ASEAN countries to boost economic cooperation

Prime Minister of the Union of Myanmar General Thein Sein attended the 14th ASEAN Summit and related meetings held in Hua Hin, Thailand, on 28 February and 1 March at the invitation of his Thai counterpart Mr Abhisit Vejjajiva.

At the 14th ASEAN Summit Retreat, Heads of State/Government of ASEAN countries held discussions on implementation of ASEAN Charter, exchange of views on regional and international issues, global financial crisis, disaster management, food and energy security, and regional and international situations.

Then, they signed the Declaration on Roadmap for ASEAN Community. After the 14th ASEAN Summit Retreat, the foreign affairs ministers of ASEAN countries signed the ASEAN Petroleum Security Agreement. At the working dinner for ASEAN Economic Ministers, the economic ministers inked ASEAN Trade in Goods Agreement, ASEAN Comprehensive Investment Agreement, protocol to implement the 7th Package of Commitments under ASEAN Framework Agreement on Services, and 3 programmes for mutual recognition of ASEAN Quality.

ASEAN is now trying hard to boost regional economic cooperation as part of the drive for establishing ASEAN economic community by 2015. Being rich in natural resources and human resources, ASEAN region has economic opportunities and attracts the attention of investors.

Now, ASEAN members have endorsed the Declaration on Roadmap for ASEAN Community. When ASEAN Community comes into existence, the peoples of ASEAN members will be able to enjoy progress in the fields of peace, stability, prosperity, social affairs and culture.

ASEAN countries can enjoy greater regional development in the near future if they keep on boosting trade and investment and cooperation in the economic sector in accordance with the fine tradition of their unity.

US Justice Department say CIA destroys almost 100 interrogation videos

WASHINGTON, 3 March—The US Justice Department issued documents on Monday showing that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has destroyed almost 100 interrogation videos recorded during the former Bush administration.

The CIA can now identify the number of videotapes that were destroyed,” Acting US Attorney Lev Dassin wrote in a letter dated 2 March to New York Judge Alvin Hellerstein. “Ninety-two videotapes were destroyed.”

The letter was submitted at the request of the New York judge who is handling a lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), and seeking more details of interrogation programs under Bush’s government.

“The large number of videotapes destroyed confirms that the agency engaged in a systematic attempt to hide evidence of its illegal interrogations and to evade the court’s order,” ACLU attorney Amrit Singh said in a statement, adding that CIA should be held accountable for holding back the information for so long.

The newly-released number was far more than the number that was previously acknowledged by CIA.

NATO may ask China for support in Afghanistan

BRUSSELS, 3 March—NATO may ask China to provide support for the war effort in Afghanistan, including possibly opening a supply link for alliance forces, a senior US official said Monday.

The subject is still under consideration and no decision has been reached on whether to approach Beijing, the official said on condition of anonymity given the sensitivity of the issue. He spoke ahead of a meeting of NATO foreign ministers on Thursday in Brussels, which will include Hillary Rodham Clinton in her first European trip as US secretary of state.

One way Beijing could help would be to open an alternate logistics route through western China into Afghanistan, the US official said in Brussels.

China shares a 76-kilometer- (50-mile)-long border with Afghanistan in the Wakhan Corridor, a thin sparsely populated strip of Afghan territory separating Pakistan and Tajikistan. The 2,000-year-old caravan route — once used by Marco Polo — is now a dirt road that crosses some of the world’s most mountainous regions.

Until now, China — which also has faced problems with Islamic militants in its western regions — has generally been supportive of the Afghan government and the US-led allied war effort.

Bicycle bomb kills three and wounds 20 in Iraq

A bomb set in a bicycle exploded on Monday afternoon near a Shiite mosque in Khalisin of Diyala province, killing three civilians and wounding 20 others, most of them are children and women, the source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

Eleven of the wounded were seriously injured and transferred to local hospital for treatment, the source added. Diyala province is considered one of the most dangerous places in Iraq, where al-Qaida and various insurgent groups still manage to launch attacks despite a general decrease in violence levels in the country.—Internet

US military deaths in Iraq war at 4,254

WASHINGTON, 3 March—As of Monday, 2 March, 2009, at least 4,254 members of the US military had died in the Iraq war since it began in March 2003.

