Actively take part in preservation of biodiversity in Myanmar

With favourable weather pattern and geographical feature, Myanmar is blessed with rare species of flora and fauna. According to records, there are over 1,000 species of butterflies, over 90 species of bats, over 1,000 species of birds, over 10,000 species of flowering plants and over 800 species of orchids in Myanmar.

Moreover, there are endangered species of animals and rare species of animals in the country. There are tigers in Hukaung Valley reserve forest, rare species of Myanmar deer in Shweseztaw wildlife reserve and Cahththin wildlife reserve.

There are hard woods, herbal plants and a variety of orchids plus tigers, leopards, bears, wild oxen, wild boar, wild goats, mountain goats, pangolins, monkeys and other rare animals in Indawgyi wildlife reserve.

The Ministry of Forestry designed the areas where elephants, rhinoceros, wolves, pangolins, wild oxen, brown fish-owls, samburs, crocodiles, star tortoises and other rare animals reside as sanctuaries are preserving them.

Different kinds of animals and biodiversity can be seen in Hukaung Valley reserve forest, Indawgyi sanctuary, Moyongyi Lake Sanctuary, Shweseztaw wildlife reserve and Alaungdawkatathapa National Park.

At present, the Ministry of Forestry is taking systematic measures for preservation of natural resources including biodiversity and trees and woods. At such a time, it is incumbent upon the entire national people to contribute their shares in the drive with a sense of duty. Only then, will the efforts for preservation of such natural resources be fruitful.

Iraqi Parliament fails to elect new speaker

BAGHDAD, 20 Feb—Iraq's parliament failed to elect a new speaker after its second round of secret ballot on Thursday, a parliament official said.

"The lawmakers held their second round of secret ballot to vote in a new speaker, but they failed to choose any of the two candidates for the speaker post," an official in the parliament media office told Xinhua.

The lawmakers failed to secure absolute majority votes, namely 138, needed for the speaker post, according to the parliament law, the source said on condition of anonymity because he was authorized to speak to the media.

He said Ayad al-Samarraie was only two votes away from the absolute majority in the 275-seat parliament, while his competitor, Khalil Jadua, gained 81 votes.

Deputy parliament speaker Khalid al-Attiya announced the adjournment of the session to Saturday, the source added.

A total of 234 members of parliament attended Thursday's session to vote in a new speaker to fill the post which has been vacant for about two months, the source added.

The Iraqi parliament frequently failed to vote on a new parliament leader to replace former speaker Mahmoud al-Mashhadani, a Sunni Arab politician who was forced to resign by majority of parliament members late last year.

Kyrgyz authorities can now issue an eviction notice, giving the United States 180 days to leave the base.

Kyrgyz lawmakers overwhelming voted on Thursday in favor of a government-backed bill to shutter the base.—Internet

US asks European allies to do more in Afghanistan

KRAKOW, 20 Feb—US Defence Secretary Robert Gates on Thursday asked NATO's European allies to do more in Afghanistan to balance new US pledges to send in 17,000 additional troops.

Gates and his counterparts in NATO countries were holding informal discussions on Afghanistan on Thursday.

"Secretary Gates made a point ... that this (additional US troops for Afghanistan) should not be seen as only a US extra effort, that this extra effort needs to be balanced by all the allies," NATO spokesman James Appathurai told reporters.

All allies shared the view that everybody needs to do more, said Appathurai, without pronouncing any specific pledges by other allies. He said apart from military support, allies can also make civilian contributions to NATO's operations in Afghanistan.

European allies are under pressure to send more troops to Afghanistan after US President Barack Obama announced on Tuesday that Washington will send in 17,000 more troops in the coming months. But even Gates admitted that the likelihood of European allies committing significant numbers of additional troops is small. Obama is clearly shifting US priority from Iraq to Afghanistan. But European leaders are yet to convince their citizens that they also have a stake in the war in Afghanistan. So far only Italy has announced it will reinforce its contingent by 500 troops in Afghanistan.

The Czech Republic currently holds the EU's six-monthly rotating presidency.

The Czech leader criticised those EU politicians who "assume that there is only one possible correct future for European integration, which is ever closer union".

Trial of Iraqi shoe thrower postponed

BAGHDAD, 20 Feb—The trial of an Iraqi journalist who threw his shoes at US president George W Bush was postponed to 12 March, for differences exist on whether Bush's visit to Iraq was "official" one or not.

