Pyithu Hluttaw

Pyithu Hluttaw's 8th regular session holds 14th day meeting

THE Second Pyithu Hluttaw's eighth regular session held its 14th day meeting in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

2nd Bill Amending Myanmar Pearl Law

In yesterday meeting, Pyithu Hluttaw approved the 2nd Bill Amending the Myanmar Pearl Law which was sent with amendments from Amyotha Hluttaw.

Boundary Line is official term; Zero Line, No Man's Land are colloquial terms

MP U Maung Myint from Minkin Constituency asked the government why the state-run print media used the terms "Zero Line, Zero Line Area and No Man Land" and how the government planned to ensure there are no dwellings in the said zero-line area.

Deputy Minister for Information U Aung Hla Tun clarified the terms of reference used in the state-run print media regarding the boundary line.

It was found that the editorial team in the newsroom failed to correct the wrong usage in the news report on the Myanmar-Bangladesh bilateral meeting of the border authorities held on 21 February 2018, said the deputy minister.

Following the incident, the ministry informed the state-owned and private media to use the official term of reference, "Boundary Line", he said.

Besides, an article articulating the correct usage was published in the state-run media on 27 February 2018. He continued to say that Myanmar and Bangladesh signed the Demarcation of the Land Section of the Boundary, North of the Naf River on 12 November 1988, and paragraph 14 under Chapter 4 of the agreement said, "In order to make the boundary line easily identifiable and prevent the emergence of boundary line-intersected villages, neither High Contracting Party shall allow to build new houses or other structures of permanent or temporary nature, within a zone of 150 feet on each side of the boundary line."

Being prohibited houses within a zone of 150 feet from the boundary line, local people use "No Man's land" as colloquial terms, he said.

Deputy Minister U Aung Hla Tun continued to say that it is found that the land survey teams of the two countries also used the term "zero line" in order to make clear the difference between the 150-foot non-construction line and the Boundary Line, and the colloquial term "zero line" has hence become popular among the local people and land survey officials.

It is found that Myanmar and Bangladesh officials have been using the colloquial term at technical meetings for many years, he said, quoting the minutes of the meetings of the two countries held in 2006 and 2011.

The use of the colloquial term by the technicians cannot cause problems, but it can give rise to unnecessary complexities when the authorities and local people use the unofficial term, said the deputy minister.

Regarding the second part of the question, Deputy Minister U Aung Hla Tun replied that the Ministry of Home Affairs, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Rakhine State Government are working together in accordance with the existing laws to ensure there are no dwellings in the restricted areas.

Afterwards, MPs discussed

a motion submitted by U Myint Thein of Wetlet constituency urging the Union Government to systematically collect unpaid tax revenue in a clear and transparent way.

Good practices, positive attitudes towards tax payments

U Tun Tun of Pwintbyu constituency discussed that good practices and positive attitudes towards tax payments need to be spread into the public. He said that instead of raising taxes it would be more beneficial to give tax awareness and education so tax evaders decrease and taxpayers increase. He said that Chapter (4)-Section (10) of the Customs Law states that the relevant ministry, in their task of tax collecting, can request aid and support from union ministries, state and region governments, and relevant authorities from self-administered zones to encourage taxpayers. U Tun Tun concluded by saying he approved the motion and wished for the swift development of the nation's economy and the emergence of a positive tax payment culture.

Inya Lake to receive blue heritage plaque

By May Thet Hnin

INYA LAKE, which is one of the popular recreational areas for Yangonites, has been included in the list of places that will receive a blue heritage plaque, said Daw Moe Moe Lwin, Director of Yangon Heritage Trust (YHT).

"Currently, we have already added Inya Lake to the list to receive the blue heritage plaque. We have planned to order eight blue heritage plaques. We will do so after negotiating with the Yangon government authorities," she said.

Inya Lake is an important resource in Yangon. Also, it is essential for the Yangon Region to absorb carbon dioxide. Many trees and animals species are found here.

