It is just in conformity with the law

Myanmar is not the only country that promulgates the laws to prevent those who pose danger to the State. If necessary to guard the motherland and safeguard the lives and property of the people, every government has to promulgate laws and impose restrictions.

Discharge social functions of the people as national duty

Youth members of the Union Solidarity and Development Association with full nationalistic spirit have gone to storm-hit regions to help in reconstruction tasks in those areas in Ayeyawady Division in cooperation with the government, the people and the Tatmadaw.

At a time when the government is making concerted efforts for reconstruction tasks in the storm-affected areas, we will see active performance of younger generation of the USDA and their participation in the regional development tasks.

The USDA youths will stay with the storm victims as family members and help them with basic needs including education, health and social affairs.

In participating in the reconstruction tasks members of the USDA will not discharge their duties perfunctorily. They will be actively taking part in the tasks for improvement of socio-economic life of local people.

Based on goodwill, generosity and patriotism, the people from the length and breadth of the nation are donating goods and other supplies to the storm victims continuously.

Members of the USDA are serving the interest of the people and the nation in new nation-building tasks in various parts of the regions in the country under the correct leadership of the association.

The community welfare is the foundation of the social sector of the national affairs. We firmly believe that members of the USDA will undertake the welfare of the community dutifully as the national duty in accord with the basic principles on social affairs of the association.

In his latest letter to Roy Bostock, Yahoo's chairman, Icahn said that if Microsoft does not accept the offer "in a friendly and cooperative transaction", he would push the Internet company to do a deal with Google Inc if he wins control of the Yahoo board. Icahn, who is

Kyaw Ye Min

The government of a nation is responsible for safeguarding sovereignty and independence of the nation as well as for ensuring community peace and the rule of law. To be able to do so, it has to promulgate necessary laws. It has to take action against those who have violated the law. In the process, the law prescribes some sections, under which action is taken against the offenders only after they have committed crimes, and some sections are designed to prevent possible violation of the law.

In that regard, the government has to promulgate the law and take action against violators without any discrimination against or favour of any particular persons in the interests of the nation and the people. The government and the people are like the parents and their children. Sometimes, the parents have to prevent their children from doing something bad, and going to somewhere improper. They have to scold or punish their children after the latter have done something wrong.

Similarly, in taking measures for safeguarding the nation's sovereignty, and ensuring community peace and the rule of law, the government has to take action against the culprits only after they have violated the law. Sometimes, it has to take necessary measures to prevent possible committing of crimes. It is reasonable. Supposing, an organization or person is hatching a plot to harm severely the nation, will it be right to take action against the violator with profound evidences only after the organization or the person has violated the crime of being disloyal to the nation, regarding the serious case to be just as a normal crime? Such a case does not concern only a single citizen. It can pose a threat to the security of the State and the lives of the people. Does a thief have to be caught only after he has got into the house? Under some of the normal criminal laws, those who often commit crimes have to be restricted to be in a particular area or are banished, as necessary in order to prevent their possible violation of law. So, it is vividly clear that preventive measures need to be taken in the cases that concern the State and the entire people.

Our country has promulgated some laws to protect the State and the people. One of them is the 1975 Law to prevent those who pose danger to the State. Section (7) of the law says:

“The cabinet can restrict as necessary any of the fundamental rights of a citizen if reliable evidences are found out that the citizen committed, is committing or will commit something that can pose dangers to the sovereignty and security of the State, or community peace”.

Therefore, any such person will have to be punished in accordance with the law. The law is not intended to take action against a particular person. In this regard, the central body was formed to take action on behalf of the cabinet. Section 10 says if a citizen is believed to have harmed or to harm the sovereignty and security of the State, and community peace, the central body has the power:

- (a) to hold the culprit under detention for 180 days, without exceeding more than 60 days in one time,
- (b) to restrict the culprit for one year.

