Building social and economic infrastructures day in, day out

Smooth transportation plays a major role in the drive for national development. So, the government is expediting the building of social and economic infrastructures day in, day out such as village-to-village roads, highways, and river or creek-spanning bridges, extension of railroads, expansion of port development work, and upgrading of airports. It is not only for ensuring national development but also for building social infrastructures to cement amicable relations among the national races of the Union.

SPECIAL FEATURES TO HAIL 61st ANNIVERSARY INDEPENDENCE DAY

Article

Taste and variety of fruits of independence

An independent and sovereign nation can stand tall with the image of character of a nation in the global community. A nation can lose its independence or sovereignty if it faces disintegration of national unity or alien invasion, and the people betray their motherland for their self-interest or fail to respect independence. Independence by nature can be lost easily once in a while, but it takes very long, it is very hard and a large number of lives will be sacrificed to regain the independence. So, I say independence is the most indispensable and essential asset of a nation.

Regenerate economy of storm-ravaged areas

Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council Senior General Than Shwe toured Mawlamyinegyun of Ayeyawady Division on 28 December to inspect township-wise rehabilitation and reconstruction tasks in the storm-affected areas in Ayeyawady Division.

The division is rich in natural resources, so the region has to take full advantage of abundant natural resources to regenerate its economy.

It was said previously that construction of roads and bridges in Ayeyawady Division was virtually impossible and was just a dream. By contrast, now the region has seen many new bridges spanning rivers and creeks and roads as a result of the efforts of the government, thus enjoying progress in trade, education and health sectors and that is a dream come true.

In his guidance, the Head of State stressed the need of innovation for effective utilization of land resources, restoration of economic enterprises and measures for better transport.

The government has provided a great deal of assistance for development of agricultural farming and fishing, and it will continue to render necessary assistance in that case. Local people on their part have to work hard together for economic development and helping urban and rural areas possess due characteristics.

Moreover, it is required to set up some associations to conduct courses designed to disseminate methods on healthy lifestyle and diet for ensuring longevity of rural folks and sanitation work and agricultural methods along with vocational training for rural development.

Local people are to join hands with the government in rehabilitation and reconstruction tasks for helping storm-hit areas enjoy economic development with all characteristics of a town or a village.

A look at violence numbers in Afghanistan in 2008

KABUL, 1 Jan—The following are estimates of violent deaths in Afghanistan in 2008 compiled by The Associated Press based on figures from Western and Afghan officials. The count is not definitive and relies heavily on official statements.

Afghan officials are known to exaggerate Taleban deaths, for instance, and NATO's International Security Assistance Force does not release figures of militants it kills.

US FORCES: A record 151 died in 2008, in part because more forces are in the country and have moved into new regions, but also because roadside bombs have become deadlier and militant attacks more sophisticated. In 2007, 111 US forces died.

AFGHAN POLICE: At least 850 were killed this year. Some 925 died in 2007. Police have less training and weapons than Afghan soldiers and bear the brunt of militant attacks.

CIVILIANS: Overall at least 1,160 civilians were killed in insurgency related violence. US or NATO troops killed about 370 civilians, while Taleban or other militants killed 770. In 2007, the AP count showed 875 civilians died, including 360 by US or NATO action and 485 from Taleban or other militant action.

MILITANTS: At least 3,800 militants died on the battlefield in 2008, an estimate that is likely quite low because NATO does not release battle death estimates. Last year AP recorded 4,500 militant deaths, but a NATO official later said the alliance estimated close to 7,000 had been killed.

OVERALL: In 2008, AP recorded the deaths of 6,340 people in Afghanistan from insurgency-related violence, slightly less than the 6,533 AP recorded in 2007. Insurgency-related violence includes battlefield deaths, military operations such as airstrikes, and Taleban attacks such as suicide or roadside bombings.— Internet

Eight people killed, 57 injured in N Iraq violence

MOSUL, 1 Jan—Bomb attacks and gunfire killed eight people and wounded 57 others in Iraq's northern province of Nineveh on Wednesday, a provincial police source said.

The powerful blast destroyed several nearby shops, stalls and civilian cars, the source said.

In northern Mosul, two people were killed and 12 others wounded when two roadside bomb went off coordinately at a residential area, the source added.