Chief Judge Faiq al-Zaidan ordered to postpone Thursday's session until he receive an answer from the office of the Iraqi Council of Ministers about whether Bush's visit to Iraq in mid December was an official one or not. Zaidan decided to send a letter to the office of Maliki's Cabinet as the defence team insisted that the charge filed against Zaidi is an insult and not an "assault on a foreign head of a state during official visit" which under the Iraqi law Zaidi would face up to 15 year in prison.

Aeromexico to decide on Mexico-Shanghai flights

MEXICO CITY, 20 Feb—Mexican airline Aeromexico said it wants to maintain its flights between Mexico City and Shanghai, China but sagging demand due to the global financial crisis has made it a difficult decision.

The company will decide next week whether or not to cancel its flights, Aeromexico's general director, Francisco Cuevas Feliu, told Xinhua on Thursday.

Cuevas Feliu said that in November the occupancy rate was between 75 and 80 percent, but in recent weeks it had dropped to 60 percent.

Aeromexico established two flights a week between Mexico City and Shanghai in May 2008 using Boeing 777 aircraft capable of accommodating 275 passengers.

Since then 21,000 Mexicans, Chinese and people from other countries have flown between the two cities on Aeromexico flights.

Cuevas Feliu said when the airline first started, "everything seemed an adventure."

He said the route had not achieved satisfactory results, but there was still optimism.

Financial protectionism worse than trade protectionism

HONG KONG, 20 Feb—Hong Kong Monetary Authority Chief Joseph Yam said on Thursday that financial protectionism was more dangerous than trade protectionism.

"Unlike trade protectionism, financial protectionism can spread quickly, possibly leading to a sharp reversal of capital flows, with destabilizing consequences for monetary and financial stability," said Yam in an article published on Thursday.

Globalization of financial markets, made possible by financial liberalization in individual economies, has been instrumental in the growth and development of the global economy, making the allocation and use of financial resources internationally more efficient, he said.

Many developing economies were therefore dependent upon external finance that was often mobilized by financial institutions in the developed economies, said the chief.

If these financial institutions were prevented by law or government policies from lending overseas so that more funds could be made available for domestic borrowers, external finance for the developing economies might dry up, he said.

Record 881 US auto dealerships closed in 2008

DETROIT, 20 Feb — A record 881 US auto dealerships closed in 2008, with Detroit's three struggling automakers representing 80 percent of the decline, according to data released on Thursday.

In the face of tight credit and a plunge in sales of cars and trucks, about 4.2 percent of the country's 20,084 auto dealerships shut their doors, according to data firm Urban Science.

The number of closures, the bulk of which occurred in the fourth quarter, represents the biggest decline since 1991 when the company started to collect data.

The lack of credit has made it difficult for dealers to finance their vehicle inventory and for customers to secure financing to buy vehicles.

General Motors Corp, Ford Motor Co, Chrysler have also encouraged their dealerships to consolidate in a bid to streamline their retail operations and reduce competition that has hit margins.

"There has been a loss of franchises across all the manufacturers, but the Detroit Three have been hit the hardest," said John Frith, vice president at Urban Science.

"We'll see even more contraction in the next several years as the Detroit Three strategically rethink their retail counts and locations."

Bahrain halts gas talks with Iran over insult

MANAMA, 20 Feb—Bahrain's foreign minister on Thursday blasted Iran for an Iranian official's remarks perceived as a threat to Bahraini sovereignty — a stinging rebuke a day after the tiny Gulf Arab kingdom halted talks on a key natural gas imports deal with Teheran.

Iranian officials, meanwhile, looked to soothe the rift sparked after former Iranian parliament speaker Ali Akbar Nateq Noori — a prominent cleric close to Iran's supreme leader — was quoted by Arab media last week as saying that Bahrain was the 14th province of Iran until 1970.

Bahrain's Foreign Minister Sheik Khalid bin Ahmed al-Khalifa said the remark was an "infringement of sovereignty" and a "distortion of historical fact."

"We are hurt by ... Iranian statements," he added. "These remarks must be silenced."

Bahrain fears Iran still holds its longtime claims to the island, ruled by a Sunni elite but with a poor Shiite majority that has close ties to the Shiite Iran.