However, most parts of the lake are inaccessible to the public. There are many tall buildings around the lake. Therefore, the public has access to only 0.75 miles now. Earlier, the Inya Lake was a small artificial lake. The lake was created by the British as a water reservoir between 1882 and 1883 to provide water supply to the Yangon, when the population increased after 1880. It is one of the largest lakes in the Yangon Region, according to data collected by the YHT.

In 1884, the water from Inya Lake was transported to Kandagyi Lake, near downtown Yangon, by pipe and cable connections.

"By installing the blue heritage plaque, people who don't know the history of the lake will learn about it," she added.

The YHT will record the more than 3,000 ancient buildings, natural features, roads, open land spaces in the nine townships of the Yangon Region.

The YHT, which is a non-governmental organisation, made the suggestion when the government set up the policy to implement an urban development project.

YHT blue plaques are already installed in 20 significant places, including the General Post Office, Yangon General Hospital, Basic Education High School No. (1) Dagon and Mahabandula Park. ■

Authorities plan to increase distribution of water to 135 million gallons per day from Ngamoeyeik dam next year

AUTHORITIES are holding discussions to increase the distribution of water to 135 million gallons per day from Ngamoeyeik dam in 2019. Currently, they are distributing some 90 million gallons of water per day from Ngamoeyeik dam, said U Victor Ngun Kio, a member of the National Water Resource Committee (NWRC) advisory team.

Recently, the water from Ngamoeyeik dam was supplied to be used for agricultural and household purposes. The authorities found that over 300 million gallons per day can be supplied. According to the Integrated Water Resource Management Policy, the authorities will give priority to people facing water shortage because of water changes, said U Cho Cho, chairman of the NWRC advisory team.

Moreover, 40 million gallons of water will be supplied daily from Lagunbyin dam, of which 10 million gallons will be distributed to Thilawa Special Economic Zone.

As a replacement for underground water, 155 million gallons, including 120 million gallons daily from Kokkowa river, 60 million gallons from Toe river, and 60 million gallons from Panhlaing river, will be purified with Japanese technology. In 2040, the authority is planning to distribute 610 million gallons daily in the Yangon Region.

Recently, the NWRC drew up a recommendation report, requested by the Yangon City Development Committee, on water resources that can supply sufficient water and methods to manage water. The report will be submitted soon, said U Cho Cho.

"The condition in the region is critical, if a person needs 1,000 gallons daily. In Myanmar, one person can use 18,000 gallons daily. It means we don't need to worry. But, we have to use water efficiently and effectively.

We should not waste water, and we also need to control the water quality. We also need to stop throwing rubbish in the river," he added.

The authorities supply water to only 40 per cent of the Yangon population from Phugyi, Hlawga and Ngamoeyeik dams, while 45 per cent of the population relies on underground water. By 2025, the underground water will be used only as a reserve for emergencies. Therefore, the authorities are planning to distribute water from dams and the river to the people across the country after cleaning it.—May Thet Hnin ■

Poverty, lack of education lead to child labour in Myanmar

By Nyein Nyein

Child labour is a consequence of poverty and the lack of education in Myanmar, said U Nyunt Win, Director-General of Workshop and Labour Law Inspection Department, during the fifth World Day against Child Labour, which was observed at Chatrium Hotel on 12 June.

"To solve the problem of child labour, we need time as it is a difficult process. Also, we need to give priority to solve the two main reasons such as poverty and the lack of education, which cause child labour," he added.

According to the 2017 Myanmar Child Labour Survey report, there are more than 12 million children between 5 and 17 years in Myanmar, of which more than 800,000 are engaged in child labour, more than 600,000 are engaged in forced child labour and more than 68,000 are working in dangerous places.

"Moreover, we also need to keep track of children and young labourers aged between 14 and 18 years who are working more than 44 hours per week; whether they are working in too hot or too cold areas, areas with too much noise, smoke and dust; working in a sealed room or in high altitude areas; and carrying heavy loads and working in unhealthy conditions. Some of the children are exposed to predatory behaviour and exploited, besides not being allowed to study," he noted.

