Tatmadaw in perpetual service of public interest

In the course of the history of the nation, the Tatmadaw has preserved the fine tradition of upholding independence and sovereignty of the motherland at risk to life, and it is in perpetual service of the public interest, while safeguarding the life and property of the people.

Today, the Tatmadaw is implementing the State's seven-step Road Map step by step in harmony with the entire people to transform the nation into a peaceful, modern and developed nation.

Simultaneously, the Tatmadaw is trying to complete the process of building a suitable economic infrastructure and improving the education and health standards. Now, various sectors have proved successful, and the entire people are now in a position to enjoy the taste of development.

Myanmar has been able to stand tall as a sovereign nation in the global community due to the fact that the Tatmadaw and the people remained united in times of internal armed insurrection and foreign invasion throughout the history of the nation. So, each and every citizen is under the bounden duty of putting in the fore Our Three Main National Causes: non-disintegration of the Union, non-disintegration of national solidarity, and perpetuation of sovereignty.

The Tatmadaw has never failed to grapple with the issues posing threat to Our Three Main National Causes. It will keep on sustaining Our Three Main National Causes in future.

It is our belief that the Tatmadaw will go on serving the interest of the nation and the people, upholding Our Three Main National Causes at the risk of life as the national policy in conformity with the fine tradition of guarding the nation against various forms of dangers.

China says US Naval ship was breaking law

BEIJING, 10 March — China accused a US naval ship of carrying out an illegal survey off southern Hainan island, a Hong Kong TV website reported on Tuesday, after the Pentagon said Chinese vessels had harassed the ship in international waters.

Global oil prices rose 3 percent on Monday and held above $47 a barrel on Tuesday, partly on fears of geopolitical tension between the world's top oil consumers.

But the confrontation was unlikely to do lasting damage to ties between two countries closely involved in trying to end the global financial crisis, a Chinese analyst in Beijing said.

A US-based expert on Asia-Pacific security said the confrontation did not appear accidental, but rather was China sending a message to Washington that it wanted respect for its growing military presence in the region.

Washington urged China to observe international maritime rules after the Pentagon said five Chinese ships, including a naval vessel, harassed the US Navy ship in international waters on Sunday.

Homicide bomber kills 33 in attack on Iraqi tribal leaders

BAGHDAD, 10 March —A homicide bomber struck tribal leaders touring a market in a Sunni area west of Baghdad on Tuesday, killing as many as 33 people in the second major attack in the capital area in two days.

The bombing was part of a spike of violence that comes as the US military begins drawing down its forces.

The bomber detonated an explosives belt as the tribal leaders were walking through the market in the town of Abu Ghraib, accompanied by security officials and journalists, according to the Iraqi military.

Two Iraqi television journalists were among those killed in the attack and one was wounded, according to their stations.

Time running out for US troops in violent Mosul

MOSUL, 10 March — Grenades lie unattended next to a west Mosul bazaar. Garbage bags throughout the city are searched daily for bombs. At a sprawling sheep market, Iraqi army soldiers are careful not to kick over rocks for fear of setting off hidden explosives.

War has ebbed in most parts of Iraq, but not in Mosul, the third-largest city and al-Qaida's last stronghold in the fragile new democracy. And time is running out on the around-the-clock US military patrols of Mosul. US troops must vacate cities by June 30 under an agreement with the Iraqis, and President Barack Obama is ending all American combat operations after August 2010.

The Iraqi security forces are not sure they'll be ready.

"If you don't have the Americans, this is not going to be good," said an Iraqi army captain who gave his name only as Ahmed to protect his family from insurgents. "I cannot take care of it."

Even so, "some people don't like coalition forces here," Ahmed added as his soldiers joined US troops at the sheep market in west Mosul last week. "Iraqi people will come together, and it will be better."—Internet

Four Darfur peacekeepers wounded in ambush

KHARTOUM, 10 March — Gunmen ambushed troops of the joint United Nations-African Union peacekeeping force in Sudan's Darfur region Monday night, wounding four soldiers, a spokesman for the mission said.