US hands over Green Zone in Baghdad as Iraq takes control

BAGHDAD, 1 Jan—Control of Baghdad's fortified green zone, a symbol of the US-led occupation of Iraq, will pass to Iraqi hands today in one of many transfers of power taking place as the country regains its sovereignty almost six years after the invasion. The keys to Saddam Hussein's Republican Palace, which served as the US Embassy, will also be given back to Iraq's increasingly assertive Government. In addition, US commanders returned control of a swath of Iraqi airspace at midnight and British Forces are due to hand back Basra airport in the south. Some Iraqis welcome the long-awaited transition but others fear that little will alter on the ground, with US forces scheduled to be in Iraq for another three years and the green zone remaining a walled-off compound.

Major-General Mohammed al-Askari, the Iraqi Defence Ministry spokesman, said that 1 January was an important day, marking the moment that US and British troops in Iraq come under Iraqi government authority after the expiry yesterday of a UN Security Council resolution that has legitimised their presence since 2003.

Saudi FM criticizes Palestinians

CAIRO, 1 Jan—Saudi Arabia’s foreign minister on Wednesday blamed Palestinian divisions for Israel’s onslaught on Gaza, a reflection of US-allied Arab governments’ anger at the Hamas militant group.

Saud al-Faisal made the comments at an emergency meeting of Arab foreign ministers in the Egyptian capital, convened to try to put together a joint response by the deeply divided Arab nations to the Israeli offensive, which has killed more than 370 Palestinians and sparked outrage

China, Vietnam issue joint statement on border issues

HANOI, 1 Jan—China and Vietnam have completed the work of land border demarcation and erecting land border markers along the entire length of their land borders, according to a joint statement Wednesday.

The joint statement was issued during talks between heads of the government delegations of China and Vietnam on border issues between the two countries held on 28-31 Dec.

China and Vietnam exchanged views on solving all remaining problems on land border demarcation and erecting land border markers between the two countries and reached agreement in accordance with the 1999 China-Vietnam land boundary treaty, taking into consideration the fundamental interests of the two peoples with the development of traditional bilateral friendly ties as the starting point, the statement said.

The outcome is achieved under the direct care and direction of leaders of the two countries. It is also the result of concerted efforts of government delegations of the two countries, experts, relevant departments and provinces along the borders, it added.

The completion of the land border demarcation along the entire length of China-Vietnam land border is a major event of historical significance in their relations.

Russia to stop gas exports to Ukraine

MOSCOW, 1 Jan—Russia will suspend gas supplies to Ukraine on Thursday morning, Russia’s state gas monopoly Gazprom Chief Executive Alexei Miller said on Wednesday.

Talks on natural gas exports from Russia to Ukraine in 2009 “ended fruitlessly” and Gazprom will completely cut off gas supplies to Ukraine at 10:00 Moscow time (0700 GMT) on 1 Jan, Miller said.

“The Ukrainian side will bear all responsibility for the situation,” he was quoted by Interfax news agency as saying. However, Miller said Gazprom will do its best to make sure European consumers receive their gas on time.

Gazprom says Ukraine owes over 2 billion US dollars for gas it imported. While Ukraine said it had transferred 1.5 billion dollars to an account to cover its debt, Miller said Gazprom has never seen on its accounts the money Ukraine paid.

Gazprom had insisted that Ukraine pay 418 US dollars per 1,000 cubic metres of gas next year, more than double what it paid in 2008. The Russian energy giant on Wednesday offered to charge Ukraine a reduced price of 250 dollars, which Ukrainian officials said was still too high.

Israel sends more troops to Gaza border

GAZA CITY, 1 Jan—Israel sent more troops to the Gaza border Wednesday, rapidly moving forward with preparations for a possible ground offensive as the next stage of its military assault on the coastal territory’s Hamas rulers.

Israel rebuffed calls by world leaders for a truce, and Hamas also was cold to a cease-fire.

Instead, both intensified their fire. Israel bombed a mosque that it said was used to store rockets as well as vital smuggling tunnels along the Egyptian border, and the Islamic militants hammered southern Israeli cities with about 60 rockets.

Israeli troops trudged between dozens of tanks in muddy, rain-sodden fields outside Gaza, assembling equipment, cleaning weapons and scrubbing out tank barrels. Their commanders moved forward with preparations for a ground operation, said an Israeli defence official who spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitive nature of the information.—Internet

N Korea vows to strengthen its military

SEOUL, 1 Jan—North Korea ushered in 2009 with an appeal Thursday to unite around leader Kim Jong Il and bolster the country’s military, while reaffirming its commitment to denuclearization and breaking with tradition by not criticizing the US.

North Korea traditionally marks New Year’s Day with a joint editorial by the country’s three major state-run newspapers representing its communist party, military and youth militia force. Outside observers pore over the statement for insight on the reclusive country’s policy direction.