The Myanmar government ratified the ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labour on 18 December 2013. Also, Myanmar has submitted an implementation report to the ILO on 1 September 2015.

Moreover, the Myanmar National Committee on Child Labour Eradication was formed with 37 members, led by Vice President (1), on 5 February 2018 to implement the Myanmar National Project on Child Labour Eradication. ■

Mizanu Ramawman (Nayapara village, Teknaf Township, Bangladesh)

Mohammed Zaylout Udain (Sawpawrondi village, Coz bazaar, Bangladesh)

Deesha (Myoma Kanyintan village, Maungtaw Township)

On the morning of 11 June, authorities discovered 104 people, 44 men and 60 women, together with a wrecked boat in Aungbarlay stream near Tharze village in Yathedaung Township, Rakhine State. They were transported to Nga Khu Ya reception centre where officials from the Department of Immigration performed mandatory inspections and the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement provided humanitarian assistance.

The following are excerpts from interviews with some of the boat crash survivors.

Shahdra Bi Bi (Maungtaw Township)

My aunt from my mother's side and her relatives are in Bangladesh. That's why I went there. Other people wanted to go to Malaysia. My aunt is sick, that's why I wanted to be by her side with my other relatives. We were on our way back from Bangladesh. My parents are both on the Myanmar side that's why I came back.

Mahmet Shawfeit (Bodawsawra village, Cox Bazar, Bangladesh)

I was trying to go to Malaysia and get whatever work available there. There are a lot of people going to work in Malaysia like me. I contacted a broker to go there. The broker gathered a lot of people to send to Malaysia and we had to pay Bangladeshi taka 180,000 as brokerage fees. We were travelling to a ship which would take us to Malaysia and then this happened.

It's going well here on the Myanmar side. I want to go to Malaysia. Their currency has high value so we can earn more daily wages than in Bangladesh. But I don't want to take the illegal route anymore. I want to go there with the government's help.

I'm thankful for the Myanmar government for taking care of us and giving us security while we're here.

Mizanu Ramawman (Nayapara village, Teknaf Township, Bangladesh)

I was going to Malaysia to earn a lot of money there. Working in Bangladesh is tiring. I want to provide for my aging parents. I've heard that you can earn more in Malaysia and it's not as tiring.

I was a footballer back in Bangladesh.

I contacted a broker and paid 180,000 in Bangladeshi taka for the brokerage fees. Our motorboat got caught in a storm and we washed up on Myanmar's coast.

The Myanmar government has been helpful and provided security. I just want to return to Bangladesh.

Mohammed Zaylout Udain (Sawpawrondi village, Coz bazaar, Bangladesh)

I knew travelling to Malaysia would be tiring but the money we earn working the entire day in Bangladesh is not enough to feed the family. That's why I decided to risk it but we ended up here in Myanmar. The Myanmar government has been helpful and relocated us to the centre here. I understand and will follow the laws and rules here. I wish to return to Bangladesh with the government's assistance.

Deesha (Myoma Kanyintan village, Maungtaw Township)

I went to Bangladesh for medical treatment and was on my way back. I had to pay 5,000 in Bangladeshi taka for the ferry back here. The boat was over packed and water started to flow in. I started crying but then a motorboat was headed our way. We climbed over to the motorboat, not knowing it was headed to Malaysia. Then the motorboat crashed and we were stranded for three days before arriving in Myanmar.—News Team ■

MPs discuss Condominium Bylaw

U Htay Oo of Yangon constituency (2) tabled a motion to discuss the Condominium Bylaw concerning joint ownership. He said the bill, sent by the Pyithu Hluttaw with approval, states in Section 28 that the construction of a condominium required meeting the building standards set by the ministry (of Construction), State and region government, or the respective city development committee or similar organisation. U Htay Oo suggested rephrasing the section to include the construction of the building to meet the basic standards, in addition to the standards set by the ministry, state and region governments, or city development committee.

