Antarctica ice loss faster than ten years ago

The western part of Antarctica is shedding ice much faster today than it was just ten years ago, according to new satellite measurements.

The measurements, which surveyed the coasts of nearly the entire continent, suggest that climate models underestimate how quickly Antarctica responds to ongoing global warming, said study co-author Jonathan Bamber of the University of Bristol in England.

Many past studies have tried to estimate how much ice Antarctica is losing.

But the new study is the first to show that this loss is accelerating, at least in western Antarctica and the Antarctic Peninsula, the researchers say.

"In all the ice sheet models we have at present for Antarctica, things happen very slowly," Bamber said.

"[But] we're seeing things happen rather quickly."

They found that for Antarctica overall, the ice loss increased about 75 percent over the ten-year period, from 112 gigatons of ice per year in 1996 to 196 gigatons of ice per year in 2006.

As to whether Antarctica will lose or gain ice as global warming proceeds, the measurements disagree with existing climate models that suggest.

Russia restrict visas for British Council staff

Moscow, 15 Jan—Russia announced on Monday it will not issue new entry visas to staff working in the British Government's cultural offices in two regions, sharpening a row that has soured already-poor relations.

Russia ordered the British Council to halt work at the two regional offices from 1 January in a move both sides have linked to a diplomatic feud over the murder of Alexander Litvinenko, a Russian emigre critical of the Kremlin.

Britain has called the Russian order illegal and on Monday the two offices, in St Petersburg and Yekaterinburg, resumed work after the long New Year break, Reuters correspondents in both cities said.

Russia's Foreign Ministry summoned British Ambassador Tony Brenton on Monday and soon after issued a statement blasting Britain for defying the order and keeping its offices open.

"Russia views such actions as an intentional provocation aimed at inflaming tensions in Russian-British relations," the Foreign Ministry said in a statement posted on its www.mid.ru website.

"The Russian side will not issue visas to new employees sent to work in the (British) consular offices of St Petersburg and Yekaterinburg to carry out British Council work," the statement said.

Syria expects more ALSG's efforts on Lebanon crisis

DAMASCUS, 15 Jan — Syria said on Sunday that it was waiting for the Arab League Secretary-General Amr Moussa to resume his efforts on pushing forward an Arab initiative aimed at ending the ongoing presidential crisis in Lebanon.

"The Arab plan is clear in its adoption of a no winner no loser stand which puts Lebanon on the road of health and stability because it will be the only winner," a Foreign Ministry official source was quoted as saying by the official SANA news agency.

Moussa left Beirut Saturday after his four-day-long marathon talks with Lebanon's rival factions without a breakthrough in installing the three-point plan endorsed in Cairo last Sunday. The three-point plan aimed at immediately electing Lebanese Army Commander General Michel Suleiman as Lebanese president, proceeding to form a national unity government and drafting a new electoral law.

Lebanon is facing today the most critical situation since the 1975 civil war which wrecked the country for 15 years.

Lebanese presidential seat has been vacant since former president Emile Lahoud ended his term on 24 November, and the sharply divided Lebanese Parliament has delayed the elections for twelve times without a consensus.

Clinton battles to keep US Black support

COLUMBIA (South Carolina), 15 Jan — Faced with potential loss of Black support, Democratic contender Hillary Clinton said on Sunday her chief US presidential rival Barack Obama was distorting her comments on race.

EU to toughen environment criteria for biofuels

BRUSSELS, 15 Jan — The European Union is to set tougher environmental criteria for biofuels after acknowledging that the drive for transport fuels produced from crops has done unforeseen damage, the European Commission said on Monday.

Environment Commissioner Stavros Dimas said in a BBC interview the EU had initially underestimated the danger to rainforests and the risk of forcing up food prices from its policy of setting binding targets for the use of biofuels.

“We have seen that the environmental problems caused by biofuels and also the social problems are bigger than we thought they were. So we have to move very carefully,” he said.

