Robot inspects wind energy converters

A robot inspects a wind energy converter's rotor blades for possible damage.

BERLIN, 19 Jan — The material of wind energy converters must withstand intense forces. Are rotor blades damaged? A new robot inspects wind energy converters more precisely than a human ever could. It detects the minutest damage – even below the surface.

It appears reliably and appears alone. Nimble and quickly, it pulls itself up a rope meter for meter until it reaches a wind energy converter's giant rotor blades. Then it goes to work. It thoroughly inspects every centimeter of the rotor blades' surface. Nothing escapes it. It registers any crack and any delamination in the material and relays their exact positions. In this job, a robot is superior to humans.

Strive for further strengthening Union Spirit and consolidating of national unity

The government has laid down and is implementing the 24 special development zone project, the border area development project and the five rural development project to bring about harmonious development the length and breadth of the nation for improvement of the socio-economic status of the people and for human resources development.

Smooth and secure transport plays a pivotal role in the process of bringing about national development.

The government has been implementing projects for development of border areas and national races that lagged behind in development owing to the evil legacy of colonialists. In this regard, it has built a network of roads and bridges for ensuring better transport and forging national unity.

Nantsalein creek bridge, which is situated between Khamti Township and Lahe Township in Khamti District, Sagaing Division was commissioned into service on 16 January. The bridge plays an important role in the development of the region.

In the past, Lahe Township was of difficult access due to poor transport. At present, with the emergence of the bridge, local people of the region can travel from one place to another, thereby getting them to be oneness with those from other regions.

Making better use of the facility, local people will be able to transport goods from their region to other regions and to fully engage in the development of agriculture and livestock breeding sectors.

The government spent a large amount of funds on regional development with the aim of further strengthening Union Spirit and consolidating of national unity. With this end in view, the onus is on the entire people to strive together with the government for the emergence of a peaceful, modern, developed and discipline-flourishing democratic nation.

Suicide attack near US base kills one Afghan KABUL, 19 Jan — A suicide car bomb attack near the gates of a US base in eastern Afghanistan killed one Afghan on Monday and wounded several more, officials said.

The attack targeted Forward Operating Base Chapman in Khost City, near the border with Pakistan, said Lt Cmdr. James Gater, a spokesman for the NATO-led mission in Afghanistan.

An Afghan health official, Dr Gul Mohammadin Mohammadi, said one Afghan was killed and four were wounded in the attack.

Late last month a bomb-laden truck exploded outside another US military post in Khost province, killing 14 Afghan school children.

Violence has been rising across Afghanistan the last two years. President-elect Barack Obama has promised to increase America's focus on the deteriorating situation in the country while decreasing troop levels in Iraq.

The US has said it will send up to 30,000 new troops into Afghanistan in 2009, including some 3,000 forces in two provinces adjacent to Kabul, where militants now have free rein. The US now has some 32,000 troops in Afghanistan.

Pakistan temporarily halts US-NATO supplies

PESHAWAR, 19 Jan — Pakistan temporarily closed the major land supply route to US and NATO forces in Afghanistan on Monday after suspected insurgents killed a soldier and wounded 14, adding urgency to efforts to secure alternative supply lines as more US troops head to the region.

Growing militant activity along the legendary Khyber Pass has prompted several temporary closures in recent months, and it was not immediately clear how long the latest suspension would last.

Afghan-based US and NATO forces get up to 75 percent of their supplies via routes that traverse Pakistan, with Khyber being the main conduit into Afghanistan. The trucks that carry the fuel, food and other goods face constant threats of violence. Militants have also ransacked truck-holding terminals in the nearby city of Peshawar.

The Khyber region is part of Pakistan's semiautonomous tribal belt, where al-Qaeda and Taliban fighters hold tremendous sway. The Pakistani government has dispatched paramilitary escorts for the supply convoys and recently launched a crackdown on militants in Khyber, but militant activity has continued.

In the latest attack, suspected militants fired eight rockets at a Pakistani military camp in the Landikotal area early Monday, said Fazal Mahmood, a senior government official in Khyber. One soldier died, while 14 were wounded, he said. —Internet

Hijacked Ukrainian tank ship’s crew unwell

MOGADISHU, 19 Jan—Some crew members of a Ukrainian ship hijacked off Somalia with 33 tanks on board have fallen sick, a local businessman said.