The attack was the first reported violence against peacekeepers since the International Criminal Court issued an arrest warrant last week for Sudan's president, accusing him of war crimes in the western region.

The peacekeepers were returning to base in el-Geneina, the capital of West Darfur, when they were attacked, said Nouredine Mezni, spokesman for the UN-AU mission. One soldier was in serious condition and all the wounded were being evacuated to the mission's headquarters in northern Darfur, he said. He could not provide further details. "Our mandate is to protect civilians and help Darfurians. ... We call on all parties to cooperate with us in order to allow us to do our job in better conditions," Mezni said.—Internet

N Ireland police say officer shot dead in ambush

BELFAST, 10 March — Gunmen killed an officer in an attack on a Northern Ireland police patrol Monday, authorities said, two days after Irish Republican Army dissidents shot to death two British soldiers. The shootings fanned fears of a return to retaliatory violence after years of fragile peace.

The latest killing came even as British security chiefs appealed for public help to catch the soldiers' killers — a hunt that challenges Catholics to inform on their own as never before.

"We are staring into the abyss," warned a moderate Catholic politician, Dolores Kelly, after police confirmed that the officer was fatally shot in the head while sitting in his patrol car in the religiously divided town of Craigavon.

No group claimed responsibility, but politicians and an analyst blamed the Real IRA, the splinter group that admitted blame for Saturday's fatal shooting of two soldiers who were collecting pizzas from outside an army base.

Violence in Mexican state of Guerrero kills six

ACAPULCO, 10 March—Gunmen killed six people, including a local police chief, in a series of attacks Monday in mountain towns in the Pacific coast state of Guerrero.

The police chief of Pungarabato was repeatedly shot while driving his red Mustang on a highway near the small town early Monday, Guerrero state public safety department said in a news release.

Five other men were found gunned down in different towns in the isolated mountainous zone known as the Tierra Caliente, or the Hot Land, the state police said.

Hurricane may have uncovered Civil War shipwreck

GALVESTON, 10 March—Experts know of about a dozen Civil War-era shipwrecks off the Texas coast. They might have just identified another.

Contractors searching for debris from Hurricane Ike near Galveston Island took a sonar scan of what the Texas Historical Commission believes is a previously undiscovered ship carrying cotton that sank in 1864.

The Carolina, also known as the Caroline, was a privately owned merchant ship that tried to break through a federal blockade of Galveston. After being pursued for several hours by Union gunships, the crew of the Carolina ran the ship aground in shallow water between Galveston and San Luis Pass, then set it on fire rather than let it be captured.

Historians said records indicate the ship sank in the area where workers took the sonar image. It had probably been buried in sand until Hurricane Ike scoured the Gulf floor.

"It's certainly significant if it turns out to be a historic wreck, as we think it is," Steven Hoyt, state marine archaeologist with the Texas Historical Commission, told the Houston Chronicle.

Hoyt said the shape of the image indicates the wreckage is a ship, and that he will study its size, style and characteristics to determine whether it could be the Carolina. Divers will investigate the site in the spring or summer when the Gulf of Mexico waters are calmer. Even then, visibility could be limited.

Housing prices in Los Angeles area continue to fall

LOS ANGELES, 10 March—Prices of homes sold in the Los Angeles area, where the median housing price has been one of the highest in the United States, continue to decline as brokers predict new foreclosures could send prices lower. The median price of a home in the Los Angeles County stood at 310,000 dollars in February, down 3 percent from the previous month, but lower by a whopping 33.8 percent from February 2008, according to figures released Monday by market research firm Home Data Corp.