The British military has reported 179 deaths; Italy, 33; Ukraine, 18; Poland, 21; Bulgaria, 13; Spain, 11; Denmark, seven; El Salvador, five; Slovakia, four; Latvia and Georgia, three each; Estonia, Netherlands, Thailand and Romania, two each; and Australia, Hungary, Kazakhstan and South Korea, one death each.—Internet

Afghan civilians could bear brunt of increased war

KABUL, 3 March—Afghan civilians will bear the brunt of an escalation in the Afghan war this year as thousands more US troops deploy unless more is done by NATO forces and Taliban militants to protect them, a top Red Cross official said Monday.

Civilian casualties in Afghanistan are “significantly higher” today than a year ago, and an intensification of the conflict this year could mean that consequences for many more Afghans will be “dire in the extreme,” said Pierre Krahenbuhl, the director of operations for the International Committee of the Red Cross.

“The daily lives of people living in areas where the fighting is taking place are being disrupted, be it because of airstrikes, night raids, suicide attacks, the use of IEDs, or because of intimidation and the population being pressurized or co-opted by the different parties to this conflict,” he said.

The UN last month said 2,118 civilians died in the Afghan conflict in 2008, a 40 percent jump over 2007. The world body said insurgent attacks caused 55 percent of those deaths, while US, NATO or government forces caused 39 percent of the deaths. The remaining 6 percent were caused in crossfire.

The NATO-led force said Monday that an operation in Helmand province on 23 Feb killed eight civilians. A joint NATO-Afghan investigation found that militants used civilian houses and religious facilities for “terrorist activities” in Sangin district when they ambushed a NATO patrol, a statement said.—Internet

New US envoy on North Korea heads to region

BEIJING, 3 March—The Obama Administration’s new chief emissary on North Korea, Stephen Bosworth, is scheduled to arrive in China on Tuesday for initial discussions on how to coax a wary Pyongyang toward fresh nuclear disarmament steps.

Beijing will be Bosworth’s first stop on his first visit to the region since he was nominated last month for the job of overseeing protracted nuclear negotiations with North Korea, which the United States fears is also preparing a missile launch.

Swedish Foreign Minister Carl Bildt, also in Beijing, said Chinese officials also worried about a possible North Korean missile launch.

“They (the Chinese) are obviously concerned with the risk of raising tensions,” Bildt said of North Korea’s moves.

But no breakthroughs are expected on Bosworth’s first visit.

Chinese doctors urged to stub out killer habit of smoking

BEIJING, 3 March — China's Health Minister Chen Zhu on Sunday urged health and medical workers to quit smoking and set a good example for people to follow, on Tuesday's China Daily reported.

"Medical workers and those who take the decisions regarding people's health should take the lead to quit smoking and completely ban indoor smoking to set a good example for their patients and others who look up to them," the minister said as he launched a campaign to discourage smoking among medical staff.

About 56.8 percent of male doctors in the country smoke.

It is the highest rate in the world, according to the China Preventive Medicine Association (CPMA).

Despite finding success in holding a "smoke-free" Olympics last year, the country continues to face difficulties getting its citizens to give up the killer habit due to lack of relevant legislations, policy implementation and awareness campaigns, Chen said.—Xinhua

Australia expected to send more troops to Afghanistan

CANBERRA, 3 March — Australian Foreign Minister Stephen Smith said on Tuesday he would not be surprised if the US requests Australia to deploy more troops to Afghanistan.

"It will, of course, be of no surprise if we do," Smith told Sky News.

The subject of Afghanistan is likely to come up when Australian Prime Minister Kevin Rudd and US President Barack Obama meet in Washington on 24 March.

"There is an overarching review, known as the Riedel Review, which the international community is contributing to, including, importantly, Afghanistan and also Pakistan," Smith said.

Landslide kills 13 miners in Peru

LIMA, 3 March — At least 13 people were killed and more than 17 others were missing after a landslide buried a remote Peruvian mining village Monday, local media reported.

The landslide, caused by heavy rain, occurred in Winchomayo, a remote village in Carabaya province, about 1,300 kilometers southeast of Lima, between 6 a.m. and 7 a.m. (1100 GMT and 1200 GMT).

Chinese Navy fleet warns of danger in Gulf of Aden

GULF OF ADEN, 3 March —The commander of the Chinese naval fleet that is patrolling in the Gulf of Aden on Monday warned that piracy remains a problem in the gulf and urged passing ships to be on guard.