“We have to have criteria for sustainability, including social and environmental issues, because there are some benefits from biofuels,” Dimas said.

EU leaders set a mandatory target last March that at least 10 per cent of transport fuel should come from biofuels by 2020.

Dimas told the BBC it would be better to miss the target than meet it by harming poor people or damaging the environment.

"Eels are found on the beds of creeks and canals. So, we can say that eels are a natural resource in the earth." (Daw Mya Thazin, Secretary of Eel Entrepreneurs' Association)

Being rich in aquatic and terrestrial resources, Myanmar earns a great deal of foreign exchange by exporting marine products.

The nation is blessed with a long coast and a large number of rivers, creeks and natural lakes where it can operate fishery industry on a commercial scale.

Fish, prawn and crab are abundant and pearl breeding industry is making progress in the Myanmar's waters.

The People's Republic of China is the largest market for Myanmar's fish, prawn, crab and eel. Among the marine products exported to China, eel is in high demand.

Eel is exported under the leadership of the Eel Entrepreneurs' Association. In an interview, Secretary Daw Mya Thazin of the Fisheries Association said that the association was accommodating 10 eel exporters on the campus of the Institute of Fisheries in West Gyogone, Insein Township. The association exported eel to China through Muse 105th Mile border trade zone, she said.

She said that eel was produced on a large scale in Ayeyawady, Bago, Mandalay and Magway divisions and Mon State, and it was caught natural lakes, creeks and canals.

Regarding the export of eel, she said that the association had set up its agents in states and divisions 105th Mile the following day, she said.

Eel is caught most from September to December. The creature hibernates from February to March and gives birth in the rainy season.

Eels with minimum girth of seven millimetres are allowed to be exported. In order to avert extinction of eel species, small eels are removed with the use of sieves and are released to natural lakes, creeks and canals.

Purchase centres buy eels at the price of 3700 kyats a viss. Now, eel exporting business is booming, so, eel fishers are earning a lot of incomes.

The Eel Entrepreneur Association is helping the nation earn foreign exchange by boosting the export where eel is produced on a commercial scale. The association got the marine product through its purchase centres. Then, it transported the product to Muse 105th Mile and sold it to China through auction. Many purchase centres in China purchased eel from the association, she said.

She said that the purchase centres of the association washed the eels and kept them in water-proof boxes with plastic sheets inside it. Each box could hold 50 viss of eels. Every day, on average, one to three 110-box-capacity trucks left Yangon in the afternoon and arrived in Mandalay the next morning. There, the eel boxes were transferred onto the trucks from Muse. Monkey's brain signals used to control robot

WASHINGTON, 16 Jan — Scientists in the United States and Japan have managed to successfully use a monkey's brain to control a robot over the Internet, something which they hope will help paralyzed people walk again.

According to processor Miguel Nicolelis, a neurobiology professor at Duke University. He led the research and stated that this is only a few years away from helping paralyzed people walk again.

How it works is it allows them to use their thoughts to control an exoskeleton attached to their body. The research has been going on for 10 years. He stated "This is an attempt to restore mobility to people. We had the animal trained to walk on a treadmill. As it walked, we recorded its brain activity that generated its locomotion pattern. As the animal was walking and slowing down and changing his pattern, his brain activity was driving a robot in Japan in real time."

The brain activity was sent to the Computational Brain Project of Japan Science and Technology Agency over the Internet. A humanoid robot received the activity and was walking at the exact same pace as the monkey. For a human, electrodes and a computer chip would be implanted in a patient's brain. The electrodes would wirelessly transmit information to the chip, which would in turn send out the brain signals to an attached device. The exoskeleton would surround the legs and would work with the brain activity of a person. — INTERNET

Afghan paper slams British comments on troops

KABUL, 16 Jan — The warning by Britain’s Defence Secretary Des Browne that British troops could be engaged in Afghanistan for decades is an irresponsible one and against the country’s national sovereignty, an Afghan paper said on Tuesday.