This year’s message accused South Korea of an “anachronistic confrontation policy” and stressed the need to strengthen the country’s 1.2 million-member military — the backbone of Kim’s totalitarian rule.—Internet

Sri Lanka troops seize key rebel town

COLOMBO, 1 Jan—Sri Lankan troops on Thursday captured a key town from Tamil Tiger rebels in the island’s north after intense clashes that left at least 50 guerrillas dead, the defence ministry said.

The fall of Paranthan, near the Tigers’ political capital Kilinochchi, has effectively cut off the rebels’ main supply line to several other strongholds, the ministry said in a statement.

At least 50 Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) rebels have been killed and twice as many wounded in heavy fighting since on Tuesday, it added.

The ministry did not say if security forces suffered any casualties.

“Unable to withstand the fury of the combined army and air force onslaught, LTTE terrorists withdrew from the town in total disarray,” the ministry said.

Gunman wounds two Israelis in Denmark mall shooting

COPENHAGEN, 1 Jan— A gunman shot and wounded two Israelis working at a packed central Denmark shopping mall Wednesday, police said.

Police spokesman Lars Thede said it was not immediately clear whether the Israelis were targeted because of their nationality. A video surveillance camera showed a swarthy man with a dark mustache and dark hair in his mid-20s pulling out a gun before opening fire. “We cannot say whether he is Palestinian, Iraqi, Iranian or Bosnian, or where he is from,” Thede said.

“It is too early to say whether this has something to do with what happens elsewhere,” he said, referring to an Israeli offensive under way against Gaza’s Hamas rulers in retaliation for rocket fire. The strikes have killed some 390 people so far.

Poul Bjoernhold Loehde, head of the police in Odense, said the Danish Security and Intelligence Service had been informed of the shooting.

“Because of the present world situation, we have contacted them. To us, it is an ordinary criminal case,” Bjoernhold Loehde told The Associated Press.

No one at the agency was available for comment.

The two wounded men are Israelis in their 20s, Thede said. One of the wounded was shot in the arm and the other in the leg, police said. The wounds are not life threatening, police said. The shooting took place at the Rosengard mall in Odense, 170 kilometres (105 miles) west of Copenhagen. It occurred around 3.30 pm (1430 GMT), when the mall was filled with people doing last-minute shopping before the New Year’s break.—Internet

Detective finds stolen gun in toilet by accident

Authorities said a stolen gun was recovered when a detective tried to used the suspect’s bathroom and couldn’t get the toilet to work. A detective investigating the theft of a handgun, jewelry and cash from a Jensen Beach home was told a possible suspect might be staying at a Port St Lucie hotel.

The detective met with a 21-year-old suspect and during an interview, the detective asked to use the man’s bathroom.

When the detective couldn’t get the toilet to flush, he took off the tank cover to see what the problem was. That’s when he found the handgun and three magazines with bullets.

The man was charged last Monday with grand theft and grand theft of a firearm.

Thieves yank ATM machine away from California store

Police said Friday that thieves used a pickup truck to force open a large roll-up door of a warehouse store in California and yank away an ATM machine.

The theft occurred at a Costco store in Carlsbad, more than 100km south of Los Angeles, before police were called to the scene around 3:40 am by a security company, according to Carlsbad police officer Matt Magro.

Store managers told police that a vehicle was driven into the roll-up door near the store entrance and the ATM machine with an undetermined amount of cash was missing.

Four thieves in black hooded sweatshirts used an early 1990s white Chevrolet pickup to force open the door, and left behind a portion of the truck’s bumper in the process, Magro said.

Reports of thefts, robberies and other crimes have been on the rise in recent months in many US cities as the economic recession was deteriorating across the country with unemployment rates at multi-year record high.

Bad recycling: pay stub used as bank robbery note

A pay stub with a threatening note on it in a Chicago bank robbery made it easy for investigators to solve the case.

An FBI affidavit said a man walked into a Fifth Third Bank on Friday and handed a teller a note that read “Be Quick Be Quit (sic). Give your cash or I’ll shoot.”

The robber got about 400 dollars but left half of his note with the teller. Investigators found the other half outside the bank’s front doors, thus to make out the man’s name and address by a whole.

The suspect was arrested at his home. A judge ordered him held without bond Monday. If convicted of bank robbery, he faces 20 years in prison.

*Tekkatho Myat ThuWard off colonialist tricks with patriotism

Independence is the most crucial and priceless asset for a nation, without which it cannot stand on its own feet. Independence means a nation has sovereignty; its people have the rights to exercise the sovereignty as they wish; they own the entire territory of their nation (including territorial waters and air space), natural resources, all the harvested agricultural produce, all goods produced by the factories and mills of the nation; they have the rights to lay down and practise the most appropriate policies in the interests of the nation and the entire people; and the nation is an independent one that is not owned or controlled by any other country.