Meanwhile, about 3,000 homes changed hands last month, a slight drop from the previous month but up 47 percent compared with February 2008. Housing prices that keep falling have made more households able to afford a home, but many of them still wait on the sidelines for prices to drop further, local real estate brokers said.—Internet

Philippines expects bigger rice harvest amid global crisis

MANILA, 10 March—The Philippine government has raised its allocation for agriculture to support the ambitious plan of rice self-sufficiency, but analysts said it remains debatable whether the increased budget can boost the rice production as expected this year and help realize the target to become self-sufficient by 2010.

The Department of Agriculture forecasts a rice production to increase by 4.4 percent to 17.5 million metric tons this year, and expects to produce nearly 20 million tons in 2010.

Rice is the country's staple and its supply a key determinant of national inflation. The shortage of rice and soaring fuel prices in early 2008 pushed June inflation rate to a 14-year high of 11.4 percent.

Rolando Dy, executive director of the Center for Food and Agribusiness at the University of Asia and the Pacific, welcomed the government's decision to increase investment in a long-neglected sector. But he didn't think that having money alone will boost rice yields.

"My concern is on project execution and leakages (due to corruption). You need some skills to monitor and supervise big irrigation projects," Dy said.

A study published by the Berlin-based Transparency International noted what a huge amount of government money for irrigation were lost to corruption in the Philippines.

US online job search sites see traffic boom

SAN FRANCISCO, 10 March —With the unemployment rate rising, online job search sites in the United States are booming in popularity as people desperately look for work, a US newspaper reported on Monday.

Laid-off or fearing they will be, job-seekers are scouring the Internet for job openings, driving traffic to job search sites up 51 percent in January from the same month a year ago, the San Francisco Chronicle reported, citing market research data.

Despite the boom in traffic, many job sites are taking a financial hit as employers make less paid postings in these days of hiring freezes and layoffs.

Indeed.com, a major job board, found that postings for the accounting industry in January fell 53 percent from a year earlier, with postings for technology industry dropping 43 percent.

The sectors that held up the best were health care and education, which saw postings down 8 percent and 9 percent respectively.

Two cargo ships collide southwest off Tokyo

TOKYO, 10 March —A South Korean-flagged cargo ship may have sunk after colliding with a Panamanian-registered freighter early on Tuesday in waters some 120 km southwest of Tokyo, the Japan Coast Guard said.

The 4,255-ton South Korean ship Orchid Pia, with seven South Koreans and nine Indonesians onboard, lost contact with the coast guard while the 10,833-ton Cygnus Ace, crewed by 19 people, suffered damage after the accident occurred at about 2:20 am (1720 GMT Monday), the coast guard said.

The Yokohama-based Coast Guard and the Maritime Self-Defence Force (MSDF) dispatched ships and choppers to search for the supposedly sunken freighter, and found an unmanned rescue raft and several life jackets floating in the water.

The rain-caused low visibility of the area, some 13 km east of the Izu Oshima Island, was a key factor behind the accident, according to the coast guard.

Paris encourages use of electric bikes

PARIS, 10 March—The Paris City Council on Monday decided to give discounts to citizens and enterprises that buy electric bikes to encourage more use of them and better protect the environment.

The discounts will take effect from 21 March. Residents will be able to take advantage of a 25 percent reduction if they buy an electric bike costing less than 400 euros (505 US dollars).

Enterprises buying less than 10 electric bikes will also enjoy the discount. Vice Mayor of Paris Annick Lepetit said one aim of the decision is to boost continuous development of the city.

Paris currently has some 110,000 motorcycles that consume a lot of gas and cause pollution.

Lepetit said if 1 percent of these motorcycles were replaced by electric ones, which give off zero carbon dioxide, the production of carbon dioxide in Paris can be reduced by 2 tons. He said electric bikes are also more economical. One bike can save 500 euros (631 dollars) a year rather than using gas. —Internet

One in 50 American children experiences homelessness

New York, 10 March— One of every 50 American children experiences homelessness, according to a new report that says most states have inadequate plans to address the worsening and often-overlooked problem.