That is the power bestowed upon the central body. If need arises to continue to restrict the subject or to do so for more than the term, the approval of the cabinet shall be sought in advance. In this regard, the cabinet can give approval in advance to continue to restrict the subject or to do so for more than the term, for five years in a row without exceeding more than one year in one time.

Therefore, under the 1975 Law to prevent those who pose danger to the State, the central body has the power to restrict a citizen for one year, and if need arises, it can grant permission to continue to do so for five more years. That point is enumerated exactly in the law.

I have to explain the law in detail because these days, those from the anti-government groups who claim themselves to be legal experts are criticizing that the government's restrictions on certain persons are not in conformity with the law, and the restriction term is already up. The foreign radio stations that praise and air whatever such organizations and persons say are airing repeatedly the same subject.

In fact, in pursuance of the seven-step Road Map to build a discipline-flourishing democracy nation, the government is dealing with anti-government groups and persons with great patience in order to achieve national reconsolidation. At the press conferences, officials concerned had clarified many times that profound evidences, man and material, had been got that some parties and persons had committed the crimes for which the parties and persons could be dissolved or sentenced to long prison terms. However, the government is dealing with those cases with great patience in order to regain national reconsolidation.

Actually, the persons on whom the government has placed restrictions received at home and were corresponding with insurgents who are engaged in armed insurgency against the government, and were posing great threats to the national security, receiving cash and kind from insurgent groups and foreign governments. Due to the crimes they have committed, they well deserve flogging punishment as in the case of naughty children. However, the government that is like the parent of the people has to issue restriction order in order that they will not be in a position to commit similar crimes again.

Myanmar is not the only country that promulgates the laws to prevent those who pose danger to the State. If necessary to guard the motherland and safeguard the lives and property of the people, every government has to promulgate laws and impose restrictions.

In Malaysia, for example, National Security Law has been promulgated. Under the law, the police has the power to place a person who harmed or is believed to harm the security and interest of Malaysia under custody for 60 days without putting him on trial. When the period of 60 days elapses, he can still be detained for two years with the approval of the minister of home affairs. If necessary to continue to do so, the minister can renew the restriction without exceeding two years in one time.

Singapore promulgates similar law. Like the law of Malaysia, under the law of Singapore, a two-year restriction can be placed, and the restriction can be renewed without exceeding two years in one time. In Singapore, Chia Thye Poh of Barisan Sosialis, a political organization, was detained for 32 years under the law.

In the aftermath of the September 11 attack, even the US, that respects the individual rights, promulgated Patriot Act in order to protect the nation from possible terrorist attacks. According to the Act, the organizations responsible for restoration of the rule of law have the power to tap telephone conversations, to get secretly biographies and bank accounts of the citizens without warrant of the court, and to exile the offenders, and detain them without time limits. It is, indeed, restriction on the individual rights. However, the US Congress and citizens accepted the law because the law is designed to serve the interests of the nation and the people. In like manner, after the September 11 attack, Britain, democracy pioneer, promulgated Anti-Terror Law, and vested the police with many powers including the power to detain the suspects for long without putting them on trial in order to take punitive action against not only terrorists but also relevant persons and accomplices.

As a matter of fact, every country has to take action as necessary if its security comes under threats. In the process, it sometimes has to unavoidably impose restrictions on the rights of a citizen in the interests of the nation and the people. Likewise, the remaining countries promulgate necessary laws to safeguard the national security according to the situations and dangers posed to the nation concerned. They respect privacy and rights, but they will not remain indifferent of someone who is posing and trying to pose threats to the nation and the people.

In our country, certain parties and persons under the pretext of democracy and human rights resorted to and are resorting to various means to make the motherland lose sovereignty and independence and undermine the stability and the rule of law. The government is dealing with those cases with great care. As mentioned above, the government has showed great patience in dealing with the cases for which it can take punitive action, and just imposed minimum restrictions. It is very clear in doing so that it took action in the framework of the law.

