Take fire preventative measures in all seriousness

Outbreaks of fire are common in summer in which the weather is hot and dry. As such, people need to be mindful of the possible outbreaks of fire.

Reviewing the outbreaks of fire, it is found that over 82 per cent of the outbreaks of fire have been due to negligence. Fire causes the loss of property worth hundreds of millions yearly.

As fires usually break out in the months of January, February, March and April, people are to practise a constant vigilance against the possible outbreaks of fire in those periods.

In the meantime, people are to pay more attention to the use of fire as it can bring a great trouble to them.

The outbreaks of fire caused the great loss of lives and property of the people as well as the loss of property and assets of the state. Therefore, flammable materials are needed to be handled with care.

With the growing population and higher living standards the use of electricity and electronic equipment has become high. And great care is needed when using them.

In building such new major buildings as factories, mills, modern shopping centres, etc advice and suggestions should be sought from the Fire Services Department for emergencies.

Well aware of the loss of lives and property of the people caused by fires the entire people are to cooperate with the organizations concerned and property contractors in taking fire preventative measures.

All in all, preventative measures against outbreaks of fires are to be taken in all seriousness. Only then, will the people be free from the dangers of such natural disaster.

NATO allies undecided on missile shield plan

BRUSSELS, 14 March— NATO will delay a decision on whether to commission a missile shield to protect those parts of Europe not covered by a planned US system because major issues remain open, an alliance official said on Wednesday.

NATO allies Greece, Romania, Bulgaria and Turkey will not be fully covered by a proposed US shield in East Europe to counter missile threats from what Washington calls “rogue states” such as Iran and North Korea.

The United States had originally sought a decision by an alliance summit in Bucharest next month on whether to go ahead with a NATO “bolt-on” shield to cover those countries, but a number of allies are sceptical about the plan. “I don’t think we are going to see a decision there. I don’t see any nation pushing for a decision on an actual procurement programme,” NATO Assistant Secretary-General for Defence Investment Division Peter Flory told a news briefing.

“The questions tend to be: How much would this cost? How effective would it be? Where would it fit in with a broader concept of how you would deal with weapons of mass destruction?” While insisting that Russia—which opposes the US plan—had no say in the final decision on a NATO shield, Flory said: “It is clearly an element in our discussion.”

US voters say they are worse off than 2004

WASHINGTON, 14 March — A plurality of US voters heading into the November presidential election said they are worse off than they were four years ago, according to an NBC News/Wall Street Journal poll released on Wednesday.

NBC reported that this was the first time since 1992 that a majority of voters answered “no” when asked “Are you better off now than you were four years ago?” Forty-three per cent of respondents said they were worse off, compared with 34 per cent who said they were better off and 21 per cent who said their status was the same, NBC reported.

By contrast, strong pluralities or majorities said that they were better off before entering the general elections in 1996, 2000 and 2004, NBC said.

But Democrats, who are trying to take back the White House after eight years of George W Bush’s presidency, remain divided over who they want to take on presumptive Republican nominee Senator John McCain in the 4 November general election, NBC said.

Spokesman says US HR Report on Vietnam false

HANOI, 14 March — The US State Department’s Human Rights Report 2007 was based on false and prejudiced information about Vietnam, local newspaper Vietnam News Friday quoted a spokesman of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry as saying.

It was regrettable that it had again failed to make objective observations about the real situation in the country, spokesman of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry Le Dung said.

Vietnam has made great strides in ensuring and developing freedom of its citizens and the achievements have been recognized and highly appreciated by international community, he said.

Vietnam respects the rights of all citizens to freedom and democracy, he said, noting that like other countries, it is unacceptable to exploit the rights to violate the law. Dung said it is normal that Vietnam and the United States have differences on human rights issues. He has called for an increased exchange and dialogue based on equality between the two countries without interfering in internal affairs of each other.—MNA/Xinhua

Cambodia rejects US human rights assessment

PHNOM PENH, 14 March — Cambodia has dismissed a US report on the country’s human rights record, saying that the annual report to the US Congress entirely contradicts the true reality in the country, the Cambodia Daily newspaper reported Friday.

The Cambodian Ministry of Foreign Affairs has issued a statement in response of the US report, saying “we have found that many of the accusations contained in this report do not even exist or are simply over exaggerated”.