An independent and sovereign nation can stand tall with the image of character of a nation in the global community. A nation can lose its independence or sovereignty if it faces disintegration of national unity or alien invasion, and the people betray their motherland for their self-interest or fail to respect independence. Independence by nature can be lost easily once in a while, but it takes very long, it is very hard and it has to sacrifice a large number of lives to regain the independence. So, I say independence is the most indispensable and essential asset of a nation.

The global family is made up of more than 200 countries. After the industrial revolution, the western hemisphere saw mushrooming factories, and world people were happy with the results, regarding that as progress of human beings because factory products were much better than manually-produced products not only in quality but also in quantity. In that regard, however, an adverse effect was that proprietors of the factories in the western hemisphere became covetous enough to colonize other countries while in search of raw materials needed for their factories. Then they were overwhelmed by the taste of colonizing other countries as they could exploit and take natural resources at will (without paying for them) from hundreds of their colonies. Colonials had advantages of modern weapons; however the peoples of the colonies had advantages of nationalistic vigour, bravery and patriotic spirit. So, they came to launch independence struggles to rise against the colonialists.

The World War II broke out due to a rivalry for colonies between the three new industrial countries (Germany, Italy and Japan) and three old colonial countries (the USA, England and France). When the wars between them were raging, national liberation struggles of the colonies intensified. After the World War II, more than 100 colonies regained independence. Myanmar was one of the colonies that achieved independence, sacrificing a large number of lives.

The poverty of colonies due to colonials' exploitation was further exacerbated by the evil consequences of the World War II. However, they tried to return to normal, exerting the advantages of independence and natural resources. Myanmar had to give up its parts one after another in the three aggressive wars waged by the colonialists from 1824 to 1885. Then, it lost independence. Myanmar people were under a variety of oppression till the nation regained independence on 4 January 1948. During the period, a lot of natural resources, crops and manual and industrial products went to the treasury of the British colonials. Myanmar people were cruelly and unfairly treated in various areas, and their whole life was a constant battle against poverty.

Irrespective of size and population, an independent nation has the right to cast one vote in the United Nations. The UN Charter prescribes mutual respect for equality and sovereignty, the right of every State to lead its national existence free from external invasion and interference, and the right of self-determination.

The Russian Federation is larger than any other country in the world. It covers 11 of the 24 hour zones of the world. It has an area of more than 17 million square kilometres, and a population of more than 140 million. Canada has an area of over 9.9 million square metres; the People's Republic of China, over 9.5 million square kilometres; and the US, over 9.1 million square kilometres. Monaco is the smallest country with an area of only two square kilometres. Nauru has an area of 21 square kilometres; and Tuvalu, 26 square kilometres. In general, a country has an area of square kilometres of six to seven digits.

With a population of over 1330 million, China is the most populous country, followed by India with over 1147 million; the US with over 305 million; and Indonesia, over 245 million. The least populous country is Tuvalu with only 12,177. Other less populous countries are Nauru with 13,770; Palau, 20,600; and San Marino, 29,000. All UN member countries, large or small and heavy or less population, are of equality and have the right to cast only one vote.

An independent country owns territory with the right to become rich through trade of natural resources, economic strength, gems, forest products, oil, agricultural produce, and industrial products. Evil incidents that take place daily in the countries that are still occupied by aliens under lame excuses (without being vested with the permission of the UN to do so) receive well media coverage. Not only many from both sides but also hundreds of thousands of innocent people died and hundreds of thousands of innocent people were injured in the conflicts. A large number of people are being tortured in prisons. So many houses, buildings, roads, bridges, schools, factories, hospitals, markets, agricultural farms, and oil-wells have been ravaged. Businessmen from the invader country are manipulating the natural resources of the invaded country. That reflects that the country and its citizens have lost sovereignty (independence).

Every independent country can lead a peaceful life and enjoy economic development through their natural resources and products. So, they can lay down and exercise political, economic and social policies that win the public satisfaction. And they can participate in the global affairs with the equality of a country with the right to vote.

Myanmar is a nation that existed with own monarchs from Pontaung Ponnya, the Stone Age to Tagaung Period and Konbaung Period, and that has fine traditions of regaining and safeguarding independence through nationalistic fervour and vigour. It is blessed with abundant water sources, fertile soil, temperate climate, and natural resources.