Britain, which has about 7,800 troops operating in Afghanistan in a 40,000-strong NATO stabilization force, is expected to increase that number as it withdraws from Iraq.

Asked when British soldiers would be withdrawn from Afghanistan, Browne told Sunday’s The People newspaper: “We cannot risk it again becoming an ungoverned training haven for terrorists who threaten the

He said: “It is a commitment which could last decades, although it will reduce over time.”

“But there is only so much our forces can achieve. The job can only be completed by the international community working with the Afghan Government and its army,” he added.

WINDHOEK,15 Jan—Five passengers killed when their light aircraft crashed in a residential suburb of Namibia’s capital Windhoek on Friday were Israeli diamond dealers, diplomats and police said on Sunday. The Cessna 210 plane ploughed into a house and set it ablaze while attempting an emergency landing in which the pilot was also killed.

China says food safety push a complete success

BEIJING,15 Jan—China on Monday declared its four-month campaign to ensure food safety a complete success, with all objectives being met months before Beijing hosts the Summer Olympics.

Scandals involving substandard food, drugs and other goods are reported by Chinese media almost every day. The issue burst into the international spotlight when tainted additives exported from China

Millions of toys made in China were recalled last year, many by US giant Mattel, mainly because of excessive levels of lead paint.

“The tasks of the rectification campaign have been fulfilled completely and its objectives have all been reached,” the State Council Information Office said in a news release.

UK biofuels push lacks greenhouse targets

LONDON, 15 Jan— A government directive requiring fuel suppliers to use more biofuels will do little to combat climate change because the measure lacks targets to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, British scientists said on Monday.

In a report focusing on the British directive set to take effect in April 2008, the Royal Society said biofuels should play an important role in cutting greenhouse gas emissions linked to global warming.

The Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation requires transport fuel suppliers to ensure that 5 per cent of all fuels come from a renewable resource by 2012.

The requirement is part of a wider European Union biofuels directive.

“The government must ensure that the (requirement) promotes fuels with the lowest emissions by, for example, setting a greenhouse gas reduction target,” John Pickett, who led the Royal Society's biofuels study.

“Without a target we risk missing opportunities to stimulate exciting innovations that will help us cut our spiralling transport emissions.”

Biofuels, mainly produced from agricultural crops such as maize, sugarcane and vegetable oils, are seen by many as a way to cut emission of greenhouse gases and to boost energy security at a time when oil output may be at or near its peak.

Activists chase Japan whalers, but split on tactics

CANBERRA, 15 Jan— Anti-whaling activists on Monday said they had chased the flagship of Japan's whaling fleet from hunting grounds near Antarctica, but were divided over protest action if the Japanese returned to resume the yearly slaughter.

Greenpeace said its protest ship, Esperanza, had successfully stopped Japanese whaling in the Southern Ocean after intercepting the fleet's factory processing ship, the Nisshin Maru, at the weekend and chasing it north through heavy seas.

“We are a mile or two behind and matching them for speed.

At the moment we are reaching our objective which was to stop them whaling, so there is no need to do anything more than keep them on the run,” spokeswoman Sara Holden told Reuters from the ship.

Japan plans to hunt almost 1,000 minke and fin whales for research over the Antarctic summer, but has abandoned the cull of 50 humpback whales after international condemnation and a formal diplomatic protest by 31 nations.

Holden said the Nisshin Maru had been clear of whaling grounds for 24 hours and appeared to be joining a refuelling and supply ship from the six-vessel fleet, the Oriental Bluebird.

Apple unveils world's thinnest laptop MacBook Air

BEIJING, 16 Jan — Apple Inc. chief Steve Jobs on Tuesday introduced an ultra-slim laptop computer that he billed as the world's leanest laptop, media reported. The new Apple notebook, the MacBook Air, is 1.93 centimetres thick at its thickest point and 0.41 centimeters at its thinnest, small enough to fit in a manila envelope, which is how Jobs demonstrated it to a crowd of Apple fans at the Macworld Expo.