“We certainly recognize that human rights in Cambodia are not perfect. But is there any perfect human rights situation anywhere in the world?” the statement said, adding that the report relied too heavily on the views of anti-government NGOs (Non-Government Organizations) and appeared timed to coincide with the national election. —MNA/Xinhua

US anti-war protesters chant “war criminal” at Rice

WASHINGTON, 13 March — Chanting “war criminal,” anti-war protesters waved blood-coloured hands at US Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice on Wednesday, but police held them back as she left a Capitol Hill hearing room.

Earlier, Republicans had complained about the distraction from the group as they held up signs saying “Condi Kills Kids” during the hearing on the State Department budget.

But the chairman of the House of Representatives committee, a New York Democrat declined to eject the protesters.

“We’re here in the United States of America. And as long as they don’t disrupt this proceeding and as long as they’re silent, they will be welcome,” said Representative Nita Lowey, who runs the subcommittee overseeing State Department appropriations.

“But they may not stand and they may not disrupt the proceedings.”

They demonstrators, between 15 and 20 members of the Code Pink organization often seen at congressional hearings on Iraq, included one woman who was arrested last autumn for waving blood-coloured hands in Rice’s face.

The protesters wore pink. T-shirts splattered with red, as well as pink scarves and pink artificial flowers braided into their hair. There were occasional outbursts from the group.

ASEAN scholars say China not a threat

BEIJING, 14 March — Scholars from the Association of the South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) said on Thursday that China was not a threat to its 10-member countries and appreciated China's foreign and defence policies.

"China threat is not really a hard, physical, reality-based assessment," said Bernard Loo, Nanyang Technological University assistant professor, at a dialogue between senior defence scholars from China and ASEAN countries that opened here on Wednesday.

"China has been much involved in the world economy and world globalization. If there would be a war, the process will be jeopardized. In that respect, I don't really think China is a threat to the region," said the Singaporean.

He said China's diplomacy had been a success, and the country was now prepared to deal with ASEAN as a whole, and continued to deal with individual countries on a bilateral basis.

Loo noted China ranked first in a survey in terms of trustworthiness in Southeast Asia. The country was becoming more confident and more countries felt more comfortable in dealing with it. — MNA/Xinhua

B'desh Govt terms US HR report disappointing

DHAKA, 14 March — Bangladesh Government Thursday termed the US State Department's human rights practices report-2007 on Bangladesh disappointing for its “lack of balance” in presenting the country's ground realities, private news agency UNB reported Thursday.

The state department report released in Washington Tuesday said the Bangladesh caretaker government's human rights record worsened, in part due to the state of emergency and postponement of elections.

Reacting to the report, Bangladeshi Foreign Ministry said Bangladesh is committed to upholding human rights of all its citizens in accordance with its constitutional obligations.

MNA/Xinhua

A spokesman for the ministry noted that all, including the international community, know the circumstances which led to the declaration of state of emergency early January 2007. “It is understood that during the State of Emergency, some fundamental rights remain suspended. However, the government is extremely careful in enforcing such provisions so that the fundamental rights are not infringed,” the spokesman said.

The spokesman also said that the government is disappointed at the report's lack of balance as it failed to mention the significant reform measures taken by the caretaker government for consolidating and sustaining democracy.

US soldiers accidentally kill Iraqi child

BAGHDAD, 14 March — US soldiers accidentally shot and killed a child on Wednesday in Iraq's Diyala Province, the US military said on Thursday.

The killing of Iraqi civilians has long put a strain on relations between Baghdad and Washington, who this week began talks on future relations and the presence of US troops after the current UN mandate expires at the end of this year.

The military said soldiers were operating in an area where roadside bombs had been found recently in ethnically and religiously mixed Diyala, one of four northern provinces where US and Iraqis have launched a series of operations this year.

The soldiers fired a warning shot into a sand berm after they found a “suspicious woman who appeared to be signalling to someone”.

The military said a young girl was found on the other side of the berm suffering from a gunshot wound. Soldiers treated the girl and called for emergency help but she died on the way to a military hospital. They said the incident was under investigation but no other details about the girl or the exact location were available.

Iraqis bury 10 after blast US says killed no one

BAGHDAD, 14 March — It was an incident that aptly summed up the fog of war in Iraq — relatives burying nine women and a child they said were victims of a bomb attack on a bus in which the US military said no one died.

In Iraq, acts of violence are almost always accompanied by multiple accounts from witnesses, police, health officials and US forces. But even by Iraqi standards Tuesday's attack on a bus full of mourners was a puzzle.

The US military said in a statement on Wednesday the bus was hit by an explosively formed penetrator, a particularly deadly type of roadside bomb normally used against US armoured vehicles. A nearby US convoy was also caught in the blast.