U Htay Oo then mentioned that even though Section 24 (C) of the original Condominium Law states that a maximum of 40 per cent of the rooms in a condominium building may be sold to and owned by a foreign citizens, Section 34 of the Bylaw states that no more than 40 per cent of the condominium's total square feet may be sold to a foreign citizen. He suggested reviewing the law and bylaw, and making amendments, if necessary, as they both state the criteria of the maximum permitted amount differently.

The amendment to Section 45 (A) of the bylaw states that the contractor will maintain the custody of the available rooms during and up to two years after the project's construction phase, and the contractor will hold on to custody after the two-year period until a temporary committee for ownership is formed. U Htay Oo discussed that this may place a heavy burden on the contractor for an indefinite period of time. He suggested making amendments similar to Section 36 of the original law, which states that a temporary committee can be formed if at least 30 per cent of the available rooms in the building are occupied, thus relieving the contractor of any burden.

The motion was further discussed by ten MPs.

Deputy Minister for Planning and Finance, U Maung Maung Win, explained that the Internal Revenue Department has been collaborating with international organizations to implement a modern tax administration system since 2012. The first phase of implementation was carried out from 2012-2013 FY to 2016-2017 FY. The second phase will be conducted from 2017-2018 FY to 2021-2022 FY with a focus on reviewing and amending laws related to taxes.

The deputy minister and MP U Myint Thein then submitted the motion to the Hluttaw for approval.

After a discussion among the assembly, Speaker U T Khun Myat then announced that the Hluttaw has approved of the motion.

The Speaker then announced that the Hluttaw approves the Second Bill to amend the Myanmar Pearl Law submitted by the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation.

Next, the Pyithu Hluttaw discussed the 2017 Bill amending the Vacant, Fallow and Virgin Land Management Law sent with amendments by the Amyotha Hluttaw.

The Speaker then announced the Pyithu Hluttaw's approval of the bill. The fifteenth day meeting of the Eighth Regular Session of the 2nd Pyithu Hluttaw will be held tomorrow.—Aye Aye Thant/MNA ■

Russian top diplomat comments on Korean Peninsula denuclearization

MOSCOW — Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov has called for special attention to be paid to terms when discussing the denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula at Wednesday's news conference.

"For example, many commentators who voice their opinion about the developments state that an agreement on the denuclearization of North Korea was reached," Lavrov noted.

"However, Pyongyang itself, just like all of us, like Russia, China and the international community in general, has always spoken of the denucleariza-tion of the whole Korean Peninsula. The difference is great, as you can see." Washington and Pyongyang are hardly able to resolve all the Korean Peninsula issues alone, Lavrov said. According to him, direct dialogue between the leaders of the US and North Korea "is worth supporting." "However, even though it is important to resolve issues between the US and North Korean, including the denuclearization of the peninsula, it is clear that these issues cannot be fully resolved only at bilateral level," the Russian top diplomat stressed.—Tass ■

French privatizations as Macron 're-thinks' state's role

PARIS — The French government has announced the first major privatizations under President Emmanuel Macron which will be used to finance a new innovation fund and pay down the country's public debt. Under a draft law unveiled late Tuesday, the government plans to lower its shareholdings in airport operator Aeroports de Paris, gaming monopoly Francaise des Jeux and energy group Engie by an undisclosed amount.

Economy Minister Bruno Le Maire said the state holdings were worth an estimated 15 billion euros ($17.6 billion) and most of the proceeds of the sales will go towards a state fund for promoting innovative technologies. During his presidential campaign last year, Macron promised public investment of $10 billion in new disruptive technologies such as artificial intelligence and robotization. "We are moving from a management approach to an approach of investing in the future," Le Maire told Les Echos newspaper in an interview published on Wednesday.

Macron, a 40-year-old former investment banker, has allowed strategic assets once considered too sensitive to sell to fall into private — and foreign — hands. The maker of France's famed high-speed trains, Alstom, is merging with Germany's Siemens company, with the latter set to emerge as the dominant shareholder. Italian firm Fincantieri has also taken control over major shipyards in western France, albeit with strong state oversight.