“These kids are the innocent victims, yet it seems somehow or other they get left out,” said the center’s president, Dr Ellen Bassuk. “Why are they America’s outcasts?”

The report analyzes data from 2005-2006. It estimates that 1.5 million children experienced homelessness at least once that year, and says the problem is surely worse now because of the foreclosures and job losses of the deepening recession.

Octopus gets inside lunchbox at Boston aquarium

What is 7 feet long, weighs 30 pounds, has eight arms and fits in a box slightly larger than a milk crate? Truman the octopus. Truman squeezed into a clear, acrylic box while trying to snag his lunch at the New England Aquarium in Boston.

Aquarium workers often place food inside locked boxes for the intelligent animals to crack open. It’s what the aquarium calls an “enrichment activity,” but it didn’t go as planned Thursday.

In this case, crabs were locked in a smaller box inside the bigger box, which is 14 inches per side. The impatient Truman bypassed the locks and squeezed his body through a 2-inch hole in the exterior box. He spent about 30 minutes inside before slithering out, delighting staff and guests who witnessed the spectacle. He never did get the smaller box open.

Malaysian fisherman uses WWII bomb as anchor

A Malaysian fisherman has been using a deadly World War II bomb as an anchor for his boat, according to a report Saturday.

Local police made the shocking discovery on Thursday during a routine patrol in a fishing village in the southern Johor state.

The fisherman had been using the bomb for several months and thought it was safe on account of its age, the Star newspaper reported.

Police alerted the bomb squad who removed the 160mm device to be destroyed. Officers discovered eight similar bombs in the village after following up on information obtained from the fisherman.

Local police chief Abdul Aziz Ahmad urged anyone coming across objects that resemble bombs to inform the police immediately. “The bombs about the size of a small fire extinguisher were found behind a restaurant in the village,” he said.

Abdul Aziz said the bombs would be destroyed by police.

Scientists to drill Antarctic ice sheet for frozen ‘lost world’

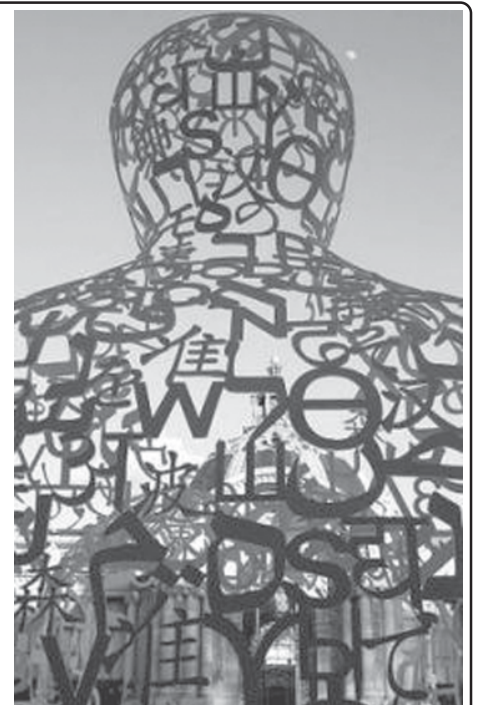

Scientists are to mount one of the boldest-ever missions to search for life-forms that have survived for possibly millions of years in a frozen “lost world” beneath an ancient ice sheet.

A team of Antarctic scientists from Britain has been given the go-ahead to drill through a two-mile-thick sheet of ice that has sealed a sub-glacial lake from the rest of the biosphere for at least as long as Homo sapiens has walked the Earth.

They hope to find species that have survived beneath the ice sheet since it formed between 400,000 and two million years ago.

Finding life in such an extreme environment would be one of the most important discoveries of the century, raising the prospect of searching for extraterrestrial life on Europa, a moon of Jupiter where life is thought to exist beneath a frozen ocean.

Health going high tech with camera pills, health sensors, ultrasound maps

OSLO, 10 March — Camera pills and ultrasound creating maps of the body: health has become high technology. Here are some of the recent advances in medical technology.