“It's the world's thinnest notebook (computer),” Jobs said with a smile. “We went out and looked at all the thin notebooks out there and tried to distill a best-of-breed.” The new notebook does not come equipped with an optical drive for playing CDs and DVDs, though one is available as an option for 99 US dollars. Instead, Apple has equipped it with remote software that lets users play DVDs and CDs on another computer as if they were on the notebook.

The MacBook Air notebook, which has a 13.3-inch screen and full-sized laptop keyboard, weighs 1.36 kilograms and has battery life of five hours. The ultra-lean laptop is priced at 1,799 dollars and will begin shipping in two weeks, Jobs said. Jobs also confirmed the consumer electronics company's foray into online movie rentals, revealing an alliance with all six major movie studios to offer films over high-speed Internet connections within 30 days after they're released on DVD. —Internet

LONDON, 16 Jan — Liverpool thrashed third division Luton Town 5-0 in an FA Cup third-round replay at Anfield on Tuesday with Steven Gerrard grabbing a hat-trick.

Tottenham Hotspur also advanced with a 1-0 replay win at Premier League rivals Reading, Robbie Keane scoring the winner to set up a tie at Manchester United.

Manager Rafael Benitez, whose future looks uncertain after Liverpool’s American owners admitted talking to Juergen Klinsmann about succeeding him at Anfield, sent out a strong team against a Luton side who held them 1-1 nine days ago.

The teams formed a guard of honour for Jamie Carragher before the start to mark the defender’s 500th appearance for Liverpool.

Carragher had a quiet night after that, although the visitors held out until a minute before halftime when Dutch winger Ryan Babel shot powerfully past keeper Dean Brill.

Gerrard headed the second after the break before Sami Hyypia made it 3-0 with a deflected header. Gerrard then slotted his second before completing his treble with a swerving effort 20 minutes from time.

Liverpool will be at home to third division Swansea City or minor league Havant and Waterlooville in round four. "It was difficult to score the first goal but after that it was an open game," Benitez told Sky Sports. "They (Luton) were defending very hard with lots of players behind the ball.

"I'm very happy because we won the game and that's all I was thinking about." — MNA/Reuters

Barca tame holders Sevilla to advance in Cup

BARCELONA, 16 Jan — Barcelona knocked holders Sevilla out of the King's Cup on the away goals rule on Tuesday after a battling 0-0 draw at the Nou Camp.

Frank Rijkaard's side, who drew 1-1 in last week's first leg, were put under heavy pressure by Sevilla but held their nerve to book their place in the quarter-finals.

Barca will now meet the winners of Wednesday's tie between Recreativo Huelva and Villarreal.

"It was a titanic effort from both teams," said Barcelona president Joan Laporta. "In the end we had the luck to go through, but Sevilla are a great team and we saw two of the best sides in Europe competing out there."

Sevilla coach Manolo Jimenez said the tie had turned on Thierry Henry's away goal in the first leg.

"It was a very evenly balanced tie, but a great piece of skill from Henry proved to be decisive and that was what allowed his team to get through."

The game got off to a high tempo start with Sevilla keeping Barca on the rack in the opening minutes as they went in search of an early goal.

Juventus reach last eight by beating Empoli

MILAN, 16 Jan — Juventus reached the Italian Cup quarter-finals after beating Serie A strugglers Empoli 5-3 in a Turin thriller on Tuesday to advance 6-5 on aggregate.

An under-strength Juve lost 2-1 at Empoli in December's first leg and Claudio Ranieri's decision to field a few of his big guns in the return match paid early dividends when Marco Marchionni burst through the defence to score.