Certain organizations and persons did violate the law, but they claim that the restrictions are unfair and are not in line with the law when action was taken against them. They should consider to find out whether their acts are logical. Very simply, if they do not want action to be taken or to be placed under restrictions, they should serve the interests of the nation and the people in the framework of the law or in accordance with the saying “It is safe to live in the framework of the law”.

Translation: MS

NAY PYI TAW, 10 June — National Disaster Preparedness Central Committee released an announcement on 15 May and said anyone may inform if he witnesses or knows the cash assistance and relief supplies donated to the storm victims are kept for self-interest, traded, used for particular persons and organizations, or misappropriated for other purposes.

The committee announced that it has made all necessary arrangements to look into the cases to expose the offenders and take punitive action against them in accordance with the law.

However, some donors in foreign countries directly sent cash and kind for storm victims to some people and organizations at home. Some organizations and people at home have not sent all those cash and relief aids to storm victims and used for self-interest.

Therefore, authorities concerned have invited complaints from the people about malpractices.

Guiding principles to be followed by UN agencies, inter-governmental organizations, INGOs, and NGOs in carrying out aid and assistance activities for cyclone victims briefed YANGON, 10 June—The Briefing on Guiding Principles to be followed by UN agencies, inter-governmental organizations, INGOs and NGOs in carrying out aid and assistance activities for cyclone victims took place at the Archives Department of the Ministry of National Planning and Economic Development, here, this afternoon.

It was attended by Minister for National Planning and Economic Development U Soe Tha, Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement Maj-Gen Maung Maung Swe, Minister for Health Dr Kyaw Myint, departmental officials, invited resident representatives and officials of UN agencies, and officials of INGOs and NGOs, totaling 94.

Minister U Soe Tha in his speech said that the Minister U Soe Tha briefs on guiding principles to be followed by UN agencies, INGOs and NGOs. —MNA purpose was to brief UN agencies, INGOs and NGOs on work programme and aid and assistance being rendered by the international organizations and the guiding principles to be followed in carrying out aid and assistance activities for the cyclone victims.

Some responsible person who attended the briefing held on 18 May discussed the submission of detailed information about relief supplies and the importance of coordination mechanism for distribution. However, that could not be materialized yet.

Unsystematic distributions might lead towards duplication. Uncoordinated activities should not take place in aid and assistance rendered to cyclone victims.

Only when complete compilation of data and statistics of relief supplies from donor countries and organizations was available, would it be possible to record the donor countries and the relief aid. So, it was needed to send detailed lists of relief supplies.

It was vital that victims received much-needed supplies. The nation did not accept any situations in which victims sold unusual supplies because it could tarnish the image of the country.

Respective township coordination committees had been formed under the Guidelines for Cooperation Programme with UN agencies, INGOs and NGOs in Myanmar.

One minister each had been assigned duties to supervise relief and resettlement works in the storm-hit townships.

The works were to be carried out in collaboration with respective ministry and the Tripartite Core Group (TCG).

Some organizations were spreading groundless information such as there was or would be shortage of rice in Myanmar.

The rice output in the storm-affected areas in Ayeyawady and Yangon divisions made up only 2.3 per cent of the nation's total rice output. The uncultivable acreage is barely 1 per cent of that of the whole nation, he said.

In conclusion, he urged the UN agencies, INGOs and NGOs to follow the guiding principles.

The minister answered the queries raised by the attendees.

Israelis round on DPM’s “political” Iran threat

JERUSALEM, 10 June —Israeli defence officials and political pundits rounded on Deputy Prime Minister Shaul Mofaz on Sunday after he threatened attacks against Iran, accusing him of exploiting war jitters to advance his personal ambitions.

Mofaz, a former Armed Forces chief and likely challenger to the Prime Minister Ehud Olmert in their Kadima Party, said in a newspaper interview last week that Israeli strikes on Iran looked “unavoidable” given progress in its nuclear plans.

The remarks helped drive up oil prices by nearly 9 per cent to a record 139 US dollars a barrel on Friday and drew a circumspect response from Washington, which has championed UN sanctions against Iran and only hinted force could also be a last resort.