"Operational reports confirm one US soldier and one civilian were wounded in the convoy," the military said in a statement that came after a day of conflicting casualty reports.

A spokesman for British military forces in the nearby southern city of Basra, Major Tom Holloway, said he was still trying to work out the number of casualties after police initially reported 16 people being killed. —MNA/Reuters

Philippines Govt debt down 3.6% in 2007

MANILA, 14 March—The Philippines’ Government debt fell to 3.712 trillion pesos (90.31 billion US dollars) at the end of December 2007, down 3.6 per cent from the previous year, the country’s Bureau of Treasury said on Wednesday.

Total debt shrank 1.0 per cent from November, as the peso’s appreciation against the greenback helped trim debt by 46 billion pesos (1.12 billion dollars), the Bureau of Treasury said in a Press release, adding that the gain of other currencies against the dollar also brought down government debt by 13 billion pesos (316 million dollars).

Of the total outstanding debt, 1.511 trillion pesos (36.76 billion dollars), or 41 per cent, is owed to foreign creditors and 2.201 trillion pesos (53.55 billion dollars), or 59 per cent, to domestic creditors.

The peso gained nearly 19 per cent against the US dollar in 2007 to become Asia’s best performing currency, supported by strong foreign exchange inflows that included last year’s record 14.4 billion dollars in remittances from overseas Filipino workers.

The Philippine Government is aiming for a balanced budget this year following a decade of deficits that had led to a bloated public debt. The Philippines registered a budget deficit of 9.4 billion peso (about 230 million dollars) in 2007, the lowest in 10 years. —MNA/Xinhua

Tourists say London is dirty and expensive

LONDON, 14 March — London is the most expensive and dirtiest European city to visit, but is the best for parks and parties, a traveller survey said on Wednesday. Despite the British capital’s poor ranking for cleanliness and value for money, it is still the most favoured destination for travellers visiting Europe, TripAdvisor said.

Paris and Rome were also seen as costly and dirty.

London, though, had the best nightlife and was the second-most favoured place for shopping behind Paris, the survey said.

Paris, unsurprisingly, ranked as the most romantic with French cuisine regarded the best.

“It may be considered expensive but it seems that London’s still the best for travellers and the canny ones will always find good value,” said TripAdvisor spokesman Ian Rumgay.

Google wins EU approval to buy DoubleClick

BRUSSELS, 13 March—The Internet search engine giant Google won Tuesday approval from the European Union (EU) to buy US online advertising firm DoubleClick for 3.1 billion US dollars.

“The transaction would be unlikely to have harmful effects on consumers, either in ad serving or in intermediation in online advertising markets,” the European Commission, the EU’s antitrust watchdog, said in a statement after concluding an in-depth investigation into the deal. Google operates an Internet search engine that offers search capabilities for end users free of charge and provides online advertising space on its own websites. It also provides intermediation services to publishers and advertisers for the sale of online advertising space on partner websites through its network “AdSense”.

DoubleClick mainly sells ad serving, management and reporting technology worldwide to website publishers and to advertisers and agencies. Such technology allows Internet publishers and advertisers to ensure that advertisements are posted on the relevant websites and to report on the performance of such advertisements.