Now, peace and stability has been restored throughout the whole Union. It has been enjoying development in all sectors and is on the path towards democracy. Myanmar people have been in a position to enjoy the taste of independence due to those positive results. What the people just need to do is to keep on pursuing the goal.

Israeli offensive so far leaves 400 dead, 2,000 wounded

GAZA, 1 Jan—The Israeli attacks on the Gaza Strip continued on Thursday for the sixth day in a row, with warplanes striking at more targets in the Hamas-controlled territory.

Mu'awia Hassanien, a Palestinian health emergency official, said the offensive had so far killed 400 Palestinians and left 2,000 wounded.

Among the injured, many are children "with 200 of them severely hurt," added Hassanien.

According to local media reports, Israel added artillery shelling to the war it launches in Gaza, with residents say they heard the sound of shells landing in open areas close to the Israeli border with Gaza.

Five Palestinians were killed Wednesday night, including a man and his wife died in an Israeli bombing in northern Gaza Strip town of Beit Hanoun, another couples in southern Gaza Strip town or Rafah and a militant killed while engaging Israeli troops on the border of eastern Gaza City.

Taleban ambush kills 20 policemen

KABUL, 1 Jan—Twenty Afghan police have been killed in a Taleban attack on the home of a local politician in the southern Afghan province of Helmand, officials say.

The mother of a policeman who arrived at the scene to plead for her son's life was also killed in Wednesday's attack, a provincial official said.

The men had been protecting Mullah Sallaam, the district chief of Musa Qala, who was elsewhere at the time. Two Taleban militants were also killed, a Taleban spokesman said.

The fighting in the Kajaki district lasted several hours, the BBC's Martin Patience said from the Afghan capital, Kabul.

He said many of the police were from the local area.

Wednesday's attack took place in a region where insurgents operate freely, the Afghan security forces having little reach outside of the main town centres.

The attack came the same day as two Nato soldiers were killed on operations in Afghanistan.

Taleban militants have also carried out a number of recent strikes against government forces.

Policing in Afghanistan is a notoriously dangerous job - more than 1,000 police were killed in 2008, most of them killed in militant attacks.

Police probe Thai club fire cause

BANGKOK, 1 Jan—Police in the Thai capital Bangkok are investigating the cause of the New Year's Eve fire at a city nightclub that killed 59 people.

More than 200 people, including at least four Britons, were injured in the fire at the Santika club.

There are suspicions that firecrackers released inside the club may have been the cause of the blaze.

Thai Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva has been to see the charred remains of the building, and met injured victims. "The problem was that firecrackers were allowed to be brought inside (the nightclub), that is the issue about which we have to be more cautious and it has to be controlled more strictly," Mr Abhisit told reporters.

Video of the immediate aftermath shows terrified party-goers stumbling out of the blazing club, many of the Police said the fire may have been caused by firecrackers brought into the nightclub by guests or sparks flying from a pyrotechnic New Year countdown display.

A joint roster provided by Bangkok hospitals showed that three Japanese, two South Koreans and one Singaporean were treated while another Singaporean had died.

One of the Japanese casualties was in a coma and suffering from burns over 60 percent of his body, doctors said.—Internet

Election candidate shot dead in northern Iraq

BAGHDAD, 1 Jan—Mowaffaq al-Hamdani, a candidate for the Sunni Arab party Iraq for Us, was killed by "gunmen" who walked into the cafe in the centre of the city, 390 km (240 miles) north of Baghdad, local media said. One policeman was killed and another wounded when police gave chase to the fleeing gunmen. The results of the vote, which will choose provincial council leaders in 14 of Iraq's 18 provinces, will set the tone for parliamentary elections due at the end of 2009. The government of Nineveh province, where Mosul is located, has been in the hands of minority Kurds since many of the Sunni Arab majority boycotted the last provincial elections in 2005. Hamdani, in his late 50s, was nominated governor after a former holder of the office was assassinated in 2004, but was not ultimately appointed.

Malaysian helicopter saves Indian ship from Somali pirates

KUALA LUMPUR, 1 Jan—The incident, the first of 2009, involved an Indian ship with a dead weight tonnage of 92,687 tonnes, said Noel Choong, an official from the Kuala Lumpur-based IMB.

A Malaysian military helicopter, taking off from a warship sailing nearby, scared away Somali pirates trying to hijack an Indian vessel in the Gulf of Aden on Thursday, the International Maritime Bureau (IMB) said.

The incident, the first of 2009, involved an Indian ship with a dead weight tonnage of 92,687 tonnes, said Noel Choong, an official from the Kuala Lumpur-based IMB. "Two small boats carrying pirates came close to the Indian vessel and started firing on the bridge and the accommodation area," Choong told Reuters.