For more than ten years, senior medical officer Ronald Mårvik at St. Olav's Hospital in Trondheim has been collaborating with SINTEF scientist Thomas Langø. Together, they have created a new IT-base window on the inside of the body, a window that makes a patient transparent on a screen when a surgeon inserts operating instruments through small openings in the abdominal wall.

What the system actually does is transform X-ray and nuclear magnetic resonance (MR) images into three-dimensional maps by which the surgeon can navigate when he performs keyhole surgery in the abdominal cavity. The technique enable the surgeon to select a more lenient keyhole approach in operations that would otherwise demand large, open interventions. This offers benefits both to the individual patient and to society, because, in comparison with open operations, keyhole surgery puts less stress on the patient's body. As a result, the patient needs to spend less time in hospital and in reconvalescence.

FORT COLLINS, 10 March — More fertilizer doesn't always mean more profit. That's one conclusion from a 10-year study conducted by Agricultural Research Service (ARS) scientists at the agency's Soil Plant Nutrient Research Unit in Fort Collins, Colo., and colleagues at Colorado State University.

From 1998 to 2008, the researchers evaluated and compared potential management strategies for reducing nitrogen and nitrate nitrogen levels in soil and groundwater.

The research, led by ARS soil scientist Ardell Halvorson, focused on irrigated cropping systems in the Arkansas River Valley, an agricultural region of Colorado that has high

Sickly US economy set for 2nd half rebound

WASHINGTON, 10 March—The recession-hit US economy is proving weaker than economists expected just a month ago, but forecasters still think a recovery is in the cards for later this year, a survey released on Tuesday showed. “Consumer spending and residential investment are expected to turn positive and begin boosting GDP growth in the third quarter of this year,” the newsletter Blue Chip Economic Indicators said, summarizing its survey of private economists.

The consensus of the 51 forecasters surveyed looks for US gross domestic product to tumble at a sharp 5.3 percent annual rate in the first quarter and to decline at a 2 percent pace in the second quarter.

In the third quarter, however, economists expect the economy to expand at a 0.5 percent rate, followed by a 1.8 percent fourth-quarter gain. For the year as a whole, the economy is expected to shrink 2.6 percent, which would be the largest annual contraction since the Great Depression. A month ago the survey pointed to a drop of 1.9 percent. “A huge drop in business inventories, further declines in non-residential fixed investment and another sharp drop in residential investment” are expected to drive economic weakness in the first half of 2009, the survey said.—Internet

Explosion kills 10, injures 20 including minister in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, 10 March—Ten people were killed while 20 others including a government minister were injured Tuesday morning in a suicide explosion blamed on Tamil Tiger rebels in southern Sri Lanka, defence officials said.

Officials from the Defence Ministry said an LTTE (Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eealm) suicide bomber attacked the Jumma mosque at Godapitiya, in Akurassa, in the Matara district around 11 am local time (0530 GMT).

Military spokesman Udaya Nanayakkara said 10 civilians were killed while 20 others including Post and Teli-communication Minister Mahinda Wijesekara were injured in the explosion in Matara, about 160 km south of the capital Colombo.

Nanayakkara said Wijesekara suffered head injuries and was initially treated in a hospital in Matara. The local newspaper Daily Mirror reported on its website that the injured minister will be airlifted to capital Colombo for further treatment shortly. The newspaper reported that former Southern Province Chief Minister H G Sirisena was also among the injured.

Defence sources said another 15 people with injuries have been admitted to the government hospital in Matara.

A special team of doctors have been airlifted to Matara at the request of Sri Lankan President Mahinda Rajapakse, the spokesman said.

Germany's small, medium-sized businesses hit hard by crisis

BERLIN, 10 March—The global financial crisis has seriously hit Germany's small and medium-sized businesses, raising fears that Europe's biggest economy is heading into a deeper recession.