The MV Faina, the highest-profile of a dozen ships being held off Somalia, was captured in September with its 20-man crew and a cargo of Soviet-era T-72 tanks plus other weapons.

The pirates want 5 million US dollars to release the boat, and its crew of mainly Russians and Ukrainians. One sick crew member died in the early days of the hijacking.

“Seven of the MV Faina’s crew have become sick and we are planning to take Somali doctors to treat these crew on the ship,” businessman Osman Farah, who has dealings with the pirates, told Reuters on Saturday.

“Rashes have appeared on their bodies, and they are suffering diarrhoea. Some have high blood pressure. We do not exactly know the disease, but we think the chemicals of the weapons on the ship have affected them,” he said.—MNA/Reuters

Gunmen attack ships at Nigeria oil loading platform

LAGOS, 19 Jan—Gunmen opened fire on at least two oil vessels at Nigeria’s Bonny crude oil loading platform late on Saturday, the site’s joint owner Royal Dutch Shell and industry security sources said on Sunday.

One of the sources said gunmen initially opened fire on an oil tanker at the facility but were unable to board the vessel. They then attacked a tugboat and two service boats, one of which was later found drifting with its crew apparently abducted. “They went on the rampage at other vessels in the area,” the security source said.

“We can confirm there was an attack on two vessels, a tanker and a support vessel, at SPDC’s crude loading platform at Bonny, Rivers state, last night,” said a spokes-woman for Shell, which operates the Bonny platform in a joint venture with the state-run Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (NNPC). “The vessels were not owned by Shell.”

A second industry security source said a crew member on the tugboat was believed to have been killed in the attack. A military spokesman could not immediately provide any details. Violence in the Niger Delta, home to Africa’s biggest oil and gas industry, has cut Nigeria’s oil output by around a fifth over the past three years.

Lebanese protesters try to storm US Embassy in Beirut

BEIRUT, 19 Jan—Lebanese demonstrators were confronted with security forces on Sunday when they tried to storm the US Embassy in Awkar east of Beirut, local New TV reported.

The security forces used tear gas to disperse the demonstrators who were gathering in protest against the Israeli offensive on Gaza, said the TV report, adding several were wounded during the confrontation.

According to the report, the protesters chanted slogans against the US and Israel, and distributed pamphlets urging the US Ambassador Michel Sisson to leave the country “because she is not welcomed here.”

A number of demonstrations have been staged against the US Embassy to Lebanon since the Gaza fighting started on 27 December. Most of them were called by Lebanon’s leftist and communist parties along with the leading opposition group of Hizbollah. The demonstrators blamed the US for backing Israel to be “a partner in the killing of Palestinians in Gaza.”

Leftist Lebanese parties are allies with Hizbollah-led opposition, and have a history of anti-Israeli activities according to media reports.

China establishes firm to produce jet engines

SHANGHAI, 19 Jan—A company was set up in Shanghai Sunday to make engines for jumbo aircraft in a move intended to help China reduce reliance on foreign suppliers.

The AVIC Commercial Aircraft Engine Co Ltd (ACAEC) will be involved in “research, design, production, sales, maintenance, service and technological consulting for jet engines and related products,” said Zhang Jian, manager of the company.

The government-owned Aviation Industry Corp of China (AVIC) holds a 40 per cent stake in ACAEC, which has registered capital of six billion yuan (877 million US dollars). Fuel depot blaze put out in Jakarta JAKARTA, 19 Jan—Firefighters extinguished a massive blaze at a fuel depot in the Indonesian capital Monday morning after a day-long fire burned hundreds of thousands of gallons of gasoline.

The fire sent black clouds of smoke billowing over the city at its peak, but firefighters managed to contain the conflagration to one of the six massive storage tanks at the depot.

“Only one tank went up in flames during the fire. The other six tanks are safe,” said Toharso, secretary of the state oil company Pertamina.

Pertamina lost around 2500 kiloliters (660,000 gallons) of unleaded gasoline during the fire, Toharso said.