"The pirates tried to board the vessel repeatedly but failed, as the captain maneuvered the ship and increased its speed." A Malaysian warship, KD Sri Indera Sakti, which was about 15 nautical miles from the area, responded to the Indian vessel's distress calls and sent a helicopter which scared the pirates away, Choong said.

Several hurt as trains collide

ANKARA, 1 Jan—Several people were injured when two trains collided in eastern Turkey on Wednesday, Anatolia news agency reported.

The crash in the province of Sivas involved a passenger train and a freight train, the report said. No details were immediately available. Train accidents are not uncommon on Turkey's ageing and often poorly maintained railway network.

Nine people died when a passenger train derailed in western Turkey in January and in July 2004, 37 people were killed when a newly-inaugurated high-speed train derailed in the northwest.—Internet

discovered

CANBERRA, 1 Jan—One of the world's highest concentrations of dolphins and whales—many of them protected species—has been discovered off the coast of East Timor, local and Australian researchers said on Wednesday.

A "hot spot" of marine cetaceans migrating through deep channels off the Timor coast, including blue and beaked whales, short-finned pilot whales, melon headed whales and six dolphin species was uncovered in a study for the Timor government.

"We were all amazed to see such an abundance, diversity and density of cetaceans. Most of them are actually protected," principal scientist Karen Edyvane told Reuters.

"It's among the world's hot spots for cetaceans," she said. The survey was done by East Timorese researchers and experts from the Australian Institute of Marine Science, working from a traditional 20 metre wooden Indonesian vessel.

Deep ocean channels of the Wetar and Ombai straits, which plummet more than 3 000 metres, were a major migratory route for marine wildlife moving between the Pacific and Indian oceans, including large sharks and turtles, the study found.

In just one day, more than 1 000 individuals and possibly as many as 2 000 whales in eight separate pods — each one containing up to 400 mammals — were spotted over a 50km stretch of coast, Edyvane said.—Internet

Guard dogs save Namibian cheetahs

LONDON, 1 Jan—A scheme using dogs to protect sheep and goats from attack by wild animals in Namibia is proving so successful that it has been exported to Kenya.

With their livestock safe from attack, farmers no longer feel the need to hunt cheetahs and leopards. "We have had amazing results," Laurie Marker of the Cheetah Conservation Fund told.

"Since the dogs were imported, the cheetah population had increased by a third," she said. Anatolian Kangal dogs are extremely loyal and are ready to fight to the death. The puppies are given to farmers when they are just eight weeks old.

They grow up with the flocks of goats and sheep they are to guard and bond with them. If a predator approaches, the dogs bark loudly and the flock gathers round them. This is enough to scare most attackers off, Ms Marker says.

The cheetah may go without a meal, but the result is that the farmers don't suffer losses and so they learn to live with the big cats, she says. Instead of shooting leopard and cheetah or putting poison down to kill jackals, farmers will tolerate these predators.

Crew blamed for crash near Mount Everest in Nepal

KATHMANDU, 1 Jan—Nepalese investigators probing a plane crash near Mount Everest have blamed the pilots for the accident that killed 18 people, a report said on Thursday.

The report said the two pilots misjudged deteriorating weather conditions and flew inside a patch of fog while trying to land at Lukla airport, which is carved into the side of the Himalayas at an altitude of 9,200 feet (2,800 meters). The DeHavilland DHC-6 Twin Otter plane belonging to Yeti Airlines then hit a rock on the side of the runway and burst into flames on 8 Oct.

The investigators interviewed several eyewitnesses and visited the accident site in the foothills of Everest.

Of the 19 people on board the flight from Kathmandu, only the captain survived the crash. Twelve Germans, two Australians and four Nepalese were killed.

The tiny Lukla airport is known for its dramatic scenery and a runway that ends in a steep drop of a few hundred feet (meters). It is an important jumping-off point for trekkers and mountaineers heading to Mount Everest.—Internet

Bus plunges into ravine, kills 10 in Brazil

Two others were unaccounted for, according to Cruz's tally, and may have drowned in a small river at the bottom of the ravine.

Twenty-two passengers survived, and three remain hospitalized.

Blood sugar linked to elderly cognition

NEW YORK, 1 Jan — Maintaining optimal blood sugar levels, even in the absence of diabetes, may help in preserving cognitive health in the elderly, US researchers suggest. Researchers at Columbia University Medical Center in New York say that although it is widely known that the early stages of Alzheimer's disease cause damage to the hippocampus — the area of the brain essential for memory and learning — studies suggest that it is also vulnerable to normal aging.