Pavel Nedved doubled the lead on 10 minutes but an injury to defender Giorgio Chiellini knocked Juve off their stride. Empoli capitalized when Luca Antonini slid in to pull one back and Nicola Pozzi produced an excellent header to bring the scores level on the night. — MNA/Reuters

Inter sign Maniche on loan from Atletico Madrid

MILAN, 16 Jan — Portugal midfielder Maniche has joined Inter Milan on loan from Spanish side Atletico Madrid until June, the Serie A leaders said on Tuesday.

"Maniche is Inter's. This morning, having completed a medical, he signed a contract with the club until June 30 2008," the club said on their Web site (www.inter.it) after the loan was concluded following days of talks.

Media reports said Inter had first option to buy Maniche for 6 million euros (9 million US dollars).

The 30-year-old was an important part of Jose Mourinho's Porto side that won the 2003 UEFA Cup and the 2004 Champions League. He was also in the Portugal team which reached the Euro 2004 final and the 2006 World Cup semi-final.

“Le Monde” ordered to compensate Barca for doping story

MADRID, 16 Jan — French daily Le Monde has been ordered by a Spanish court to pay Barcelona 300,000 euros in compensation for linking the club with the doctor at the centre of the Operation Puerto doping investigation.

Barcelona said the ruling from a Barcelona court also stated that Le Monde should publish a correction about the articles, which appeared in the paper on December 7 and 8 in 2006, in its printed and online editions and in two leading Catalan dailies.

"The verdict satisfies Barcelona's desire for the publication of a correction of the articles which will deny any links between Barcelona and Eufemiano Fuentes and deny any links between the club and any doping practices," the club said in a statement on Tuesday. — MNA/Reuters

Landslide in Indonesia's Papua kills 10

JAKARTA, 16 Jan — A landslide in Indonesia's remote Papua Province has killed at least 10 people after heavy rain caused a hillside to collapse onto a complex of houses, a police and a disaster official said on Tuesday.

A local police official said that the disaster occurred on Monday afternoon after heavy downpours, combined with strong winds in the area, destabilized the hillside.

Rustam Pakaya, head of the Health Ministry's crisis centre in Jakarta, told Reuters that seven people were also injured and three were still missing after the landslide in the area of the provincial capital Jayapura.

"We have deployed medical teams but we don't know yet how many people have been displaced," Pakaya said.

Landslides and floods are frequent in Indonesia, where tropical downpours can quickly soaks hillsides and years of deforestation often mean there is little vegetation to hold the soil.—MNA/Reuters

Abbas says latest peace talks brought nothing

RAMALLAH, 16 Jan — Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas said on Tuesday the latest round of peace talks with Israel brought nothing.

"The negotiations are still in their beginning," Abbas told reporters in Ramallah. Israeli and Palestinian negotiation crews met on Monday in Jerusalem to discuss the obstacles which delay the progress of the peace talks.

The two sides agreed to launch the talks last month after years of halt. The building of Israeli settlements in West Bank was one of the main obstacles.

"If the desire and the true intentions, among the Israeli side, became available, then we would be able to make peace this year," Abbas said.

Former governor killed in S Afghanistan blast

KABUL, 16 Jan — A roadside bomb blast triggered by remote-control has killed two tribal elders, including a former provincial governor, in Tirin Kot District of southern Afghanistan's Uruzgan Province, the police said Tuesday.

"The two were heading towards their houses from a mosque at around 7.00 pm (1430 GMT) Monday when the bomb exploded," Uruzgan's police chief Juma Gul Himat told Xinhua.

Fazl Rabi once served as Uruzgan governor during the Mohammad Najibullah regime in the 1990s and deputy governor of Uruzgan in 2003-2004, Himat said.

No one or group took the responsibility yet.

Militancy-related violence left over 6,000 people dead in war-torn Afghanistan in 2007, the bloodiest year since the Taleban regime were toppled six years ago.

Both Afghans and NATO commanders have expected more militants attacks this year in Afghanistan.