While the White House suggested Mofaz was giving voice to the Jewish state’s fear of the Islamic republic, officials in Israel’s Defence Ministry pointed to a power-struggle roiling centrist Kadima as Olmert tries to beat off a bribery scandal.

“Turning one of the most strategic security issues into a political game, using it for the internal purposes of a would-be campaign in Kadima, is something that must not be done,” Deputy Defence Minister Matan Vilnai told Israel Radio.

Afghan reporter for BBC killed in Helmand

LASHKAR GAH (Afghanistan), 10 June—An Afghan reporter working for BBC radio has been killed in the southern province of Helmand, Afghan officials said on Sunday.

Abdol Samad Rohani, who worked for BBC radio, reported on a drug-burning ceremony at the airport in Lashkar Gah, Helmand’s provincial capital, on Saturday morning, then after lunch left home without saying where he was going, local reporters said.

His body was found on Sunday. Local officials said he had been abducted and killed.

Helmand is one of the most violent provinces in Afghanistan and alone produces nearly half the world’s opium, which is refined to make heroin.

Afghan security forces backed by mainly British troops hold a string of towns along the Helmand River that feeds a fertile strip cutting through the desert, but Taleban insurgents are still active throughout the area.

A Taleban spokesman denied any involvement in the killing.

Rohani had worked alongside the BBC’s Kabul correspondent and was the Helmand reporter for the Pashto language service of the BBC World Service.—MNA/Reuters

Soldier killed by blast in S-E Turkey

ANKARA, 10 June—One soldier of the Turkish security forces was killed and four others injured by a blast in southeastern Turkey, the semi-official Anatolia news agency reported Monday.

A land-mine planted by militants of the banned Kurdish Workers’ Party (PKK) went off in the mountainous area in Semdinli town of southeastern Hakkari Province, the report said.

In another incident, two PKK members were killed in clashes with Turkish security forces in eastern province of Tunceli, added the report.

The PKK, listed by the United States and Turkey as a terrorist group, took up arms against Turkey in 1984 with the aim of creating an ethnic homeland in the southeast. More than 30,000 people have been killed in the over-two-decade conflict.

Guideline would boost cholesterol drug use

NEW YORK, 10 June — The number of US adults on cholesterol-lowering medication could rise by one-quarter to one-half if doctors were to routinely scan adults' arteries for plaque buildup, a study suggests.

In 2006, a group of prominent cardiologists, dubbed the SHAPE Task Force, drew up recommendations for a new way to assess middle-aged and older adults' heart attack risk.

Instead of looking only at standard risk factors — like smoking and high blood pressure — doctors, the task force said, should routinely use CT scans to look for calcium deposits in the coronary arteries.

Calcium is a component of the artery-clogging "plaques" that can eventually trigger a heart attack. Studies show that a person's calcium score, determined via CT scan, is predictive of his or her odds of suffering a heart attack.

The SHAPE group recommended that most men ages 45 to 75 and most women ages 55 to 75 have a CT scan to help predict their heart risks. The results would also help determine whether they need to start on a statin drug to better control their "bad" LDL cholesterol.

Yale in biggest expansion in nearly four decades

BOSTON, 10 June — Yale University unveiled its biggest expansion in nearly four decades on Saturday, with plans to build two new residential colleges that would raise undergraduate enrollment by 15 per cent.

The new colleges at the Ivy League school in New Haven, Connecticut, would open in 2013 and increase enrollment to about 6,000 students, President Richard Levin said in a letter to alumni posted on Yale's website.

The last significant increase in the student body came with the admission of women in 1969, he said.

Undergraduate enrollment has fluctuated between 5,150 and 5,350 in recent years.

Indonesia gets no refund from OPEC

JAKARTA, 10 June — Indonesia will not get a refund from the 9 million US dollars it has invested in the Organization of Petroleum-Exporting Countries (OPEC) although the country plans to quit membership very soon, an official said Monday.