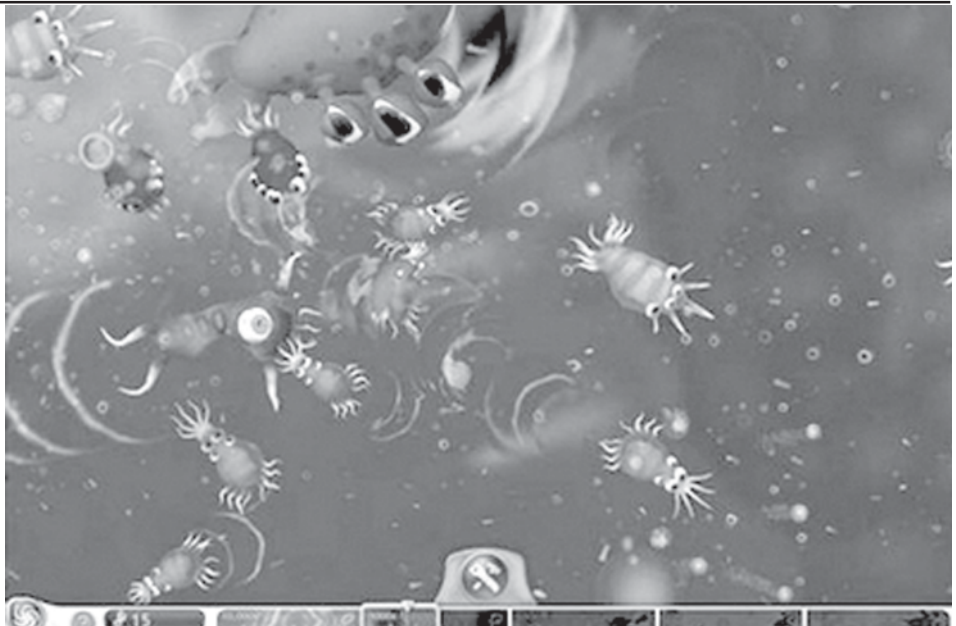

The Commission said its in-depth market investigation found that Google and DoubleClick were not exerting major competitive constraints on each other’s activities and could, therefore, not be considered as competitors at the moment. —MNA/Xinhua

If you really favour transition to democratic nation ...

Ketu Nilar

The government and the entire people are now working together to translate the State's seven-step Road Map into reality. In this regard, the Commission for Holding Referendum for Approval of Draft Constitution has been formed to undergo transition to democracy. In addition, Referendum Holding Law has been issued. Now, sub-commissions are being formed at division, district, township, ward and village levels that will carry out the tasks in accordance with the law.

However, internal and external anti-government groups, which are criticizing the government's endeavours with negative views, are instigating the people through the interview programmes, Myanmar and international affairs programme and live broadcast programmes of foreign radio stations of the colonialist bloc to oppose the draft of the State Constitution.

At the start of the National Convention, NLD representatives under the leadership of Chairman U Aung Shwe took part in the discussions. All the NLD representatives and representatives-elect attended the National Convention and participated in the proceedings till the 104 fundamental principles were laid down. The entire people warmly welcomed those good conditions. They were looking forward to the dawn of the nation's future democratic practice.

On 10 July 1995, the government lifted the restrictions on Daw Suu Kyi, who was said to have been expelled from NLD. The following day, Daw Suu Kyi held a press conference and asked which way the government would choose—a dialogue or utter devastation. She expressed her disagreement with the attendance of Chairman U Aung Shwe and party at the National Convention. On 22 November 1995, NLD with the negative attitude issued an announcement designed to attack the number of NC delegates and procedures laid down by the NC delegates including its representatives along with the discussions. Furthermore, it informed by letter that it would no longer attend the National Convention, thus diminishing the nation's democracy hopes.

Under the NLD Central Executive Committee's prior decisions and stances, the NLD representatives left the National Convention in compliance with the wish of Daw Suu Kyi, ex-General Secretary of NLD.

It became questionable whether NLD favoured democracy, and whether NLD was a pocket organization under the influence of a particular person.

Anyhow, the government resumed the National Convention, which had been adjourned temporarily, on 17 May 2007, giving priority to the interests of the nation, rather than that of a particular party. The government showed its magnanimity by inviting NLD to the National Convention. NLD accepted the invitation. Nevertheless, when the National Convention was drawing near, it replied that it would not attend the National Convention. The parties under the influence of NLD such as the Shan National League for Democracy and the Shan State Kokang Democratic Party also failed to attend the National Convention. In spite of NLD showing its unscrupulous motives, the government resumed the National Convention with 1086 delegates including representatives from other political parties, and representatives-elect. Now, the National Convention has been convened successfully, and the State Constitution has been drafted based on the fundamental principles and detailed basic principles the National Convention had adopted. The government has announced that the draft will be approved through a referendum due to be held in coming May, and multi-party democracy general elections, in 2010.

All the political parties and politicians are under the national duty of helping the nation stand firmly on the democratic trend that can serve the national interests. Democratic foundations are to be built in line with the fine traditions in the nation's geographical, economic and cultural fields. Today, it has become apparent that the process of directly copying alien democracy has been followed by several undesirable consequences such as the collapse of the nation, racial conflicts, terrorist acts, loss of innocent civilians, and unavoidable reliance on the assistance of neo-colonialists with incapability of improving the State's economy despite rich natural resources. Now, the entire people have realized that it is imprudent to directly copy the democracy that is not in conformity with the traditions of the motherland.

The draft of the State Constitution that is going to be approved with the unanimously by the entire people is intended to serve the interests of the

Now, saboteurs at home and abroad are resorting to various means to disrupt the upcoming referendum, and provoking the people into voting against the draft constitution if the processes of holding the referendum go on. Here, they should visualize what will happen if the people vote against the draft. Whatever it may be, the government will keep on shouldering the national duty on the basis of forthcoming situations, while carrying out nation-building duties.