Rear Admiral Du Jingchen said that despite recent successes in thwarting pirate raids, the Gulf of Aden is still not yet safe for commercial vessels.

In the past week alone, more than 100 raids by suspicious small ships occurred in the gulf.

The Chinese cargo ship Yandanghai was attacked 25 Feb by pirates in the gulf and two of its crewmembers were slightly injured. The Chinese fleet escorted the cargo ship to safe waters and helped treat the injured crewmembers after a Danish ship chased off the pirates.

The fleet also rescued an Italian merchant ship from approaching pirates in the sea off Somalia last Thursday.

One job to be lost every 25 seconds in next three months in Britain

LONDON, 3 March—About 320,000 jobs look set to be lost in the next three months as the recession hits home in Britain, equating to a job lost every 25 seconds, experts warned.

If the cull continued at the same rate for the rest of the year unemployment would hit 3.06 million when job losses are seen in all sectors of business, from services to manufacturing, and among both large and small firms, business adviser BDO Stoy Hayward predicted.

“Businesses are taking swift and decisive action to tackle the challenges of the recession,” its report said.

The jobless total in Britain now stands at 1.97 million. In a glimmer of hope, the report indicates its optimism index, which predicts business confidence for the next two quarters rose slightly in February compared with January.

Meanwhile, the Engineering Employers’ Federation (EEF) warned more than 140,000 manufacturing posts would be lost this year.

The EEF predicted the sector would shrink by 8.6 percent this year, the worst decline since the recession of the 1980s.

One-third of Americans losing sleep over economy

WASHINGTON, 3 March—One-third of Americans are losing sleep over the state of the US economy and other personal financial concerns, a new poll says.

The poll, released Monday by the National Sleep Foundation (NSF), suggests that inadequate sleep is associated with unhealthy lifestyles and negatively impacts health and safety.

The number of people reporting sleep problems has increased 13 percent since 2001. In the past eight years, the number of Americans who sleep less than six hours a night jumped from 13 percent to 20 percent, and those who reported sleeping eight hours or more dropped from 38 percent to 28 percent. “It’s easy to understand why so many people are concerned over the economy and jobs, but sacrificing sleep is the wrong solution,” said David Cloud, chief executive officer of the Washington-based foundation.

“Sleep is essential for productivity and alertness and is a vital sign for one’s overall health,” he added.

About 40 percent of Americans agree that sleep is as important as diet and exercise to overall health and well-being; yet, only 32 percent of Americans who report sleep problems discuss them with their doctor.

BAGHDAD, 3 March—One of Iran’s most powerful political and religious figures — former President Hashemi Rafsanjani — promised Monday to assist in Iraq’s reconstruction after nearly six years of war that has involved Shiite militias with suspected links to Tehran.

“We hope the era of conflict and hardships for Iraq is coming to an end,” Rafsanjani told reporters in his first visit to Iraq since Iran’s 1979 Islamic Revolution.

Iran, a predominantly Shiite country, has close ties with Iraq’s Shiite-led government and seeks to expand its commercial links as Iraq looks ahead to projects to rebuild roads and core services such as electrical networks and sewers.

The industry previously experienced its worst decline in 2001 when PC shipments contracted 3.2 percent.

RAFAN, 3 March—As top diplomats pledged billions of dollars for war-ravaged Gaza on Monday, ordinary people here — from merchants to housewives — said they’d rather have open borders than handouts.

Even some tunnel smugglers who profit from Gaza’s blockaded borders say they’d rather import legally through open crossings than risk Israeli bombing raids and shaft collapses.

Fla county may declare itself disaster area

PORT ST LUCIE, 3 March —Just five years ago, Port St Lucie was America's fastest-growing large city. Then the foreclosure crisis slammed it like a hurricane.

Today it sits in one of the hardest-hit counties in the nation. Thousands of houses are empty or unfinished. Neighborhoods are littered with for-sale and foreclosure signs and overgrown, neglected yards. Break-ins are on the rise.

But one politician believes he has a unique solution: Declare St Lucie County a disaster area as if it had been hit by, well, a hurricane.

"This is a manmade disaster," County Commissioner Doug Coward acknowledged. But he said that is why "we've got to do something. Clearly, the economic crisis of the country far exceeds the ability of local governments to solve it, but we're trying to be a part of the solution."