Until now, the underlying causes of age-related hippocampal dysfunction have remained largely unknown, the researchers said.

Lead investigator Dr Scott A. Small said that previous research discovered that decreasing brain function in one area of the hippocampus, called the dentate gyrus, is a main contributor of normal decline in memory as people age. In the current study, researchers mapped out the specific areas of the hippocampus impacted by late-life diseases like diabetes and stroke.

"Showing for the first time that blood glucose selectively targets the dentate gyrus is not only our most conclusive finding, but it is the most important for 'normal' aging — that is hippocampal dysfunction that occurs in the absence of any disease states," Small said in a statement. The findings are published in the Annals of Neurology.—Internet

Brides-to-be should take folic acid

WASHINGTON, 1 Jan — Before brides-to-be say "I do," they should be taking a daily multivitamin with 400 micrograms of folic acid daily, US researchers said. Folate is a water-soluble B vitamin that occurs naturally in foods, such as leafy green vegetables; but folic acid is the synthetic form of folate that is found in supplements and added to fortified foods.

Elizabeth T Jordan, a perinatal clinical nurse specialist and member of the National Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies Coalition Board of Directors, said that this essential B-vitamin helps build and maintain healthy cells, which is especially critical for the developing fetus. "We know that nearly half of all pregnancies in the US are unplanned and that the average woman is getting less than one-third of the recommended amount of folic acid," Jordan said. "We also know that the odds of having a baby born with a neural tube defect could be greatly reduced by women of childbearing age getting the recommended amount of folic acid."

Despite the food fortification program that began in 1998, which enriched breads, cereals, flours, corn meals, pastas, rice, and other grain products with folic acid, the average non-pregnant Caucasian woman gets only 128 mcg per day of folic acid from fortified food, a study published in the May 2007 issue of the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, Jordan said.

LONDON, 1 Jan — It's the most delicious news: women are happiest with their lives and the way they look when they are a size 14. Contentment, it seems, comes with curves. Perhaps that's why Kate Winslet and Nigella Lawson look so pleased with themselves.

Second happiest, according to the research, were size 12 women, with almost three-quarters saying they were totally satisfied with their friendships and almost half happy with their careers. Size eights came third in the happiness poll, closely followed by those who wear a size 16 — the average dress size for British women.

Gerrard has Benitez's 'full support'

Steven Gerrard.

LONDON ,1 Jan— Liverpool manager Rafael Benitez threw his weight behind club captain Steven Gerrard on Wednesday after the England midfielder was charged earlier this week with assault in an alleged bar brawl.

"Steven is our captain and a key player for us, but more than this, I know him as a nice person," Benitez told the club's official website.

"I sat down with him this morning and had a very good talk with him about the situation and I was also able to speak at length with our club lawyer," the Spaniard added.

"Steven explained to me what had happened and I told him he has my full support and backing.

along with everyone else at the football club," said Benitez, back at Liverpool's Melwood training ground for the first time since his kidney stone operation a fortnight ago.

"He's trained with the other lads this (Wednesday) morning after a couple of days off for the squad and is keen now to focus solely on his football.

"We've worked very hard to get into the position we're in going through to the New Year and all of us are determined to keep that progress going.

"We'll do whatever we can to support Steven in the weeks ahead, but we're now concentrating on our preparation for the FA Cup game at Preston this weekend."

FA confirm Droylsden's Cup expulsion

LONDON,1 Jan – Non-league Droylsden failed on Wednesday with an appeal against their expulsion from the FA Cup after being found guilty of fielding an ineligible player during their bizarre tie with Chesterfield.

As a result fourth-tier Chesterfield will be away to Ipswich Town, who play in the Championship, the division below the elite Premier League, in the third round on Saturday.

Last week, Droylsden thought they had won their second-round tie against League Two Chesterfield, two divisions above them, at the fourth time of asking after fog, a controversial goal and floodlight failure had foiled three previous attempts to separate the sides.

But it turned out that defender Sean Newton, who scored both their goals in a 2-1 win, was ineligible after collecting his fifth booking of the season on 9 December. According to Football Association (FA) regulations, that meant he was suspended for one match, a ban which should have ruled him out of last Tuesday's fixture.

Droylsden were thrown out by an FA Cup protest sub-committee on Monday, a decision upheld by Wednesday's appeal hearing.—Internet

Fuller, who accused Griffin of "disrespecting" him, told Sky Sports on Wednesday: "It (the incident) happened and that's all. I'm sorry for the fans especially as we didn't get the three points."