State and national races, and it guarantees democratic rights of national races more than the previous ones.

Holding self-opinionated attitude, NLD indirectly failed to shoulder the national duty of drawing a constitution. Instead, it is putting all the blame on and making unjust accusations against the government. I do not think there are the acts of a prestigious party. Now, saboteurs at home and abroad inclusive of local members of NLD are resorting to various means to disrupt the upcoming referendum, and provoking the people into voting against the draft constitution if the processes of holding the referendum go on. Here, they should visualize what will happen if the people vote against the draft. Whatever it may be, the government will keep on shouldering the national duty on the basis of forthcoming situations, while carrying out nation-building duties.

An ex-anti-government group issued an announcement on 21 February 2008, saying that it welcomed Announcement No 1/2008 of the State Peace and Development Council; that through the announcement, the Tatmadaw government will appoint the public as the judge who will make decisions on the national affairs; that the groups in disguise of democracy forces that disregard the desire of the people, are unwilling to recognize the people's convictions, and that give major priorities to their self-interests are trying to devastate the referendum; and that it strongly denounced their attacks on Announcement No 1/2008 of the State Peace and Development Council as the attacks were tarnishing the role of the people.

The forthcoming democratic trend is going to serve the public interests. I would like to say that if the entire people really favour the emergence of a democratic nation, they have no other choice, but to participate in the process of building a discipline-flourishing democratic nation by approving the draft of the State Constitution at the forthcoming referendum.

Study finds aspirin use may prevent asthma

WASHINGTON, 14 March— People who take aspirin regularly can reduce their risk of asthma, US researchers reported on Wednesday.

They found women who took a small dose of aspirin—100 milligrammers every other day—were 10 per cent less likely to develop asthma over 10 years than women given placebos.

Writing in the journal Thorax, the researchers said their findings reinforce studies that show men who took aspirin daily were less likely to develop asthma, too.

“Although aspirin can worsen symptoms in some patients with asthma, our biologically plausible finding long with similar results from a large randomized trial in men and observational cohort studies in women suggests a small benefit of aspirin for the prevention of the development of asthma in adults,” wrote Dr. Tobias Kurth and colleagues of Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Medical School in Boston.

“However, before public recommendations are provided, results from randomized trials are needed that are specifically designed to test whether low-dose aspirin reduces the risk of asthma,” they added.—MNA/Reuters

Many UK schools breaking rules over fair admissions

LONDON, 13 March—Many state-funded schools are breaking the government's new code on fair admissions, with some asking parents to make a financial contribution before accepting an application, Schools Secretary Ed Balls said on Tuesday.

The code, which came into force in time for secondary school places granted last week, bans schools from selecting children on the basis of academic ability or social class.

Schools can no longer interview children or parents before admission and have to give priority to those in care.

But a survey of three local authorities in Northamptonshire, Manchester and Barnet in north London found a “significant minority” of schools were not complying.

Balls said he would tighten up regulations, requiring local authorities to report each year on the legality and fairness of admissions policy at each school in their area.

The code is currently largely policed by parents making objections where they feel admissions are unfair.

But Balls said that across England there had only been 79 objections from parents to the Schools Adjudicator, who has the power to order changes in the ways pupils are admitted.

Balls said he would publish a guide for parents on admissions and appeals, and extend the period during which objections could be made to the adjudicator.

Pakistan court dismisses graft case against Zardari

ISLAMABAD, 13 March — A Pakistani court dismissed one of two corruption cases against the widower of former prime minister Benazir Bhutto on Wednesday, his lawyer said, in a step towards clearing the way for him to hold government office. Bhutto's husband, Asif Ali Zardari, led her Pakistan People's Party (PPP) to election victory on February 18 and he is forming a coalition government with other parties.

Zardari's lawyer, Farooq Naik, said a court dismissed one of two outstanding cases against his client as it fell within the ambit of an October presidential ordinance that wiped out graft charges against Bhutto, Zardari and others, introduced as part of a power-sharing deal with Bhutto. “The judge ordered he stand acquitted and the case stand terminated and withdrawn,” Naik told reporters.

Naik said a court would rule on the the final case against Zardari on Friday. Zardari did not run in the February 18 vote, in which his party rode a wave of sympathy after Bhutto's murder on December 27. The party finished with the most seats but not enough to rule alone.

Pakistanis convicted of a crime are barred from standing for election and while Zardari has never been convicted, corruption cases have been hanging over him, raising doubts about his future.