The declaration would allow the county to suspend the usual bidding process for shovel-ready projects so that local contractors would get the jobs. It would also enable government officials to use some of the money in a $17.5 million county fund usually reserved for natural disasters.

Anger really can kill you: study

Anger and other strong emotions can trigger potentially deadly heart rhythms in certain vulnerable people, US researchers said on Monday.

Previous studies have shown that earthquakes, war or even the loss of a World Cup Soccer match can increase rates of death from sudden cardiac arrest, in which the heart stops circulating blood.

"It's definitely been shown in all different ways that when you put a whole population under a stressor that sudden death will increase," said Dr Rachel Lampert of Yale University in New Haven, Connecticut, whose study appears in the Journal of the American College of Cardiology.

Taxi runs over crocodile in Aussie town

A taxi driver ran over and killed a crocodile in the central business district of an Australian town on Wednesday, police said.

When the driver reported the accident, "police thought he may have been a bit strange or under the influence of liquor or something but it was all above board," said Inspector Ray Pringle.

The taxi collided with the one metre (three foot) croc while driving in Mount Isa, Pringle said.

"Sure enough when they went down, there was this freshwater croc," he told the Australian Broadcasting Corporation.

"It was quite severely injured and they looked at opportunities to save its life but the injuries were so bad it passed away."

The new cruise ship AIDAluna started its trip from the shipyard to the ocean with what will likely be one of its closest passages on the narrow Ems River. The 252-meter (827-foot) long ship will make its first voyage in the North Sea then go back to the docks for a final check.

Hsinthay Dam located 16 miles north of Nay Pyi Taw Tatkon.

We, members of the news team, together with Staff Officer U Khin Maung San of Irrigation Department went to the dam by motorcycle through a hill.

After passing through Dahatgon Village, we saw a reinforced concrete type diversion weir. Hsinthay Diversion Weir has a 29-mile-long right canal and a 12-mile-long left canal. Tributary canals from the two main canals are supplying water to the farmlands. The right canal that flows towards south is ir-making preparations for cultivation of summer paddy with the use of irrigation facility and some have already grown summer paddy.

The left main canal flows to the north and supplying water to the cultivable lands in Myaukmyaik, Inbin, Gyokon, Magyikon, Naungthinkha, Byaikin and Kyetthunkhin village-tracts.

The news team left the diversion weir and passed through Myaukmyaik and Alekyun villages. In the recent cultivation season, those villages had put the lands under Ngwechi-6 staple cotton.

the hilltop, we witnessed the panoramic views such as farmlands, hills and forests and the water body of Hsinthay Dam. We saw a signboard of caution that it was a restricted area. At a time when Forest Department is carrying out establishment of forests along the hillside of the mountain range, the tending of cattle, the setting fire to bushes and the cutting of wood are prohibited in the region. Therefore, we saw teak and valuable hardwood trees with the thickness of human calf or arm along the hillside. In coming 14 to 15 years, these trees would cover the region if 32,400 acres of farmlands. Thanks to Hsinthay Dam, the water can be supplied to 15,000 acres of monsoon paddy and 10,000 acres of summer paddy.”

The earthen embankment of the dam is 1,350 feet long and 109 feet high. It has 308 square miles of watershed area. A total of 110,000 acre feet of water flows into the dam yearly. The dam can store 143,890 acre feet of water at the full brim and 17,303 acre feet of water at the lowest level. The dam has 12.9

supply of water, construction of dams, implementation of river water pumping projects and building of dikes for uplifting the livelihood of the rural people. Hsinthay Dam is one of 218 dams built in the time of Tatmadaw Government. Thanks to construction of Hsinthay Dam, the rural people are enjoying the fruits of agriculture sector based on irrigation facilities.

Physical fitness improves spatial memory

SCIENCE DAILY, 3 March — When it comes to the hippocampus, a brain structure vital to certain types of memory, size matters.

Numerous studies have shown that bigger is usually better. Now researchers have found that elderly adults who are more physically fit tend to have bigger hippocampi and better spatial memory than those who are less fit.

The study, in the journal Hippocampus, shows that hippocampus size in physically fit adults accounts for about 40 percent of their advantage in spatial memory.

The hippocampus, a curved structure deep inside the medial temporal lobe of the brain, is essential to memory formation. Remove it – as was done in the well-known case of surgical patient Henry Gustav Molaison – and a person's ability to store most new experiences in memory is destroyed.