Seeking to distance official Teheran from the statement, Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman Hasan Qashgavi said this week that Iran respects Bahrain's independence and has "no territorial claims against this country," according to the Iranian ministry Web site.

Energy giant BP to pay nearly $180 m to settle pollution case in Texas

HOUSTON, 20 Feb—The leading global energy company BP has agreed to pay nearly 180 million US dollars to settle a federal lawsuit over pollution at its Texas City refinery.

Under the settlement announced on Thursday, the international energy giant will spend 161 million dollars to reduce pollution at the refinery, another 12 million dollars in penalties and 6 million on a project to clean the air in the surrounding community.

Following a series of mergers and acquisitions, the BP became the largest oil and gas producer and one of the largest gasoline retailers in the United States by the end of 2001, with a focus on oil and gas production in the deepwater Gulf of Mexico near Houston.

BP’s settlement with the US Department

Even deactivated, grenade a bad show-and-tell idea

Officials cleared out a Dallas-area elementary school briefly on Thursday morning after a second-grade student brought a deactivated hand grenade for show and tell. Eulless police Lt John Williams says the student walked into his classroom with the grenade at Oakwood Terrace Elementary School. The teacher took it, placed it on a desk and notified the principal.

The school was evacuated until police arrived and inspected the object. Williams says that although the grenade still had a pin, it had a hole at the bottom and was empty — the sort of thing that might be used as a paperweight.

No injuries were reported. Students returned to their classrooms after 15 minutes, and the unidentified student was getting a good talking to from police.

Opportune time, circumstances and changes

U Swe (Bahan)

Man has learnt many lessons of time. Sometimes we have to wait for a period of time, and sometimes we have to catch up on time. Here, what is true is that time never waits for us, and we can never go back to the past. Everything changes as time passes. Have a look at yourself. Everything is impermanent. Every living thing is mortal. Science defines death 'no more cells recycling'. That means cells recycle until death. The body of a living thing always changes due to the new cells that recycle as time goes by.

However, in a short time, those changes are indistinct, but they become distinct after months and years have elapsed. Man changes both physically and mentally at all times. To be frank, I wish our physical and mental changes were all perfect. However, we should consider that everything, good or bad, runs its course. In reality, we are not able to control our body, let alone perfect changes.

Years pass and a person forms a family; families form a clan; and clans form an ethnic group. Ethnic groups, territory, government and sovereignty form a nation. In fact, a country has its own name and location, based on its people. So, it is safe to say that a nation is constituted with minds and bodies of each of the people. So, it is completely acceptable that everything associated with man changes continuously. People seek ways and means to improve all the changes. Therefore, things related to the human society are changing variously. Any person cannot make perfect changes for him, so it is very hard to make perfect changes for many people in no time.

For example, in a couple of decades, the United States of America, the world's richest country, has seen four presidential and regime changes according to the so-called world exemplary democracy system and constitution. Now, the US is facing the financial crisis and economic crisis, and has waged two unfinished wars. It is also attracting a growing dissatisfaction and displeasure of the majority of the world countries. US citizens expressed their choices with the hopes of best changes they had expected for many years. In practice, however, the country has not seen perfect changes. Thailand, one of Myanmar's immediate neighbours, has seen many changes in 20 years including three military coups followed by changes of prime ministers and governments. Last year alone, the country faced changes of prime ministers. The people split into two groups in the process of electing a new government, and that was very risky. Thai people expressed their choices, looking forward to best changes, but in practice they did not have their wishes fulfilled.

In 2010, Myanmar will see a new government to be elected by the people and a new executive system, for which the government has pledged, made arrangements, and paved the way.

Now, the entire Myanmar people are eager to see a political change, as evidenced by the results of the referendum held in May and June 2008 in which 92.48 per cent of the voters expressed their support for the State constitution designed for democratic transition. The government has announced the programmes including the timeframe for the changes. In 2010, Myanmar will see a new government to be elected by the people and a new executive system, for which the government has pledged, made arrangements, and paved the way. Therefore, the democratic transition process contains the government's management and control to some extent. Nonetheless, some are claiming that the people should not accept the process because the government's management in that regard is not perfect. Really, even old democracies never made perfect changes at one go.