"It is about re-thinking the role of the French state in the economy," Le Maire added in his interview. "The state's influence can be exerted in other ways than shareholdings," he added, citing "increased regulation" as an alternative.

Long-term trend

Over the last 20 years, major French firms such as France Telecom, bank Credit Lyonnais, airline Air France and motorway operators have been progressively sold off by successive governments.

The state still has investments in the defence, nuclear and other heavy industries that the government has vowed to hold on to, seeing them as key to the country's security and sovereignty. The French state currently holds 50.6 per cent of Aeroports de Paris, which owns and operates the capital's Charles de Gaulle, Orly and Le Bourget airports.

Le Maire said that France would strengthen gambling laws ahead of the sale of Francaise des Jeux, which is 72-per cent state owned. France sold a 4.1-per cent stake in energy company Engie in January 2017, taking its shareholding to 28.7 per cent, to help finance a state-led rescue of troubled nuclear firm Areva. The French state is the biggest shareholder in Engie, which is the world's top independent electricity producer and a leading liquefied natural gas importer.

The law authorising the privatizations is expected to come into force by early 2019. France has not balanced a national budget since the early 1970s and it has a public debt that represents nearly 100 per cent of its GDP, far above the EU target of 60 per cent.—AFP ■

France alarmed after Trump 'practically hugged' Kim: minister

PARIS — French Foreign Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian criticised Donald Trump's "destabilising" foreign policy on Wednesday after the US leader fell out with historic US allies then "practically hugged" North Korea's dictator in a matter of days. Le Drian said Tuesday's historic summit between Trump and North Korea's Kim Jong Un was "an undoubted step forward", but he expressed concern about the US president's diplomatic manoeuvres.

"In the space of just a day you see President Trump attacking Mr Trudeau who is a historic ally, and you see President Trump breaking with his collective allies after the G7 meeting in Quebec, and the next day practically hugged a dictator born into a Communist dictatorship which just a few days ago he said he was completely opposed to," he said. "We are in a destabilising situation," Le Drian told CNews television. "President Trump has decided to progressively dismantle the tools of multilateralism created after the last war. It is a period of uncertainty and risk... America is shutting itself away in its fortress of power." Trump's critics have seized on his warm embrace of Kim, days after a spectacular bust-up with G7 allies at a summit in Canada, as the latest sign of his rapport with autocrats. Trump clashed badly with leaders of the G7's Western democracies over tariffs and accused Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau of being "dishonest and weak" at a summit that ended in farce last weekend. —AFP ■

With summit over, Pyongyang residents swarm around newspapers

PYONGYANG — Residents using the subway system in Pyongyang on Wednesday swarmed around publicly displayed newspapers reporting the previous day's summit between North Korean leader Kim Jong Un and US President Donald Trump, reflecting their intense interest in the diplomatic event involving their leader. Reporting for the first time the summit's outcome in close step with the country's other official media, Wednesday's issue of the Rodong Sinmun featured dozens of related photos, including of the two leaders shaking hands in front of a row of North Korean and US flags, as well as articles spread over four pages. "I can't believe they went so far as to issue a joint statement," a woman murmured as she gazed at a copy of the official party newspaper displayed inside a subway station in the capital. Another woman was seen smiling and reading aloud from an article on the summit as her finger traced its letters. "The first summit in history was held (between North Korea and the United States)," she said softly. Each time a train arrived at the station, many people stopped to read the newspaper. As many as about 50 people swarmed around two newspaper displays in the area at some point, some of them jostling with one another for a better vantage point. Some people around another subway station were seen checking their smartphones to read news reports about the summit. The official Korean Central News Agency reported Wednesday that at