Despite Pertamina’s statement that Jakarta had sufficient fuel reserves to last a week, Jakartans lined up at area gas stations as the tank burned Sunday. The company still has about 52,000 kiloliters on hand to serve the capital, Toharso said.—Xinhua

Arab officials warn against rising unemployment in Arab nations

KUWAIT CITY, 19 Jan — Arab officials on Sunday warned against rising unemployment in the Arab world during the Arab economic and social forum’s final session which is dedicated to youth, unemployment and immigration.

Qatari Labour Minister, Sultan bin Hassan al-Dhabit al-Dossary, said at the opening of the session that unemployment has reached “high levels” in the Arab world, or 22 per cent of the actual workforce, noting that the annual increase in joblessness was around 1.5 per cent.

Arab governments were responsible for encouraging the youth to participate in the development in the Arab countries, he said.

Al-Dossary called for creating a balance between education and needs of the labour market, appealing to businessmen to establish a bank to finance small-sized projects to be run by the youth in order to eradicate unemployment.

The Qatari official also called for minimizing the import of foreign labour and encouraged Arab brains to return to their home countries. Meanwhile, Director General of the Arab Labour Organization, Ahmad Lukman, said that 54 per cent of the unemployed were the youth, adding more than four million people would need jobs in the next decade.

Indonesia ferry captain suspected over disaster

JAKARTA, 19 Jan — The captain of an Indonesian ferry that sank off Sulawesi island last week, leaving hundreds missing, has been named a suspect for possible negligence causing loss of life, police said on Monday.

The ferry, which had 250 passengers and 17 crew according to the manifest, was travelling from Pare-pare on the west coast of Sulawesi to Samarinda city on Indonesia’s side of Borneo Island when it ran into heavy seas.

Rescue officials have found only 35 survivors, including the captain, and nine bodies more than a week after the disaster.

“We made Sabir (the captain) a suspect yesterday for negligence that caused loss of lives,” said Heri Sabiansauri, a spokesman for the South Sulawesi police.

Negligence leading to a loss of life can carry a maximum jail sentence of five years, according to Indonesia’s penal code. Sabir, who goes by one name, is currently in police custody. Police usually classify a person a suspect in Indonesia before prosecutors may lay formal charges. — MNA/Reuters

Egypt deports 10 more Eritreans

CAIRO, 19 Jan — Egypt deported 10 Eritreans on Sunday who had been caught trying to enter Israel illegally, sources at Cairo International Airport said, despite concerns they could face torture at home. Egypt has in the past two weeks deported 64 Eritreans arrested in similar circumstances.

The sources said police had put the Eritreans on an EgyptAir plane for Asmara accompanied by eight security guards. They added that some of the Eritreans had tried to assault Egyptian police as they were being taken into the airport.

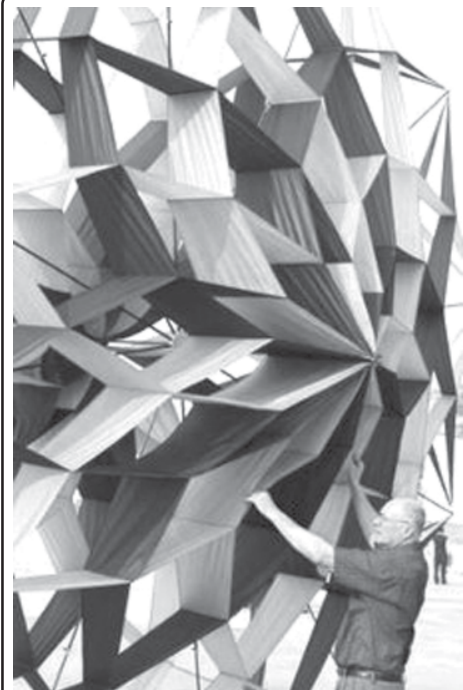

The Eritreans were caught on the Egyptian-Israeli border weeks ago while trying to slip across into the Jewish state.

Egyptian police have shot and killed 28 African migrants and Egypt has deported up to 1,200 this year alone. Many are Pentecostal Christians escaping religious persecution and others are trying to avoid military conscription, activists said.