"We cannot draw the money unless the OPEC Fund is dismissed," Indonesia's representative in OPEC Maizar Rahman was quoted by leading news website Detikcom as saying.

By keeping the money in the OPEC Fund, Indonesia can maintain close contacts with OPEC members, he said.

Maizar said the country will officially pull out of the carter early in 2009, as it has paid the annual membership fee for 2008.

Dutch light up Euro tournament

VIENNA, 10 June — The Netherlands lit up Euro 2008 on Monday with a landmark performance to stun world champions Italy 3-0 while their wonderful fans delivered an example of colorful, noisy but peaceful support.

It was the Netherlands' first win over the Italians in nine attempts spanning 30 years — their last success coming in the 1978 World Cup — and Italy's worst-ever defeat in a European Championship.

It also put the Dutch in early control of the fearsome Group C after France were earlier held to a 0-0 draw by unfancied Romania in a dire game in Zurich.

"I'm happy and proud but it is only a first step," said Dutch coach Marco van Basten, a winner of the championship in 1988 as a player, in a news conference.

The Italian team could only apologize and promise to lift their game. "On behalf of my team mates, I feel I must apologize to all the fans; they, like us, did not expect this result," Italy skipper and goalkeeper Gianluigi Buffon told Italian TV.

On Sunday, there had been 157 arrests of mainly German fans after aggressive exchanges with their Polish counterparts in Klagenfurt but up to 40,000 Dutch, clad in their traditional orange attire, swarmed all over Berne without a hint of trouble.

After a day of drinking and singing in the Swiss capital, Dutch spirits were further lifted once the game got underway.—Internet

Man City hopeful of landing Ronaldinho and Jo

LONDON, 10 June — English Premier League club Manchester City say they are hopeful Brazilian striker Ronaldinho will be playing for them next season.

The club are also confident of securing a deal for CSKA Moscow's Brazilian striker Jo in the coming week. Speaking on BBC Radio on Sunday, the club's chairman Garry Cook said Barcelona had given City clearance to talk to Ronaldinho over a switch to England.

"It's at a tenuous stage and I don't want to give too much away," Cook said. "We had some people in Brazil this weekend, who we've been talking to, but we have a long, long list of things we need to get done because of the type of player he is — the world's greatest player.

"We are nowhere near completing (a deal) but Ronaldinho wants to show that he is one of the greatest footballers in the world. The Manchester City fans would love to see him kick off the new season with us and I am holding out hope on that happening."

Cook said negotiations for Jo were much further advanced.

"I think we will be taking care of that one pretty quickly. It might be within the next seven days, sooner if possible," he said. — MNA/Reuters

Over 230,000 foreign fans pour in Austria, Switzerland

VIENNA, 10 June — More than 230,000 foreign football fans poured in hosts Austria and Switzerland for the 2008 European football championship on the first day of the 24-day tournament, organizers announced on Sunday.

The figure has created a new record for the trans-Europe football gala. However, the organizing committee of the tournament said 29 football fans have been arrested by Austrian police for their wrongdoings.

The organizers noted that on the whole the fans behaved very friendly. "We are satisfied with the situation on the first day," said Wolfgang Eichler, a spokesman with Austria's organizing committee. — MNA/Xinhua

Russia call up Ivanov to replace injured Pogrebnyak

BASEL, 10 June — Russia have replaced injured striker Pavel Pogrebnyak with uncapped midfielder Oleg Ivanov in their Euro 2008 squad, tournament organizers UEFA said on Sunday.

Pogrebnyak pulled out of the championship on Saturday with a knee injury he picked up shortly after scoring in a warm-up match against Serbia on May 28.

The 21-year-old Ivanov, who plays for Russian club Krylya Sovietov Samara, featured in coach Guus Hiddink's provisional squad for the tournament.

Russia's forward options for their Group D opener against Spain on Tuesday were already limited before Pogrebnyak's injury because playmaker Andrei Arshavin is suspended for the first two matches.

The other teams in the group are Sweden and European champions Greece. — MNA/Reuters