Cambodia slams US for imposing sanctions on PM's bodyguard chief

PHNOM PENH — Cambodia on Wednesday criticized the United States for imposing sanctions on General Hing Bun Heang, commander of the country's Prime Minister Samdech Techo Hun Sen's Bodyguard Unit, for alleged human rights abuses. "The Cabinet of the Prime Minister of Cambodia condemns the US's measure, which was taken groundlessly on His Excellency Hing Bun Heang, who is a strict law enforcer and dignified obligor in safeguarding Cambodia's stability and social order," the Cabinet said in a statement. "What the US did is the violation of sovereignty of an independent country," it said. "The Cabinet of the Prime Minister of Cambodia openly criticizes this unreasonable, violable, and shameless measure of the US." Another statement issued by the Ministry of Defense said the US's sanctions imposed on the Cambodian senior official was unacceptable and a flagrant violation of law in Cambodia, which is a sovereign state. "The Ministry of Defense of Cambodia urges the US Treasury Department to immediately stop imposing sanctions on any Cambodian senior military officials without clear grounds," the statement said. The reaction came after the US Treasury Department on Tuesday sanctioned Bun Heang for "being the leader of an entity involved in serious human rights abuse". —Xinhua ■

Tensions on Korean Peninsula ease after Trump-Kim summit: Japan gov't

TOKYO — Tensions on the Korean Peninsula have eased after the historic summit between US and North Korean leaders, Japan's top government spokesman said on Wednesday. "It is clear that, through this summit, the severe security conditions that meant we were always on alert for incoming missiles (from North Korea) were alleviated," Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga told a press conference. In the first-ever US-North Korean summit in Singapore on Tuesday, North Korean leader Kim Jong Un pledged to work toward the "complete" denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula, while

US President Donald Trump committed to provide security guarantees to Pyongyang. In marked contrast to the recent conciliatory mood, North Korea last year carried out a nuclear test and launched two ballistic missiles over Japan. The government spokesman also said that Japan will offer to assist in the denuclearization process in cooperation with the United States and South Korea. Noting that "a step toward various issues concerning North Korea" has been initiated by the US-North Korea summit, Suga welcomed Trump raising the issue of Japanese nationals abducted by the North decades ago, something Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's government views as its top priority. Although a joint statement released after the summit did not specify a time frame to achieve denuclearization, Suga said, "The North Korean issues are not easy ones that could be settled in a summit." —Kyodo News ■

Putin says Russia committed to principle of 'politics and sports don't mix'

MOSCOW — Russia has always believed that 'sports and politics don't mix' and is ready to cooperate with everyone in order to bolster a creative start for sports, Russian President Vladimir Putin said at the FIFA Congress on Wednesday.

"I would like to underline that FIFA is committed to the principle of keeping politics out of sports," Putin stressed. "Russia has always adhered to such approaches and is striving for the closest cooperation with everyone who is determined to develop and enhance a creative beginning for sports and its boundless humanistic potential."

According to the Russian president, the upcoming championship is not only an exciting sporting event, but a chance for millions of people to get to learn about different peoples and their traditions, and make new friends.

In addition, they will "understand that other countries like their own are home to kind, enthusiastic and open-minded people and all of them want Putin stressed that Russia is ready to host the World Cup and ensure that all people who come here will have the finest amenities and the best positive attitudes.

"Our goal is that all our guests — from football stars to ordinary fans — will feel the warmth and kindness of our people, get into the spirit of Russia's multiethnic culture and unique nature and (we) hope (you will) all wish to come here again," Putin stated.

Speaking about the importance of the World Cup, Putin said that several generations of Russian fans had been dreaming of this. "Twelve first-class stadiums and modern infrastructure have been built" in Russia, he noted.

The Russian head of state also wished the delegates to the Congress success in their endeavors, and also invited them to the opener on Thursday. "We will be sincerely glad to see all of you. Welcome to Russia," he announced. —Tass ■

Austrian, German, Italian ministers form 'axis' against illegal immigration: Kurz

BERLIN — The hardline interior ministers of Austria, Germany and Italy have formed an "axis of the willing" to combat illegal immigration into the EU, Austrian Chancellor Sebastian Kurz said on Wednesday.