I am upset by the acts of a group of pessimists. In my opinion, their demand for a dialogue and negotiation without pre-conditions do not conform at all with the objective conditions. And their acts evoked my memories of the conditions of Japan that was about to be defeated in the end of the World War II. Hiroshima and Nagasaki lost lives of so many innocent people and a great deal of property. The objective conditions at the time brought the best historic results to Japanese King Hirohito with Kamikaze spirit who absolutely hated to accept defeat. Japan made a correct decision to yield to the wishes of and join hands with the Allies in order to bring glory back to its history. Sixty years after that Japan was able to stand as a militarily, economically strong country. Then, the points of the democracy-like agreement it signed with the Allies after the defeat in 1945 dwindled away. The country became a member of the world's greatest industrial countries. Even its armed forces formed just for self-defence could send its troops to the Iraq battlefield. None of today's Japanese citizens blames their king for yielding to the Allies, but all Japanese people admire and love him for his vision.

Now, Myanmar is not fighting a war, and the two sides are not enemies, either. Indeed, they are getting involved in a dispute of how to pave the way to generate a prosperous future of the motherland. In this case, what they need is just to work in accordance with the sole common goal. Even senior democracies make changes without sacrificing the foundation. After the World War II, there was a heated debate among the Allies over whether members of the previous government and Nazi Party should be included in a new government for reconstruction of Germany. Eventually, they agreed with the formation of the government with old members. Following the US conquest over Iraq, discussions were held immensely to decide on whether Barth Party and Iraq armed forces should be dissolved or not. After their dissolution, national reformation process was followed by bloodshed for over a half decade. Above-mentioned points are only some evidences that indicate what should be done for the most appropriate changes of a nation.

Human beings by nature like changes, and do things individually or in organization to make some changes. In the process, they hold the hope of the best results. In this regard, the process should be carried out in accordance with the objective conditions, circumstances and time. Actually, it is very hard for a person to make perfect changes in a short time. At first, stand in front of a mirror and look at yourself through it to find out that you have achieved all the changes that you have longed for previous years, on your body and mind. Then, balance between objective conditions and your changes. No one thinks that they have achieved perfect changes. I wish certain persons would realize and accept that perfect changes of millions of people of a nation are impossible at one stroke. So, it is needed to work to achieve perfect changes little by little according to the objective conditions, circumstances and time. I would like to remind them that if they waste present opportune time, favourable circumstances and changes, they will never get such unique opportunities again.

US study ties food to stroke risk

CHICAGO, 20 Feb — People who live in neighbourhoods packed with fast-food restaurants are more likely to suffer strokes, US researchers said on Thursday.

They said residents of one Texas county who lived in neighbourhoods with the highest number of fast-food restaurants had a 13-per-cent higher risk of experiencing a stroke than those in neighbourhoods with the fewest such restaurants.

The study, presented at the American Stroke Association's International Stroke Conference, does not prove living near fast-food restaurants raises the risk of stroke, but it does suggest the two are linked in some way.

"The data show a true association," Dr Lewis Morgenstern of the University of Michigan's stroke programme, who led the study, said in a statement.

But he said it is not clear whether being surrounded by fast-food means you eat more of it, or that it is simply a sign of an unhealthy neighbourhood.

"We need to start unraveling why these particular communities have higher stroke risks," Morgenstern said. "Is it direct consumption of fast food? Is it the lack of more healthy options? Is there something completely different in these neighbourhoods that is associated with poor health" he asked.

British couple arrested with 52 pounds of cocaine travelling with four kids

CARACAS, 20 Feb—Two British citizens were arrested on Monday by police in Venezuela for suspected drugs offenses, leaving four children in the care of the country's social services.

The Foreign Office said the pair were arrested at the airport on the island of Margarita, off the north coast of the country. They were accompanied by four minors, who were taken into care by the authorities.

"I can confirm that two British nationals were arrested at Margarita Airport in Venezuela on 16 February," a spokeswoman for the Foreign Office said. "Four accompanying minors are in the care of Venezuelan social services. We are providing appropriate consular assistance."

The spokeswoman could not confirm if the two people arrested were a couple, or the children part of their family. The adults were reportedly arrested at the airport while allegedly carrying cocaine hidden in three suitcases. Sky News reported that the Britons arrested were a couple and were allegedly found with 52 pounds of cocaine at the airport.

Volcano erupts in southern Chile

Clouds of smoke hung over Chaiten after last May's massive eruption.—INTERNET

CHAITEN, 20 Feb — Chile has evacuated more than 150 people who had returned to the southern town of Chaiten after it was destroyed by a volcanic eruption last year. Authorities decided to take action after the Chaiten volcano erupted again on Thursday, sending a stream of lava down its slopes.