The bizarre flashpoint came just moments after Carlton Cole's equaliser for the Hammers at Upton Park as Fuller lost his cool following a row with Griffin over who was responsible for the goal.—Internet

Underdone Aussies ready for Hopman Tennis Cup

PERTH ,1 Jan – Australian pair Lleyton Hewitt and Casey Dellacqua will be hoping to put the injury woes of 2008 behind them when they team up at the Hopman Cup.

Hewitt is a dual Grand Slam winner and Dellacqua is coming off the best year of her career. But both have had their preparations for 2009 interrupted by injury and the host nation is at long odds for a second victory in the unique mixed teams tournament, which starts on Saturday.

Hewitt's season ended in August due to hip surgery and the Hopman Cup is his first step on the comeback trail, while Dellacqua's 2008 campaign also came to a premature end in September due to a nagging shoulder injury.

Tsonga says he can dominate Djokovic, ahead of Brisbane tennis

BRISBANE, 1 Jan – Frenchman Jo-Wilfried Tsonga believes he can rejuvenate his recent dominance over world No 3 Novak Djokovic if the pair meet during next week's inaugural Brisbane International tennis tournament.

Djokovic downed Tsonga in the final of this year's Australian Open but since then has lost three matches in succession to the 23-year-old Frenchman. Tsonga is the second seed behind the Serb at the Brisbane International and said if his serve was working he would be almost unbeatable. Tsonga was one of the stars of the Australian Open as he won his way through to the final with some occasionally breathtaking stroke play. But he said simply reaching the final had not been enough.—Internet

Daly suspended for 6 months by PGA Tour

WASHINGTON , 1 Jan— John Daly smashed one tee shot off the top of a beer can during a pro-am. At another tournament, he returned from a rain delay with Tampa Bay Buccaneers coach Jon Gruden as his caddy. And his most memorable photo this year came in an orange jail suit, eyes half-closed.

Daly said on Wednesday that such unwelcome publicity is why the PGA Tour suspended him for six months. The two-time major champion confirmed his suspension to The Associated Press, calling this the low point of an 18-year career during which he has made as much news off the course as he has with his prodigious game.—Internet

Another reason to avoid High-fat Diet: It can disrupt our biological clock

JERUSALEM, 1 Jan — Indulgence in a high-fat diet can not only lead to overweight because of excessive calorie intake, but also can affect the balance of circadian rhythms — everyone's 24-hour biological clock, Hebrew University of Jerusalem researchers have shown.

The biological clock regulates the expression and/or activity of enzymes and hormones involved in metabolism, and disturbance of the clock can lead to such phenomena as hormone imbalance, obesity, psychological and sleep disorders and cancer.

While light is the strongest factor affecting the circadian clock, Dr. Oren Froy and his colleagues of the Institute of Biochemistry, Food Science and Nutrition at the Hebrew University's Robert H. Smith Faculty of Agriculture, Food and Environment in Rehovot, have demonstrated in their experiments with laboratory mice that there is a cause-and-effect relation between diet and biological clock imbalance.

The researchers fed mice either a low-fat or a high-fat diet, followed by a fasting day, then measured components of the adiponectin metabolic pathway at various levels of activity. In mice on the low-fat diet, the adiponectin signaling pathway components exhibited normal circadian rhythmicity. Fasting resulted in a phase advance. The high-fat diet resulted in a phase delay. Fasting raised and the high-fat diet reduced adenosine monophosphate-activated protein kinase (AMPK) levels. This protein is involved in fatty acid metabolism, which could be disrupted by the lower level. The researchers suggest that this high-fat diet could contribute to obesity, not only through its high caloric content, but also by disrupting the phases and daily rhythm of clock genes. They contend also that high fat-induced changes in the clock and the adiponectin signaling pathway may help explain the disruption of other clock-controlled systems associated with metabolic disorders, such as blood pressure levels and the sleep/wake cycle.

Antibiotics before infections save lives-study

AMSTERDAM, 1 Jan — Giving antibiotics to patients in intensive care units as a precaution saves lives, according to a major Dutch study published on Wednesday.

The findings in the New England Journal of Medicine suggest the benefits of administering antibiotics right away, even before an infection develops, outweigh the risks people will develop resistance to them, the researchers said. "We have seen that using antibiotics clearly results in a reduction in the number of deaths and intensive care units should make use of this knowledge," Anne Marie de Smet, a researcher at University Medical Center Utrecht, said in a statement.

Drug-resistant bacteria are a growing problem in hospitals worldwide, marked by the rise of superbugs such as methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus, or MRSA. Such infections kill about 19,000 people a year in the United States, while more than 4,000 a year in Britain are infected.