The hippocampus also is a key player in spatial navigation and other types of relational memory.

Certain activities are believed to modify hippocampus size in humans. For example, a study of London taxi drivers found that the posterior portion of the hippocampus was larger in experienced taxi drivers than in other subjects. — Internet

ICRC says more must be done to protect Afghan civilians

KABUL, 3 March—All sides in the war in Afghanistan must do much more to protect civilians who will face the brunt of any increase in violence with the arrival of thousands of new troops, a top Red Cross official said on Monday.

Ordinary Afghans were now more at risk from the fighting than at any other time since the start of the war in 2001, said Pierre Kraehenbuehl, director of operations for the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC).

Kraehenbuehl told a news conference unless much more was done by the different parties to the conflict to respect their obligations under international humanitarian law “the ICRC seriously fears that the Afghan population will bear the brunt of the announced and potential escalation”.

Violence in Afghanistan surged last year with some 5,000 people killed, including more than 2,100 civilians, a 40-per-cent increase on the previous year, the United Nations says.

President Barack Obama has ordered 17,000 additional US troops to Afghanistan to bolster some 70,000 foreign troops, including 38,000 US soldiers already in the country fighting a resurgent Taliban.

FAO reports about 24,000 fishermen die at sea annually

ROME, 3 March—Some 24,000 fishermen die at sea each year, making fishing probably the most dangerous occupation in the world, the United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) said in a report released on Monday.

The figure is “unacceptable”, said the FAO in its annual report on the State of Fisheries and Aquaculture calling on nations to adopt its 1995 Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries. The Code provides a necessary framework to ensure sustainable fishing and if implemented could help save lives, it said.

“Human behaviour or error is estimated to be responsible for 80 per cent of accidents in the fishing industry,” said the report. “Safety at sea is a serious problem in both developing and developed countries.”

“The main cause of accidents and loss of life in the fishing industry is not only poorly designed, constructed or equipped vessels, but inappropriate human behaviour, sometimes compounded by error, negligence or ignorance,” the report said.

Russia wants US to limit nuclear deliver vehicles

Moscow, 3 March—Russia wants the United States to agree to limits on all types of nuclear weapons delivery vehicles in a new arms reduction pact that will replace START I, Russia's Foreign Minister was quoted as saying on Monday.

Moscow and Washington are discussing ways to replace the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START I) which will expire in December this year.

Russia would like to “preserve limits not only on warheads ... but also limits on all types of delivery vehicles”, the RIA news agency quoted Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov as saying in Madrid.

Lavrov was quoted as saying the previous US Administration of president George W. Bush had tried to move away from limits on nuclear weapons delivery vehicles.

He said Russia was against automatically extending the START I treaty past its expiry date and he would discuss the ideas with US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in Geneva this week.

The START I treaty was signed on July 31, 1991 by US president George Bush and Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev, five months before the fall of the Soviet Union.—MNA/Reuters

Vietnamese proposal to help garment sector

HANOI, 3 March—Vietnam's Ministry of Industry and Trade made a three-point proposal to help the country's garment and textile sector to survive in the context of difficulties caused by the global economic down-turn, the local newspaper Liberty Saigon reported on Tuesday. First, the ministry asked the government to grant one percent of the sector's total export revenue as subsidy to local garment and textile exporters to maintain their production.

The ministry suggested the government earmark 1.1 to 1.4 million US dollars for the country's garment and textile association to organize trade promotion activities in foreign markets such as Africa, Japan, East Europe and South America.

In the first two months this year, Vietnam's garment export turnover went down 12 percent over the same period last year to fetch 1.15 billion US dollars. —Internet

Toyota financial unit asks to borrow public money

TOKYO, 3 March—Toyota Motor Corp's financial unit said Tuesday that it had asked for an emergency loan from a state-backed lender to ride out the financial crisis, with reports putting the sum at two billion dollars.

Toyota Financial Services, which provides loans to car buyers, is in consultations with the Japan Bank for International Cooperation (JBIC) but the size of the loan has not yet been decided, company official Mio Sugito told AFP.

"The move is aimed at diversifying our financial resources as the international financial market is getting tighter, especially in the United States," Sugito said.