Authorities say no-one will be allowed to stay in the area, in Patagonia. But many of Chaiten's 4,500 former residents have resisted government plans to relocate the town. Deputy Interior Minister Patricio Rosende said the volcano had seen "a significant resumption of activity".

"Our security team has observed an increase in the size of a column of ash and smoke, with a deformation to one side," he said. "That leads us to presume that there is a collapse of one of the cones. This is more proof of the imminent risk in the area. It is a time-bomb."

The volcano, which is 10km (6 miles) from the town, had been dormant for 9,000 years before last May's spectacular eruption. Vast clouds of smoke and ash soared more than 30km into the sky, as the debris reached neighbouring Argentina and disrupted flights.

At the time, officials said the volcano's two craters had fused, helping ease pressure. But a government expert on volcanoes warned there could be a big eruption at any time. —Internet

Anti-social behaviour predicts depression

SEATTLE, 20 Feb — Anti-social behaviour among girls and anxiety among both sexes predicted depression in early adolescence, US researchers found. University of Washington social scientists tracked first- and second-graders for seven years and found that surprisingly, early signs of depression were not predictive of adolescent depression.

"Anti-social behaviour has typically been viewed as a big problem among boys, so it tends to be ignored among girls. Boys with early anti-social behaviour typically go on to show more anti-social behaviour while girls may turn inward with symptoms, morphing into other mental health problems such as depression eating disorders, anxiety and suicidal behaviour during adolescence," lead author James Mazza said in a statement.

"When all the risk factors were analyzed, anti-social behavior and anxiety were the most predictive of later depression.

It just may be that they are more prevalent in the early elementary school years than depression." More than 800 children participated in the study. Eighty-one percent were white and 54 percent were boys.

The findings are published in the online edition of The Journal of Early Adolescence.—Internet

Woman sues for receiving wrong egg during IVF

TOKYO, 20 Feb—A Japanese woman was impregnated with the fertilised egg of another woman by accident during an in vitro procedure last year, hospital officials have said.

The woman, who is in her twenties, aborted the pregnancy when she was told of the mistake at the government-run hospital in Kagawa prefecture, about 330 miles south-west of Tokyo. She is now suing the local government for £155,000. Hospital officials apologized for the mistake on Thursday.

"She was very happy after undergoing such a difficult procedure and becoming pregnant, but unfortunately a mistake had been made," said Yuzo Matsumoto, director of the Kagawa Prefectural Central Hospital.

The hospital has a long history of carrying out such procedures, and this is the first time such a mistake has occurred, hospital spokesman Hajime Morishita said.

"The in vitro procedures are carried out in sequence one after the other, and in this case the eggs from one procedure may have accidentally been left over and used in the following procedure," he said.

In vitro procedures—in which a woman's eggs are removed, fertilised outside the womb, and placed in her uterus to cause a pregnancy—are common in Japan, with hundreds of thousands carried out per year. Surrogate births, in which eggs are removed for fertilisation and implanted in another woman, and adoptions are rare in the country.

JOHANNESBURG, 20 Feb — Tickets for the 2010 Fifa World Cup in South Africa are due to go on sale as Africa prepares to host the contest for the first time. Around 3m tickets will be avail-

Some 120,000 cheaper tickets are being reserved for South African residents, and 40,000 stadium construction workers are to be given free access to matches. Although the tournament does not begin for 475 days, there is already huge excitement about the competition in Africa, says BBC Southern Africa correspondent Peter Biles in Johannesburg.

Ever since South Africa was awarded the football World Cup, questions have been asked about whether the country is capable of staging a successful tournament, says our correspondent. But stadiums and airports are being upgraded, and policing will be improved. At least 400,000 visitors are expected in South Africa next year. Fifa has said it hopes every single match will be sold out.

NASA spacecraft to seek out Earth-like planets

WASHINGTON, 20 Feb — A US spacecraft totting the biggest camera ever sent into space will be launched next month to scour our region of the Milky Way galaxy for warm, rocky planets like Earth that may host life,

NASA said on Thursday.