Egypt for years tolerated tens of thousands of Africans on its territory, but its attitude hardened in 2007 after it came under Israeli pressure to stop growing numbers of Africans trying to cross into the Jewish state. — MNA/Reuters

Prehistoric fish provides new piece in evolution's jigsaw puzzle

STOCKHOLM, 19 Jan — In an article in the journal Nature on 14 January, Uppsala researcher Martin Brazeau describes the skull and jaws of a fish that lived about 410 million years ago. The study may give important clues to the origin of jawed vertebrates, and thus ultimately our own evolution.

Ptomacanthus anglicus was a very early jawed fish that lived in the Devonian period some 410 million years ago. It represents a type of fossil fish known as an "acanthodian" which is characterized by a somewhat shark-like appearance and sharp spines along the leading edges of all fins (except for the tail fin). This group of early jawed fishes may reveal a great deal about the origin of jawed vertebrates (a story that ultimately includes our own origins). However, their relationships to modern jawed vertebrates (and thus their evolutionary significance) are poorly understood, owing partly to the fact that we know very little about their internal head skeleton.

"To date, we have detailed data from one genus Acanthodes, which occurred very late in acanthodian history," Brazeau explains.—Internet

Official says “Erroneous” Western democracy not for China

BEIJING, 19 Jan — China must build defences against “erroneous” ideas involving Western-style democracy, a top government official said in comments published on Sunday, shooting down recent calls by dissidents for political reform.

China’s ruling Communist Party has stepped up efforts to stifle dissent and protest ahead of politically sensitive anniversaries this year, and amid concerns that rising unemployment in a slowing economy could fuel broad social unrest.

Jia Qinglin, China’s fourth-most senior official, demanded officials throw their weight behind the one-party state in an essay in the Party’s main ideological journal “Seeking Truth” (Qiushi), which was reproduced on major web portals on Sunday.

“Build a line of defence to resist Western two-party and multi-party systems, bicameral legislature, the separation of powers and other kinds of erroneous ideological interferences,” said Jia, who is also head of the Chinese People’s Political Consultative Conference (CPPCC), a largely toothless parliamentary advisory body.

“Consciously abide by the Party’s political discipline and resolutely safeguard the Party’s centralised unity,” Jia said, calling on CPPCC members to strengthen “ideological unity”.

Obama sees his race as an opportunity

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan — US President-elect Barack Obama, who avoided calling attention to race during the campaign, sees his race as an opportunity to bridge differences, The Washington Post reported on Monday.

Obama spoke in an interview last week about how his racial identity can unify and transform the United States, the newspaper said.

The son of a black Kenyan father and a white mother from Kansas, Obama will be inaugurated on Tuesday as the 44th US president, and the first one to be an African American.

“There is an entire generation that will grow up taking for granted that the highest office in the land is filled by an African American,” Obama said in the interview.

“I mean, that’s a radical thing. It changes how black children look at themselves. It also changes how white children look at black children. And I wouldn’t underestimate the force of that,” Obama told The Post.

Beyond the historic symbolism of his inauguration, Obama hopes to use his presidency as an example of how people can bridge differences, The Post reported.

“What I hope to model is a way of interacting with people who aren’t like you and don’t agree with you that changes the temper of our politics,” Obama was quoted as saying.

“And then part of that changes how we think about moving forward on race relations. Race relations becomes a subset of a larger problem in our society, which is we have a diverse, complicated society where people have a lot of different viewpoints,” Obama said.

Drive with care

Putin says likes Obama, but urges caution

DRESDEN (GERMANY), 19 Jan—Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin praised incoming US President Barack Obama as "sincere and open" on Saturday but said Moscow needed to see how he turned out in practice. Relations between Washington and Moscow have hit a post-Cold War low amid rows over missile defence, NATO enlargement, Kosovo independence and Russia's war with Georgia.

Putin said Russia was ready to cooperate with the United States on a range of international issues, though he cautioned against excessive optimism over the new US leader. "Obama looks like a sincere and open man and this of course attracts people," Putin said at an overnight meeting with editors of leading German newspapers during a visit to Dresden.

