-1 in Padonmar Stadium in Yangon yesterday.

Both teams played energetically from the kick-off to score the opening goal.

Southern Myanmar attempted to control the ball in the beginning but Myawady's systematic counterattacks frequently rankled Southern Myanmar's defence line.

The win result did not stand too long for Myawady FC, however. With the speedy play, Souther Myanmar made an equaliser at 43 minute.

The goal was scored by Zaw Win Naing by passing through the opponents. The match was a tie at the end of the first half.

Southern Myanmar team fared better in the second half.

HtunNaingOo scored the second and winning goal for Southern Myanmar at 51 minute.

In the hot weather, both teams put an effort to get more goals in the last minutes but all the chances were blurred by the good defending skills of both teams' players.

Improved Man City difficult to catch, admits Mourinho

LONDON — Manchester United manager Jose Mourinho admitted his side have little chance of catching Premier League champions Manchester City next season unless the standards set by Pep Guardiola's side slip.

Second-placed United trail City by 16 points with four games of the league season to go after Guardiola's men kept up their chase of a series of Premier League records by thrashing Swansea 5-0 yesterday.

Mourinho believes United let crucial points slip away in defeats to West Brom, Huddersfield and Newcastle. However, the Portuguese coach reckons even if those errors are eradicated next season, it will be difficult to challenge for the title if free-spending City bolster their squad once more over the summer. "I think we should have eight, nine or 10 points more than we had," said Mourinho after reaching the FA Cup final by beating Tottenham Hotspur 2-1 on Saturday. "It was not acceptable the last defeat (to West Brom), not acceptable the performance at Huddersfield, not acceptable the performance at Newcastle, so we lost a few matches where we should do better.

"Can we improve next season? Let's try. Can Manchester City keep this level or improve this level? Only they can say. "If they have the team they have, and they are going to invest on the top of the team they have, of course it's going to be difficult."

United have spent hundreds of millions themselves since Mourinho took charge just under two years ago, splashing a then world record £89 million fee for Paul Pogba in 2016 and beating City to the signature of Alexis Sanchez in January by reportedly making the Chilean the highest paid player in Premier League history.—PTI ■