The Kepler spacecraft is scheduled to spend 3-1/2 years looking at more than 100,000 stars similar to our sun, seeking evidence of planets similar in size and composition to Earth. Kepler is scheduled to blast off from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station in Florida aboard a Delta II rocket on 5 March, the US space agency said. Colorado-based Ball Aerospace and Technologies, a subsidiary of Ball Corp, built it.

People long have pondered whether life exists elsewhere in the universe or whether Earth alone hosts living beings. "Kepler will push back the boundaries of the unknown in our patch of the Milky Way galaxy. And its discoveries may fundamentally alter humanity's view of itself," Jon Morse, director of NASA's astrophysics division, told reporters.

Two teens die after more stabbings in London

LONDON, 20 Feb — Police have launched murder enquiries after two teenagers were stabbed to death in different parts of London on Thursday night.

An 18-year old man was fatally stabbed in Leytonstone, east London, opposite Maryland railway station. One line of enquiry is that the death is gang related, the Metropolitan police said in a statement.

Police said the victim was knifed in the torso and was taken to Royal London hospital but died shortly after arriving.

Scotland Yard also said a 19-year-old was stabbed to death outside a service station in Wealdstone, northwest London, on Thursday.

He was pronounced dead at the scene. A second 19-year-old man also suffered stab wounds in the incident and was taken to a west London hospital where his condition is said to be stable.

No arrests have been made in either incident. The killings come after three boys were stabbed by a group of teenagers in a suspected gang fight in Chingford, east London, on Wednesday.

Woods to make PGA Tour comeback next week

PACIFIC PALISADES, 20 Feb—Tiger Woods will return to the PGA Tour at next week's WGC-Match Play Championship in Arizona after being sidelined by knee injury since his US Open victory last year.

"I'm now ready to play again," the American world number one said on his official website (www.tigerwoods.com) on Thursday.

Woods, whose wife Elin gave birth to the couple's second child earlier this month, clinched his 14th major title at Torrey Pines in June before having reconstructive knee surgery.

He has not played competitive golf since his astonishing US Open playoff victory over Rocco Mediate.

Defying stabbing knee pain and a double stress fracture of his left tibia, Woods held off a late challenge by Mediate to triumph after 19 holes and claim his 65th PGA Tour title.

After recovering from knee surgery, he began hitting full shots midway through December and has made his top priority the 9-12 April US Masters, the opening major of the year.—Internet

Unlucky Eduardo out for two weeks with hamstring strain

LONDON, 20 Feb—Eduardo da Silva, who this week made a two-goal return to Arsenal action after almost a year on the sidelines, will be out of action for another two weeks with a hamstring strain, the club said on Thursday.

The Croatia striker, who suffered a badly broken leg a year ago this weekend, helped Arsenal to a 4-0 victory over Cardiff City in the FA Cup on Monday but tweaked a hamstring shortly before being substituted after 67 minutes. "Nobody knows how it happened but I knew straight away after the game it would be a two-week job," Arsene Wenger told Arsenal TV.

"It is nothing like he had before but I do know that little set-backs like this are part of being nine months out. But at the same time it is a blow because, of course, he can score goals."—Internet

Gazidis confident Arsenal can weather recession storm

LONDON, 20 Feb—Arsenal chief executive Ivan Gazidis has joined the Premier League club in the midst of a global recession, although you might not realise it if you take a trip to their impressive Emirates Stadium.

"I believe we are going to be very successful. We have some unbelievable assets that are going to mean that in the environment that we are heading into, which is challenging for everybody over the next few years, we are going to be very successful," Gazidis told Reuters in an interview.

Gazidis, who took over the post last month, will handle player contracts and negotiations at Arsenal. He has played a key role in the emergence of Major League Soccer in the United States over the past 15 years, including bringing David Beckham to the US.—Internet

Greek refereeing head replaced after "comedy" complaint

ATHENS, 20 Feb—The head of Greek football's Central Referees Committee has been asked to resign after three Super League referees were threatened with suspension this week.

A spokesman for the Greek Football Association said on Thursday Giorgos Psychomanis would be replaced by former referee Giorgos Giannopoulos following a series of controversial incidents in the weekend's games.

Aris Salonika were so incensed after a 2-1 defeat by champions Olympiakos Piraeus that they posted a statement on their website (<http://www.arisfc.gr>) demanding the suspension of referee Nathaniel Charalabidis and his two assistants.—Internet

Milan closer to Beckham deal, says Galliani

MILAN, 20 Feb—AC Milan vice-president Adriano Galliani said on Thursday that the Italian giants have moved a step closer to tying up a permanent deal for former England captain David Beckham.