"I am happy about the good cooperation that we want to develop between Rome, Vienna and Berlin — I think it marks very sensible cooperation that will contribute to reducing illegal migration to Europe," Kurz, whose country assumes the EU's rotating presidency on July 1, said after talks with German Interior Minister Horst Seehofer in Berlin. —AFP ■

France seeks 'cooperation' with Italy on migration

PARIS (France) — France is "perfectly aware" of the pressure on Italy as it copes with an influx of migrants from Africa, a foreign ministry spokeswoman said on Wednesday, and it is "committed to cooperation and dialogue" on the issue.

S Korea newspapers welcome summit as 'first step' toward peace

SEOUL — Most South Korean newspapers reacted with cautious optimism on Wednesday to the historic meeting between Donald Trump and Kim Jong Un in Singapore, although one conservative daily denounced the agreement it produced as "absurd".

The centrist Hankook daily noted that the post-summit joint statement signed by the US president and North Korean leader on Tuesday had omitted Washington's demand for a "complete, verifiable, irreversible" denuclearisation of the North and lacked a concrete timetable to achieve that goal. Instead the statement commits Pyongyang to "work toward complete denuclearisation of the Korean Peninsula".

"In terms of the key issue... it may appear that the result failed to meet expectations," Hankook said in an editorial.

But it added that the concrete steps of dismantling the North's nuclear arsenal would be handled during follow-on negotiations, and that negotiations for a nuclear-free Korean peninsula and permanent peace between Seoul and Pyongyang had "just begun".

The pro-business JoongAng daily was cautiously optimistic, even though the timetable for the dismantling of Pyongyang's nuclear weapons remained vague.

"We can't dismiss the summit as a failure. It is already a historic event that the leaders of two foes have met. The first step to end decades of hostilities since the Korean War has been made", JoongAng said.

However, the conservative

Chosun daily lambasted the agreement signed by Trump and Kim. "The 12 June agreement is so outrageous and absurd that we could hardly believe our eyes," it said in an editorial.

The paper attacked Trump for promising to stop annual US-South Korea joint military drills before the North had started dismantling its nuclear arsenal.

Its view was echoed by the conservative opposition Liberty Korea Party, whose leader Hong Joon-Pyo castigated the summit as a "great failure".

But an editorial in the left-leaning Hankyoreh praised the summit as opening a new chapter for a "great change" in US-North Korea ties.

The stoppage of the US-South Korea drills, which the North says are rehearsals for aggression against it, will serve as "a catalyst" in improving ties between the two Cold War foes and denuclearisation of the North, it said. —AFP ■

Bend it like Modi: Indian PM trots and treads in fitness video

NEW DELHI — Narendra Modi, whose supporters boast of his physical prowess and indifference to sleep, has shared the secrets to his morning fitness regimen in a video where the Indian premier thrusts a staff, walks backwards and flexes over a boulder.

Modi spruiked the "refreshing and rejuvenating" benefits of his exercise workout in a video posted online on Wednesday that also included a meditative stroll over a special path "inspired" by nature.

It follows a trend of home-made motivational fitness videos from prominent Indians, including adored cricket captain Virat Kohli, trying to tackle obesity and poor health in the country of 1.25 billion.

In the latest addition Modi, 67, implores Indians to follow his example in a two minute clip shot in the lush garden of his New Delhi residence.

"Apart from yoga, I walk on a track inspired by the Panchtatvas or five elements of nature — Prithvi (earth), Jal (water), Agni (fire), Vayu (air), Aakash (sky)," Modi says in the video viewed nearly 200,000 times within hours of being posted.

"This is extremely refreshing and rejuvenating. I also practise breathing exercises."

In one clip Modi, clad in a black tracksuit, walks backwards over a treaded lawn with his hands clasped in a prayer pose, before stretching over a large boulder.

He then proceeds to a specially-designed path around a large tree, balancing on its edges before walking over pebbles, wood and water, as he pumps a wooden staff from side to side.

The teetotal vegetarian then stands before a Buddha statue in his garden, breathing through one nostril. Later he sits on a rock, sharply taking quick breaths in a meditative pose.