The Nikkei business daily and the Jiji Press news agency reported that Toyota's wholly-owned financial subsidiary is asking for about 200 billion yen (two billion dollars), without citing sources.

If the loan is realised, it will be JBIC's first to a Japanese automaker under a new government scheme, the reports said. JBIC's main role is to invest in projects in developing countries, but the government in December decided as an emergency measure to allow the bank to lend to Japanese companies operating in developed countries. —Internet

US Navy hands over nine suspected pirates to Somalia

MOGADISHU, 3 March—The US Navy handed over nine suspected pirates to authorities in northern Somalia after determining there was not enough evidence to put them on trial, an American said Monday.

Lt Nate Christensen of the Bahrain-based US 5th Fleet said the men had been detained on 12 Feb after being found in the vicinity of an Indian merchant ship that pirates had unsuccessfully attacked off the lawless Somali coast.

"The US Navy evaluated the situation and determined there was insufficient evidence to support their prosecution" by the US, Christensen said.

Mohamed Siad Jaqanaf, deputy police chief of Somalia's semiautonomous region of Puntland, also reported the handover. He did not give any details on what would happen to the men. The waters off the Horn of Africa nation have been plagued by pirate attacks the past few years.

More than 100 ships were attacked last year, around half of them successfully. Countries as diverse as Russia, India, America and France have sent warships to patrol Somali waters following the spate of hijackings. —Internet

Low levels of vitamin B12 may increase risk for defects

WASHINGTON, 3 March — Children born to women who have low blood levels of vitamin B12 shortly before and after conception may have an increased risk of a neural tube defect, a new study says.

Women with the lowest B12 levels had five times the risk of having a child with a neural tube defect compared to women with the highest B12 levels. Women who consume little or no meat or animal based foods were the most likely to have low B12 levels, according to the joint study by the U.S. National Institutes of Health (NIH), Trinity College Dublin, and the Health Research Board of Ireland.

"Vitamin B12 is essential for the functioning of the nervous system and for the production of red blood cells," said Duane Alexander, director of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD).

Researchers have known that taking another nutrient, folic acid, during the weeks before and after conception can greatly reduce a woman's chances of having a child with a neural tube defect. Folic acid, which is the synthetic form of vitamin B. Neural tube defects, is a class of birth defects affecting the brain and spinal cord.

In the United States, cereal grains are fortified with folic acid to reduce the occurrence of neural tube defects in the US population.

Ireland has a high rate of neural tube defects, and NIH scientists have frequently collaborated with Irish researchers to gain insight into the causes of this group of disorders.

"The results of this study suggest that women with low levels of B12 not only may risk health problems of their own, but also may increase the chance that their children may be born with a serious birth defect." Alexander said.—Internet

Researchers identify gene involved in pancreatic cancer

WASHINGTON, 3 March — Researchers from the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center have identified a gene that is overexpressed in 90 percent of pancreatic cancers, the most deadly type of cancer. Results of the study appear in the March issue of Cancer Cell.

Expression of the gene, Ataxia Telangiectasia Group D Complementing gene (ATDC), is on average 20 times higher in pancreatic cancer cells than in cells from a normal pancreas. What's more, the gene appears to make pancreatic cancer cells resistant to current therapies.

"One of the challenges in pancreatic cancer is that it is biologically aggressive and it does not respond well to chemotherapy or radiation. We found that ATDC not only causes the cancer cells to grow faster and be more aggressive, but it also makes the cancer cells particularly resistant to chemotherapy and radiation.—Internet

Explorers begin epic Arctic trek

The team will be trekking for up to 12 hours a day for 100 days.—INTERNET

LONDON, 2 March — A British team has begun a gruelling trek to the North Pole to discover how quickly the Arctic sea-ice is melting.

Renowned Arctic

explorer Pen Hadow and two companions were dropped onto the ice by plane 800km (500 miles) off the northern coast of Canada on Saturday. During their 1,000km journey they plan to take measurements of the thickness of the ice. It will be the most detailed survey of its kind this season, and should be completed in late May.

At the rear of one sledge is a mobile radar unit which will constantly measure the thickness of the ice. Satellites have shown how the area of Arctic sea-ice has been shrinking in recent years, but this expedition should give scientists a better idea of how thin the ice is becoming.