Beckham has impressed during his time on loan at the Italian giants and both he and his club have made it clear that they want to secure a long-term agreement. But the former Manchester United and Real Madrid player's current club Los Angeles Galaxy said last week that Milan had missed a deadline to tie up a deal.

"In the last few hours we've taken some steps forward," said Galliani upon the team's return from the 1-1 draw with Werder Bremen in the UEFA Cup. "We are even more confident than before. I'm neither optimistic nor pessimistic."

Beckham has already admitted it would be difficult to return to Los Angeles. "I've said I want to stay here and obviously if I do go back it will be a bit difficult," he said following Sunday's Milan derby. "But I'm always professional so we will have to wait and see when the final decision is made."—Internet

Injured Nadal pulls out of Dubai

PARIS, 20 Feb—World number one Rafael Nadal on Thursday pulled out of next week's ATP tournament in Dubai because of a knee injury, the Spaniard announced on his website. Nadal joins Roger Federer on the sidelines for the UAE event after the Swiss star withdrew because of a back problem.

"I am very disappointed not to be able to compete in Dubai but the doctor has advised me to stay home and rest after the pain on my knee (which was picked up) in Rotterdam last week," Australian Open champion Nadal told his personal website.

"It's nothing to be worried about but it needs some rest. I ask my fans and the tournament organizers to understand and I am sorry for this." Dubai is one of my favourite tournaments and I have always played there. The field is always great and more important the crowds are always supportive.—Internet

Djokovic into Marseille last eight

MARSEILLE, 20 Feb—World number three Novak Djokovic eased into the quarter-finals of the Marseille ATP indoor tournament on Thursday as the Serbian continued his rehabilitation from his Australian Open nightmare.

Djokovic saw off Czech journeyman Jan Hernych 7-5, 6-4 and will tackle Germany's Mischa Zverev for a place in the semi-finals. Top seed Djokovic is playing in his first tournament since retiring from his Australian Open quarter-final clash against Andy Roddick last month where heat exhaustion scuppered his title defence.—Internet

Copenhagen's Vingaard delivers new City blow

PARIS, 20 Feb—FC Copenhagen's Martin Vingaard hit an injury-time goal to force a 2-2 draw at home to Manchester City in the UEFA Cup on Thursday to inflict another blow after coach Stale Solbakken accused the English side of "destroying football."

On a bitter-sweet night for English football, a second-string Tottenham lost 2-0 at Shakhtar Donetsk in their last 32 match, with manager Harry Redknapp only fielding two players—Jermaine Jenas and Michael Dawson—which drew against Arsenal in their last match.—Internet

Juve's Amauri to respect former club Palermo

MILAN, 20 Feb—Juventus striker Amauri has said he will not celebrate if he scores at former club Palermo on Saturday (1930 GMT), even if the goal helps boost his side's faltering title challenge.

Second-placed Juve have dropped nine points behind Serie A leaders Inter Milan after last weekend's 1-1 draw with Sampdoria where Amauri scored his first goal since December. Another slip-up in the potential banana skin in Sicily, coupled with a win for Inter at Bologna on Saturday (1500), could leave Juve's scudetto hopes hanging by a thread.

6,313 prisoners granted amnesty

NAY PYI TAW, 20 Feb—The State Peace and Development Council is striving for emergence of a peaceful, modern and developed discipline-flourishing democratic new nation upholding Our Three Main National Causes. The Government had laid down the State's seven-step Road Map firmly. The people had approved the constitution for the future state with a vast majority. At present, the government is joining hands with the people in successfully realizing the Road Map.

In building the new nation, the government handed down sentences to those who violated the existing laws to prison terms in accord with the law to ensure peace and tranquillity and prevalence of law and order. However, systematic plans are being made for those serving prison terms to turn them into citizens to be able to participate in building a new nation.

The government will terminate the prison terms of 6,313 prisoners with good conduct and discipline on grounds of humanitation and as a gesture of showing sympathy towards their families, and release them on 21 February 2009 (12th Waning of Tabodwe, 1370 ME) to enable them to serve the interests of the regions and their own and the nation and to participate in the fair election to be held in the year 2010 together with the people after realizing the government's compassion and goodwill.—MNA