But he also said, "I am deeply convinced that the deepest disappointments come from excessive hopes. We need to see what happens in practice," Putin led Russia as president in 2000-08 and developed a strong personal relationship with outgoing US President George W Bush, which survived frequent disagreements over policy.

US says not closing its military base in Kyrgyzstan

DUSHANBE, 19 Jan—The United States has no plans to close its military airbase in Kyrgyzstan, the US regional military chief said on Saturday.

A source close to Kyrgyz President Kurmanbek Bakiyev's office told Reuters on 13 January that the Central Asian state was preparing a statement announcing the closure of the base, a key US staging post for its operations in nearby Afghanistan.

US Central Command chief General David Petraeus, visiting Tajikistan as part of a regional tour that also takes him to Kyrgyzstan this weekend, said the United States had no plans to stop using the airbase.

"We look forward to discussing the future of the base there and we certainly have no plans to change anything frankly," he told reporters. Washington set up the base, now home to more than 1,000 military personnel, in ex-Soviet Kyrgyzstan in 2001 after the start of the US-led military campaign in Afghanistan.

Russia, which also operates a military airbase in Kyrgyzstan, saw the arrival of US forces as a Washington attempt to squeeze Russian influence in the ex-Soviet region. Russian media have separately reported that Bakiyev would announce the closure of the US base ahead of his planned visit to Moscow next month. The Kyrgyz Government has not officially commented on the matter.

China warns of bird flu risk over Lunar New Year

BEIJING, 19 Jan— There is a risk of more bird flu cases in China as the country gears up for the Lunar New Year holiday at the end of the month, the Agricultural Ministry said, after the government reported two new human cases of the disease.

After not reporting a single human infection in almost a year, China has now confirmed three cases of the H5N1 virus in less than two weeks.

“As the Spring Festival approaches, there are frequent movements of poultry products and the risk rises of virus outbreaks and transmission,” the Agriculture Ministry said in a statement on its website.

The Spring Festival, or Lunar New Year holiday, starts next Monday and is accompanied by a mass movement of people back to their home provinces for lavish celebratory meals.

FBI joins search for missing Florida money manager

TALLAHASSEE, 19 Jan — A Florida investment manager who disappeared with what could be hundreds of millions of dollars of other people’s money remained missing on Sunday, as the investigation into his dealings widened.

The FBI and the US Securities and Exchange Commission have joined the search and investigation for Arthur Nadel, president of Scoop Management Inc, whose reported disappearance Wednesday was followed two days later by complaints from investors who said that funds invested by and through Nadel had disappeared along with him.

Sarasota police said the investigation began on Friday and federal agencies were informed after they received complaints from at least five possible victims, many of whom appeared to have lost more than 500,000 US dollars. “What has allegedly gone on also includes federal and other regulatory violations,” Captain William Spitler, spokesman for the Sarasota Police Department, said. “That’s why it was important for us to get all the agencies together.”

US Airways jet’s engines lost power simultaneously

NEW YORK, 19 Jan— The US Airways jet that survived a crash-landing Thursday in New York had lost power in both engines simultaneously before ditching safely on the Hudson River, flight data revealed Sunday.

The Airbus A320 had reached a maximum altitude of 3,200 feet (about 975 metres) before both engines cut out,

National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) official Kitty Higgins told a Press conference. Investigators also said cockpit recordings featuring transmissions between the crew and air traffic control was consistent with the timeline of events based on interviews with the flight crew and other collected data. Higgins said recordings showed the captain had mentioned birds to the co-pilot about 90 seconds after takeoff.

“One second later, the cockpit voice recorder recorded the sound of thumps and rapid decrease of engine sounds. The captain acknowledges that both engines have lost power and he takes control of the aircraft,” Higgins said.

Summers says does not see jobless topping 10%

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan — One of President-elect Barack Obama’s leading economic advisers said on Sunday he does not see unemployment topping 10 per cent and wants financial rescue funds to be used to boost the flow of credit to the economy.

Incoming National Economic Council director Lawrence Summers said on CBS’s “Face the Nation” that the 350 billion US dollars in financial bailout money spent so far had not produced all the results policymakers had hoped for. “Anyone who looks at it has got to be disappointed when they look at what has happened to lending,” Summers said.