A passionate yoga enthusiast, Modi has also touted the benefits of the ancient Indian practice via a cartoon avatar of himself performing sun salutations and downward dogs.

Government ministers were quick to heap praise on Modi for his "unparalleled energy levels".

But others were less impressed.

"Majority of middle-class citizens live amidst #stink from open defecation by #slumdweller & smoke from waste burning & fuelwood," posted one Twitter user, Naresh Minocha.

picted in Modi's backyard, experts often warn Indians against exercising outdoors in New Delhi and other major cities due to terrible air quality.

Yangon reaches semi-final in General Aung San Shield 2018

Yangon United has advanced to the semifinal of General Aung San Shield 2018 after beating GFA 2-0 in a quarterfinal match at Thuwunna Stadium in Yangon yesterday. Using the 4-4-2 formation, Yangon scored through young players Aee Soe and Zaw Min Tun. Both teams put in all their efforts, as a win would take them to the semifinal of the tourney.

Yangon missed scoring opportunities in the 15th and 19th minutes, as Aee Soe's aim was blocked by the GFA keeper, while Kosuke's hit bounced over the net. GFA played strongly, unleashing a tough attack to break the deadlock, but Yangon's defence foiled all their attempts.

At the end of the first half, the scoreboard read 0-0.

In the second half, Yangon substituted Kyaw Zin Oo with Htoo Khat Lwin. The deadlock was broken for Yangon when an attempt by Emmanuel bounced back from the keeper and Aee

Soe kicked it into the net at the 62nd minute. The opening goal seemed to have energised Yangon, which played better since. Yangon scored the second goal at the 76th minute when defender Zaw Min Tun converted an assist by striker Emmanuel. By the end of full-time play, Yangon had won 2-0. Yangon United advanced to the semi-final of the tournament and will face Magwe FC, which won over Ayeyarwady in a penalty shootout.—Lynn Thit (Tgi) ■

FIFA to choose North America or Morocco for 2026 World Cup

MOSCOW — FIFA members vote on Wednesday on whether to award the 2026 World Cup to frontrunners North America or to underdogs Morocco, which has African support to bring football's showpiece event back to the continent.

On the eve of the opening match of the 2018 World Cup, delegates from 207 nations attending the FIFA Congress in Moscow are faced with a clear choice.

The joint bid from the United States, Mexico and Canada boasts modern, established stadiums and well-developed transport links underpinned by Mexican football fervour.

Morocco, on the other hand, is promising a "European" World Cup in Africa, playing on the north African nation's proximity to Europe. But compared to North America, Morocco's bid exists largely on paper — many stadiums and roads would have to be built and critics question how it would cope with the 2026 tournament, which will be expanded to 48 teams from the 32 that are taking part in 2018.

FIFA inspectors have classified the north African nation's stadiums, accommodation and transport as "high risk", awarding it just 2.7 out of five in an evaluation report, with concerns raised over several critical aspects.

They warned "the amount of new infrastructure required for the Morocco 2026 bid to become reality cannot be overstated".

The report left the US-Canada-Mexico bid as the clear favourite after rating it four out of five.

'Vote on us, not Trump'

But the North American bid

fears it could lose out if the vote becomes a referendum on the popularity of US President Donald Trump. Trump has tweeted threats that if countries did not support the North American bid, they could not expect US support on other issues.

That prompted bid leader Carlos Cordeiro to urge FIFA members to vote on the "merits" of the bid, not Trump.

"We believe strongly that this decision will be made on its merits," Cordeiro said. "This is not geopolitics. We're talking about football and what is fundamentally, at the end of the day, the best interest of football and our footballing community."

The US hosted the World Cup in 1994, while football-crazy Mexico hosted in 1970 and in 1986, the tournament remembered for Diego Maradona's "Hand of God" goal. Morocco has tried, and failed, four times, most recently in a bid to host the 2010 World Cup, which went to South Africa as the African continent hosted for the first time.—AFP ■