Newer air bags not linked to more driver deaths

NEW YORK, 13 March—The use of second-generation air bags in motor vehicles does not appear to have increased fatalities among drivers involved in head-on crashes, study findings suggest.

“The point of second generation, or depowered, air bags was to reduce deaths among children, small adults, and vulnerable occupants who were previously killed by air bag deployment,” Dr Elisa R Braver noted in an interview with Reuters Health.

In 1997, when US air bag testing regulations were changed, there were concerns that depowering air bags might place drivers at increased risk, said Braver, of the National Study Centre for Trauma and EMS, at the University of Maryland School of Medicine in Baltimore.

To determine whether newer air bags placed drivers at increased risk, Braver and colleagues looked at driver fatalities in 1,572 two-vehicle, head-on collisions between passenger vehicles. “A head-on collision is a very demanding test of how restraint systems work,” Braver noted. — MNA/Reuters

FBI arrests US surgeon wanted in Australia

PORTLAND (Oregon), 13 March—A US surgeon wanted in Australia on charges of manslaughter, negligence and fraud was arrested in Oregon on Tuesday. Jayant Patel, who could face life in prison in Australia, appeared before a US federal magistrate who set the doctor's extradition hearing for 10 April. The FBI arrested Patel at his home in suburban Portland.

Patel was charged in Australia with three counts of manslaughter after an inquiry in late 2005 linked him to the deaths of at least 13 patients and the harm of at least 31 others while he was working as a surgeon at the Bundaberg Base Hospital in Queensland State.

Patel, a US citizen born in India, was also charged with three counts of causing grievous bodily harm, two counts of negligence and seven counts of fraud, according to court documents. Australian police began formal extradition proceedings in 2007.

According to court documents, Patel has a history of botched surgeries and negligent care going back two decades. Regulators in New York found Patel guilty of gross negligence in 1984 and then he moved to Oregon where he eventually had his surgical privileges restricted after a high number of complaints, the documents said. — MNA/Reuters

Australian wins Astrid Lindgren Memorial Award

STOCKHOLM, 14 March — Australian author Sonya Hartnett was Wednesday declared the 2008 winner of the Astrid Lindgren Memorial Award for Literature, the highest children's book award in the world. "Sonya Hartnett is one of the major forces for renewal in modern young adult fiction," a spokesman for the award jury said at a Press conference in the Swedish southern city of Vimmerby, where Astrid Lindgren lives.

"With psychological depth and a concealed yet palpable anger, she depicts the circumstances of young people without avoiding the darker sides of life. She does so with linguistic virtuosity and a brilliant narrative technique; her works are a source of strength," the jury said in a statement.

Sonya Hartnett, born 1968 in Melbourne, made her publishing debut at the age of just 15. She has written 18 novels for children, young people and adults, although she generally prefers not to specify which age group she is writing for.

Her world famous works include Sleeping

Dogs (1995), The Devil Latch (1996), All My Dangerous Friends (1998) and Surrender (2005).

The award, which includes a cash prize of five million kronor (800,000 US dollars), was established by the Swedish Government in 2002 in memory of Astrid Lindgren, the beloved Swedish children's writer whose Pippi Longstocking, a strong-willed girl with braided hair, freckles and mismatched stockings, captivated generations of children around the world. Lindgren died in 2002.

Study says drinking prevention needed in grade school

NEW YORK, 13 March — A significant number of children are already drinking by middle school, suggesting that prevention needs to start in the elementary grades, researchers conclude in a new report.

In their study of more than 4,000 sixth-graders at Chicago schools, 17 per cent of the children had used alcohol in the past year. Those students who had started drinking were also more likely than their peers to have a range of problems, such as getting into fights, shoplifting or getting into trouble at school.

The findings, reported in the journal Health Education and Behaviour, suggest that alcohol prevention needs to start in grade school, researchers say.

And such prevention efforts should include parents, according to lead researcher Dr Keryn Pasch, of the University of Minnesota School of Public Health in Minneapolis.

One way to do that, she told Reuters Health, would be for school-based programmes to include take-home assignments or other activities that involve parents.

The study included an ethnically diverse sample of sixth-graders at 61 Chicago schools; 713, or just over 17 per cent, said they had drunk alcohol in the past year.

Man arrested for running onto Heathrow runway

LONDON, 14 March — A man was arrested on Thursday after running onto a runway at London's Heathrow Airport carrying a bag, police said.

"I can confirm that at approximately 2:05 pm a man was seen airside at Heathrow Airport on the northern runway. He's been arrested by police and he's currently in custody," a police spokesman said. He declined to say whether the incident was considered terrorism-related. "A bag has been recovered and obviously it will be examined," he said.