Watchdog says few Israelis safe from chemical hit

JERUSALEM, 3 March — A parliamentary panel said Monday that most Israelis have no protection against chemical weapons attack and harshly criticized defense officials for what it called a "continuing mess" in failing to replace stockpiles of worn and obsolete gas mask and antidote kits.

The annual report of the State Comptroller's Committee said a 2004 Cabinet decision to collect kits previously distributed to the public and to store and maintain them centrally was never properly followed through.

"The low incidence of functioning protection kits will not allow the provision of protection to most of the citizens of Israel in the event that the country is attacked," it said. The kits — containing gas masks, filters, syringes with an antidote for nerve gas and powder for neutralizing chemicals — were originally distributed in 1990, ahead of the first Gulf War. Although Israel did not fight in the US-led war, Iraq fired 39 Scud missiles at Israel.

Broccoli may help prevent respiratory conditions like asthma

WASHINGTON, 3 March — Here's another reason to eat your broccoli:

researchers from University of California in Los Angeles (UCLA) report that a naturally occurring compound found in broccoli and other cruciferous vegetables may help protect against respiratory inflammation that causes conditions like asthma, allergic rhinitis and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.

Published in the March edition of the journal Clinical Immunology, the research shows that sulforaphane, a chemical in broccoli, triggers an increase of antioxidant enzymes in the human air way, which offer protection against the onslaught of free radicals that people breathe in every day in polluted air, pollen, diesel exhaust and tobacco smoke.

A supercharged form of oxygen, free radicals can cause oxidative tissue damage, which leads to inflammation and respiratory conditions like asthma. "This is one of the first studies showing that broccoli sprouts — a readily available food source — offered potent biologic effects in stimulating an antioxidant response in humans," said Marc Riedl, the study's principal investigator and an assistant professor of clinical immunology and allergy at the David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA.

Italy throws hat into the ring to host Euro 2016

The president of Italian football federation Giancarlo Abete, seen here in 2008, announced that Italy was throwing hat into the ring to host Euro 2016.—INTERNET ROME, 3 March—Italy are to bid to host the Euro 2016 finals the Italian Football Federation (FIGC) announced on Monday despite losing out to host the 2012 edition to Poland and Ukraine.

Giancarlo Abete, president of FIGC, made the announcement following a board meeting and added they would be sending a letter to UEFA later in the week confirming the bid. Candidates for the first Euro to involve 24 teams have until March 9 to inform UEFA that they want to bid - the vote by the UEFA Executive Committee as to who hosts the championships will be taken on May 27, 2010.

UEFA has insisted that the host country has nine stadia.

Opposing Italy for the moment are France, who hosted it in 1984, and a joint bid by Norway and Sweden.

Inter and Juve face Cup distraction

Juventus' Claudio Marchisio (right) celebrates with Alex del Piero after scoring during a recent Serie A match in Turin.—INTERNET

ROME, 3 March—Italy's top two sides will switch off from their Serie A and Champions League challenges in midweek to try to take a step closer to a Coppa Italia final appearance.

Champions and league leaders Inter Milan, runners-up in this competition the last two seasons, host Sampdoria on Wednesday in what will be a very tricky tie. Just a week later they face a trip to Manchester United for the second leg of their Champions League second round clash.

That is a match they are desperate to win and this cup encounter, the first of two legs that are bizarrely spread out by seven weeks, will be seen more as a distraction than an opportunity.

Coach Jose Mourinho is almost certain to ring the changes with more than just reserve goalkeeper Francesco Toldo getting a rare start.

For Sampdoria this competition represents their only realistic hope of qualifying for European football next season and as they are comfortably clear of the relegation zone, they are sure to give this their full attention — something teams rarely do in the much-maligned Italian Cup.—Internet

Austria part company with veteran coach Bruckner

VIENNA, 3 March—Karel Bruckner has left his position as coach of the Austrian national team, the Austrian football federation (OFB) announced on Monday.

In an official statement, the OFB said that a mutual decision had been taken by Bruckner and the OFB following a telephone interview between the Czech coach and newly-appointed OFB president Leo Windtner. Windtner, disappointed by Austria's stuttering World Cup 2010 qualifying campaign, hinted before he assumed his new role on Saturday that he was prepared to part company with Bruckner, 68, if he was not convinced by his plans for the national side.—Internet

The reigning European champions are also firmly on course to win the Premier League after opening up a seven point lead over Chelsea and Liverpool.