“Got to think the results have been unsatisfactory. Got to think we need a more proactive approach that’s got its focus on what is really the financial centre of this problem, which is maintaining an adequate flow of credit,” he said.

West Ham striker Bellamy 'set to sign for Man City'

LONDON, 19 Jan—Wales striker Craig Bellamy is set to leave West Ham for big-spenders Manchester City, the London club confirmed on Monday.

The Hammers have accepted City's bid of around 14 million pounds (15 million euros) for the 29-year-old and Bellamy was expected to rapidly complete a medical to clinch the deal.

The much-travelled Bellamy had demanded a transfer to Tottenham on Friday after rejecting the offer of a new contract, but his club were unwilling to sell to their London rivals.

He was left out of the Hammers squad which defeated Fulham 3-1 on Sunday, with manager Gianfranco Zola stating the player was "not in the right frame of mind".

City have already had three separate bids for Bellamy turned down, and it was thought he would have preferred to join Spurs.

But with the Hammers refusing to do business with their city rivals, it appears Bellamy has accepted the lure of cash-rich Manchester. City boss Mark Hughes knows Bellamy well, both with Wales and at Blackburn, and has never had a problem with the player's fiery temperament.

It is not expected there will be any problem with the player's medical, and personal terms should be a formality too, given the amount of money City have at their disposal thanks to their Abu Dhabi ownership.—Internet

Redknapp set to strengthen wasteful Tottenham

LONDON, 19 Jan—Tottenham manager Harry Redknapp outlined his need for new players in the January transfer window after his team missed a hatful of chances in a 1-1 draw against his old club Portsmouth.

Darren Bent was the worst offender, heading wide a golden opportunity to win Sunday's match where the point Spurs gained was at least good enough to take them off the bottom of the English Premier League table and out of the relegation zone, albeit on goal difference.

West Ham striker Craig Bellamy is near the top of Redknapp's shopping list, but the Tottenham boss is pessimistic about the Wales forward's chances of making a move across London.

"I've not given up, but it's going to be difficult," Redknapp said. "I think Manchester City are in for him and if they are then you've got no chance because they can just outbid you."

The renowned transfer wheeler-dealer has attracted criticism this week from both Sunderland boss Ricky Sbragia, over his pursuit of forward Kenwyne Jones, and Middlesbrough manager Gareth Southgate, regarding his attempt to lure winger Stewart Downing to White Hart Lane.

England international Downing had handed in a transfer request but Redknapp now accepts he is likely to stay at the north-east club.—Internet

Searing conditions during the first day's play at Melbourne Park failed to force any upsets on the women's side of the draw, as Russians Dinara Safina (seeded three) and Vera Zvonareva (seven) also advanced comfortably.

Jankovic's main problem in disposing of Austria's Yvonne Meusburger 6-1, 6-3 was the heat from the court's rubberised surface scalding her feet, forcing her to rest her soles on ice during changeovers.

The 23-year-old consequently wrapped up the match as quickly as possible in 70 minutes, declaring herself "fit and ready to play" as she chases a maiden Grand Slam title to go with her ranking as the world's best player.

"It's nice to get going and get off to a good start," she said, crediting a grueling off season training schedule in Mexico with strengthening her once injury-prone body.—Internet

Real Madrid ride luck to close gap on Spanish League leaders Barcelona

MADRID, 19 Jan—Real Madrid came from a goal down to cut Barcelona's lead at the top to 12 points with a hard-fought 3-1 home victory over basement boys Osasuna on Sunday and end a week of boardroom infighting on a high.

In contrast to Barcelona's dazzling 5-0 thrashing of Deportivo La Coruna on Saturday, Real were fortunate to survive two strong penalty claims as they laboured to a win that lifts them into second above Sevilla on goal difference.

"We scored three goals and got three points which is what we wanted," said Real boss Juande Ramos.

"Barcelona are playing magnificent football and that is why they are getting good results.