BBC television pictures showed several emergency cars with flashing lights parked on the airport runway.

A spokesman for airport operator BAA, owned by Spanish company Ferrovial said he was aware of an incident and was checking details.

A spokesman for British Airways the largest user of the airport, said the incident would effect mostly short-haul flights.

"We expect to have to cancel a number of flights but at this stage we don't know how many," he said.

Heathrow, the world's busiest international airport, has been the object of protests in the past from environmentalists angered at plans to boost traffic with the addition of a third runway and a sixth terminal.

Cat carried woman's antibiotic-resistant infection

BOSTON, 14 March — Pets can harbour virulent antibiotic-resistant infections and spread them to humans, German researchers reported on Wednesday.

The warning is based on the case of a woman who had deep abscesses caused by methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus or MRSA. Her husband and two children showed evidence of infection, too, but it disappeared with treatment even as the woman's abscesses festered.

So Dr Andreas Sing of the Bavarian Food and Health Safety Authority and colleagues examined the woman's three apparently healthy cats.

Customs officials found 15 kilos of the drug strapped to the legs of the woman's daughter, aged 11, and son, 13, HM Revenue & Customs (HMRC) said.

Short-term stress can affect learning, memory

WASHINGTON, 13 March — Short-term stress lasting as little as a few hours can impair brain-cell communication in areas associated with learning and memory, University of California, Irvine researchers have found.

It has been known that severe stress lasting weeks or months can impair cell communication in the brain's learning and memory region, but this study provides the first evidence that short-term stress has the same effect. The study appears in the 12 March edition of the Journal of Neuroscience.

"Stress is a constant in our lives and cannot be avoided," said Dr Tallie Z Baram, the study leader.

"Our findings can play an important role in the current development of drugs that might prevent these undesirable effects and offer insights into why some people are forgetful or have difficulty retaining information during stressful situations."

In their study, Baram and her colleagues identified a novel process by which stress caused these effects. They found that rather than involving the widely known stress hormone cortisol, which circulates throughout the body, acute stress activated selective molecules called corticotropin releasing hormones (CRH), which disrupted the process by which the brain collects and stores memories.—MNA/Xinhua

Britain's FMD blamed on "shabby" lab

LONDON, 13 March — Shabby facilities and substandard practices at a government research centre were in part to blame for last year's outbreak of foot and mouth disease in southeast England, an independent review said on Tuesday.

Foot and mouth (FMD) disease was found at a farm in Surrey on 3 August and traced to the Pirbright research facility.

Pirbright houses a laboratory run by the Institute of Animal Health (IAH) and one by Merial, a private company owned by US pharmaceutical firm Merck and French firm Sanofi-Aventis SA.

The review released to parliament pointed to "a creeping degradation of standards at Pirbright, combined with a lowering of expectations in spite of the potential dangers".

Rangers, Sporting through to UEFA Cup last 8

LONDON, 14 March — Rangers and Sporting completed the UEFA Cup quarterfinal line up on Thursday, the Scottish league leaders knocking out Werder Bremen while the Lisbon side ended the run of Bolton Wanderers.

Werder, bidding to become the third German side into the last eight after Bayern Munich and Bayer Leverkusen qualified on Wednesday, could only win 1-0 at the Weserstadion and went out 2-1 on aggregate.

Sporting, beaten finalists in 2005, edged a weakened Bolton side 1-0 at home to secure the tie 2-1.

Bundesliga title challengers Werder forced 18 corners against Rangers, peppered their opponents's goal from all angles but found visiting keeper Allan McGregor in inspired form.

Benzema extends Lyon contract until 2013

LYON (France), 14 March — France striker Karim Benzema has extended his Olympique Lyon contract until 2013, the six-times French champions said on Thursday.

Benzema, 20, has scored 27 goals in all competitions this season, including 17 in Ligue 1, and has been linked with several leading European clubs including Manchester United.

His new contract includes an option for an additional year "(Financially), we did what we had to do to keep him in Lyon," club president Jean-Michel Aulas told a news conference.

"We did our best so that he does not go abroad. He deserves it."

Cuban team start with 10 men after defections

ORLANDO (Florida), 14 March — Cuba's Olympic soccer team took to the field with only 10 men on Thursday after up to seven players defected.

Five members of the Communist state's Under-23 team defected after their Olympic qualifier against the United States in Tampa on Tuesday and two others were absent from the line-up against Honduras on Thursday.

Both were reported to have defected.