They are also in the FA Cup quarter-finals - where they face Fulham on Saturday - and the last 16 of the Champions League, with a second leg clash against Inter Milan looming next week.—Internet

MANCHESTER, 3 March—Sir Bobby Charlton insists it is unlikely Manchester United will be able to carry out an unprecedented clean sweep of five trophies this season.

Beckham deal could delay Milan departure until July

LOS ANGELES, 3 March—English midfielder David Beckham would complete the Italian season with AC Milan and return to the Los Angeles Galaxy in mid-July under a deal in the works, according to the Los Angeles Times.

Terms of the loan extension were not reported, but the deal was said to be worth millions of dollars to Major League Soccer and the Galaxy, which would lose star ticket seller Beckham for 17 of 30 regular-season games this year.

Beckham has reportedly agreed to the deal, which would allow him to stay with AC Milan until the end of the Serie A campaign, and the plan was expected to be finalized by the end of the week.

Beckham, 33, has been so successful while on loan to AC Milan - scoring two goals - that the club wants him to stay at the San Siro through the end of the season. His loan is set to expire in one week.—Internet

Nakamura uncertain over Celtic future

GLASGOW, 3 March—Shunsuke Nakamura admits he could still stay at Celtic but the Japan midfielder won't decide his future until the club's bid for a fourth successive Scottish Premier League title is settled.

Nakamura scored a hat-trick in Saturday's 7-0 win over St Mirren to move Celtic level on points behind leaders Rangers and narrow the goal difference gap between the Glasgow rivals. It was an influential display that underlined why Celtic boss Gordon Strachan is keen to persuade Nakamura to sign a new contract with the Scottish champions.

Nakamura is believed to be considering a return to Japan but he hinted it was possible he could remain in Scotland.—Internet

Italian clubs tackle an inconvenient truth

ROME, 3 March—World champions they may be, but Italy is feeling a chill in its domestic game as the country's glamour clubs suffer a potentially devastating slump.

Last week's European action brought home a very uncomfortable truth that the Italians, considered the continental driving force in the 1990s, are no longer sitting at the head of the table.

In three clashes against English opposition, Italy's three Champions League representatives failed to score a goal, suffered two defeats and only some profligate Manchester United finishing, coupled with heroic goalkeeping from Julio Cesar, allowed Inter Milan to buck the losing trend.

To make matters even worse, three of Italy's four UEFA Cup sides went crashing out with AC Milan, Fiorentina and Sampdoria eliminated, leaving only northern side Udinese to progress to the last 16.

If Udinese fail to get past holders Zenit St Petersburg in the next round, Italy could well find itself without a single team in the quarter-finals of either European competition.

It's a far cry from the glory days of the 1990s.

First, the Spanish and now the dominant English, thanks to the mega-rich Premier League, have streaked past.—Internet

Serena beats Venus to capture inaugural King Cup event

NEW YORK, 3 March—Reigning US and Australian Open champion Serena Williams defeated elder sister Venus Williams 6-4, 6-3 in the final of the made-for-television Billie Jean King Cup one-day tennis event.

Serena Williams won 5-of-14 break point chances over the reigning Wimbledon champion to capture the 400,000-dollar top prize in the four-woman event at Madison Square Garden.

"It was really intense," Serena Williams said. "She never gives up. That's what's so hard about playing her. She hits so hard and she runs down everything. That is what's so frustrating about her."—Internet

51 food samples in HK fail safety tests

HONG KONG, 3 March—The Centre for Food Safety of Hong Kong announced Monday that it tested 4,600 food samples in January and found 51 to be unsatisfactory. Apart from the four unsatisfactory samples of Lunar New Year food earlier, a pickled plum and a red date sample were found to contain preservative sulphur dioxide exceeding the legal limit, the centre said in a statement.

Apart from the unsatisfactory samples of 20 fresh beef and one preserved Chinese sausage earlier, 15 fresh beef samples were found to contain sulphur dioxide. Two samples of smoked pork sausage and one sample of pork loin ham were found to contain the preservative sorbic acid.

A sample of chilled orange roughly fillet was found to contain mercury exceeding the legal limit. A sample of slipper lobster had cadmium exceeding the legal limit. The centre said most of the exceedances or breaches are not serious and will not pose immediate health risks. It has traced the sources of the food in question, stopped their sale and issued warning letters.