Champ Djokovic through as star is born at Australian Open

Serbia's Novak Djokovic returns the ball during his game against Andrea Stoppini of Italy on the first day of play of the Australian Open in Melbourne.—INTERNET

MELBOURNE, 19 Jan—Defending champion Novak Djokovic stormed into the Australian Open second round but a record-breaking 16-year-old stole the show on the first day of competition Monday.

Djokovic dispatched Andrea Stoppini (ITA) 6-2, 6-3, 7-5 at Melbourne Park, joining three-time semi-finalist Andy Roddick in the next stage with triple champion Roger Federer playing later.

"There is pressure. But it didn't affect me today, I'm still trying to find the rhythm and I'm slowly getting there," Djokovic said.

"It is a different feeling, but I look at it as a challenge."

But early attention focused on Australia's Bernard Tomic, who became the youngest male winner here aged just 16 years and 90 days.

President says Real not planning more January signings

MADRID, 19 Jan—Real Madrid are unlikely to buy any more players in the January transfer period, new club president Vicente Boluda was quoted as saying on Sunday. Boluda took charge of the Primera Liga champions on Friday when Ramon Calderon was forced to resign after the Marca newspaper published allegations of irregularities at the club's general assembly last month.

In his first interview as president, Boluda told Marca that Real would probably not buy further players this month following the signings of Klaas Jan Huntelaar and Lassana Diarra.

"In this world, you can never rule it out completely but the squad is complete and I don't think so," the 53-year-old businessman said. "We have a fairly complete and balanced side and we are going to remain like this until the end."—Internet

Newly-imported locomotives and machinery to help improve rail transportation

Article: Tin Htwe (MNA); Photos: Nyo Maung (MNA)

The automatic levelling, lining & tamping machine imported from India.

The government is exerting itself in various sectors in building a modern developed nation. As part of the goal, it is constructing a network of railroads with the aim of further consolidating national unity through progress of rail transportation.

In that case, the government is producing concrete sleepers on an extensive scale and importing new locomotives and machinery for maintenance of railroads in order to run trains equipped with modern engines on the new railroads and ensure sustainable service of railroad sections.

In the time of the State Peace and Development Council, the Myanma Railways imported 96 diesel locomotives: 55 from the People's Republic of China, and the rest, from the Republic of India.

Is human 'imperfection' such a bad thing?

MIDDLESBROUGH, 19 Jan — Imagine a world of 'human perfection' where disabled people are a distant memory, edited out by medical enhancement and economic cost-benefit analysis: a world where thanks to generic selection and economic crises disabled people find themselves expendable.

Is such a world desirable?

Not necessarily so, says artist and computer animator Simon McKeown from the University of Teesside's School of Computing, who is challenging many of the notions of so-called human 'imperfection' in a high-tech film-based exhibition called Motion Disabled.

Produced with colleagues in the West Midlands, it uses a number of 'disabled actors' from around the country and opens at the Wolverhampton Art Gallery on 24 January, 2009 with a run of four months.

"Motion Disabled is an animated digital sculpture," says Simon McKeown, Teesside University's Reader in Computer Animation and one of Britain's most experienced 3D animators, with 20 years' industry experience in TV and computer games production.

"We've used state-of-the-art Hollywood technology more usually associated with super heroes like Spiderman to capture ordinary disabled people in their human diversity.—Internet

New genetic model predicts plant flowering in different environments

SCIENCE DAILY, 19 Jan — It has been known for some time that plants respond to environmental cues that guide their flowering. Chief among these signals are light, temperature and vernalization, when flowering is promoted by prolonged exposure to cold temperatures.

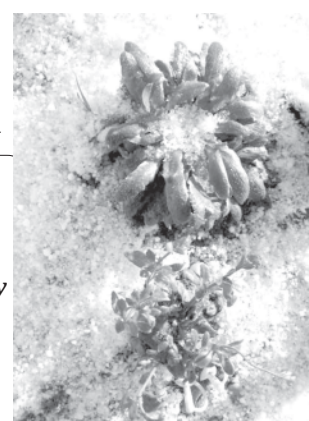

In some plants, scientists have identified particular genes that deal with each of these environmental signals.

But they haven't fully grasped how plants integrate these signals in nature. For example, when day length and temperature are combined in different ways, plants outdoors may not respond the same way as plants in the lab.