With one player suspended following a red card, Cuba coach Raul Gonzalez could field only 10 men, with no substitutes.

Cuba held Honduras for 69 minutes before goals from Marvin Sanchez and Hendry Thomas condemned them to defeat.

"It was a great game for Cuba," said Gonzalez.

Bomb scare forces evacuation of US City Hall

LOS ANGELES, 13 March — A suspicious suitcase prompted the evacuation of Maywood City Hall and the city's police department headquarters in the Los Angeles area, authorities said on Wednesday.

The evacuation took place Tuesday night, but the sheriff's bomb squad blew the suitcase up early this morning, said Maywood police Chief Frank Hauptmann.

Investigators determined that the suitcase contained only clothing, Hauptmann said.

The suitcase — a large, '70s vintage-type piece of luggage — was standing upright and off to the side at the bottom of the stairwell in the city hall, Hauptmann said. There were chalk-like inscriptions on the exterior that "appeared to be graffiti", he said. "Everyone who passed by noticed it just sitting there," Hauptmann said. — MNA/Xinhua

Severe gales batter Britain for third day

CHELTEMHAM (England), 14 March — A third day of severe gales disrupted road and rail travel across the country and forced organizers to cancel day two of the Cheltenham horse racing festival on Wednesday.

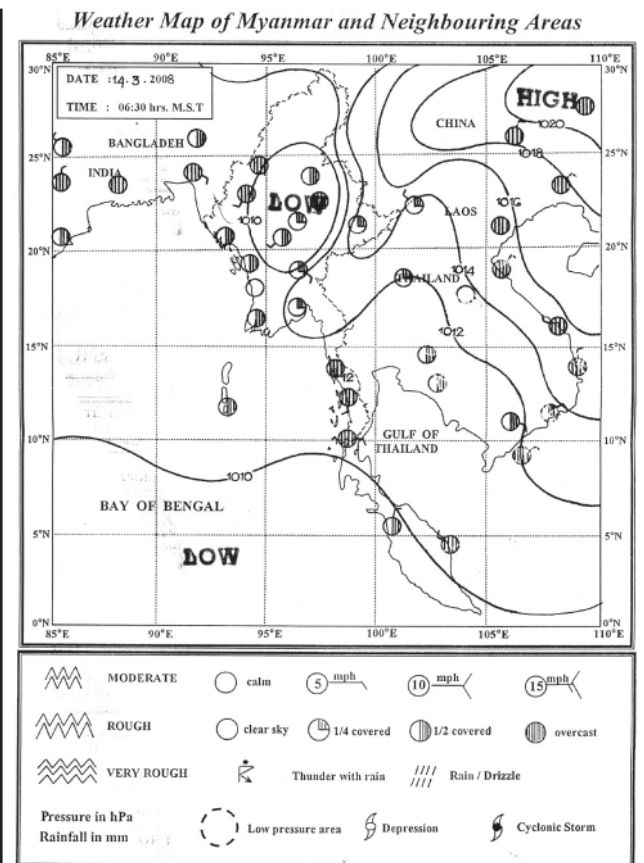

The Met Office issued severe weather warnings for much of central and northern England, north Wales and Northern Ireland and said conditions were "extremely hazardous".

Heavy rain, snow showers and wind gusting at up to 80 miles per hour swept across the country early on Wednesday.

The second day of racing at Cheltenham was called off after strong winds damaged temporary buildings, making the course unsafe for the 55,000 spectators due to watch the races.

"We cannot guarantee the safety of the customers but the good news is we can stage all the races now over the next two days," said Cheltenham Managing Director Edward Gillespie.

Several lorries overturned in the early hours on the Thelwall Viaduct on the M6 west of Manchester, police said. None of the drivers was injured. — MNA/Reuters

Iraq says to sue Halabja chemical weapons suppliers

BAGHDAD, 14 March — Iraq plans to take legal action against the suppliers of chemicals used in a poison gas attack on the town of Halabja in Iraq's Kurdish north, which killed 5,000 people in 1988, the government said on Wednesday.

Iraq's Cabinet also approved six million US dollars to finance construction in the town ahead of the 20th anniversary of the attack on March 16, it said in a statement.

"The Cabinet decided to take legal measures to sue the companies who provided the ex-regime with the chemical weapons used in Halabja," the statement said, without naming the companies.

In 2005, a Dutch court sentenced a Dutch businessman to 15 years in prison, later raised to 17 years, for supplying the raw materials for poison gas to Saddam Hussein's Iraq. The gas was used in Halabja, and also in Iraq's 1980-1988 war with Iran.