The business confidence of small- and medium-sized companies, which constitute the bulk of the German economy, has reached a record low.

A great majority of small- and medium-sized business leaders are pessimistic and anticipate a worsening of the situation in the next 12 months, according to a recent report by “Mittelstandsmonitor.”

The business sentiment index, based on data from several German economic institutions and think tanks, lost nearly 18 points during 2008 and was only slightly above its base line.

Only in 1992, did the index dropped further due to an anticipated recession after the reunification of Germany.

Slovenian economy grows 3.5% in 2008

BELGRADE, 10 March—Slovenia's economic growth for the whole year stood at 3.5 percent in 2008 despite the negative growth in the final quarter, the country's statistical authorities said on Monday.

Growth in the first half of the year stood at a robust 5.6 percent, before cooling to 3.6 percent in the third quarter and dropping into negative territory in the final quarter. Presenting preliminary GDP data for the fourth quarter of 2008, Karmen Hren of the Statistics Office told the press that the key factor for the contraction was a 9.4 percent drop in exports.

Significant drops were also seen in the output of the manufacturing sector and in gross fixed capital formations, which fell by 5.3 percent.

“There has been only one quarter with a bigger drop in gross fixed capital formations in the past 12 years, that is the second quarter of 2000, when investments fell by 10 percent,” Hren was quoted as saying by the official Slovenian news agency STA.—Internet

Red, white wine cannot stop breast cancer

WASHINGTON, 10 March—Neither red wine nor white wine can offer women protection from breast cancer, a new study revealed. In fact, both appear to have a negative effect. Polly Newcomb, the lead author of the study which was published on the March issue of Cancer Epidemiology, Biomarkers and Prevention, said that their study found red wine does not reduce the risk of breast cancer, although previous studies highlight its health benefits in reducing heart disease.

“We found no difference between red or white wine in relation to breast-cancer risk. Neither appears to have any benefits,” Newcomb, who is from the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, said Monday in a statement.

Actually, women who had 14 or more drinks per week, regardless of the type of alcohol consumed, faced a 24 percent increase in breast cancer compared with non-drinkers, the researchers said.

“If a woman drinks, she should do so in moderation — no more than one drink a day. And if a woman chooses red wine, she should do so because she likes the taste, not because she thinks it may reduce her risk of breast cancer,” Newcomb said.

The results were based on interviews with 6,327 women with breast cancer and 7,558 age-matched healthy women about their drinking habits.—Internet

Peru registers 5,000 cases of dengue fever in past two months

LIMA, 10 March—Peru registered 5,000 cases of dengue fever during January and February, which has become a public health problem, Health Minister Oscar Ugarte said on Monday.

Ugarte told the press that 13,500 people were infected last year.

He announced the launching of a campaign against dengue designed to raise public awareness of the importance of clearing stagnant water or hidden water deposits where the Aedes aegypti mosquito, a dengue carrier, breeds.

“We have an enormous responsibility to combat dengue because it is lethal ... a high social cost on human lives,” Ugarte said.

He said combating dengue was easy.

Daily actions were needed to avoid water stagnating in topless containers, and replacing water in flowerpots with humid sand both at home and at public places.

Zimbabwe cholera deaths over 4,000

GENEVA, 10 March—The cholera epidemic in Zimbabwe has claimed more than 4,000 lives and more than 89,000 people have the disease, the World Health Organization said in a new toll published Monday.

The water-borne disease has killed 4,011 people, according to the latest WHO figures, although a spokeswoman has said the real death toll is higher because of under-reporting due to difficulty in reaching some areas of the country.

Zimbabwe's Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai announced last Thursday that the death toll had broken through the 4,000 mark, and said the figure was likely an underestimate. However, the WHO said on Friday the outbreak was showing signs of slowing.

Spokeswoman Fadela Chaib said the number of cases had been averaging 4,000 to 4,500 a week recently, compared to peaks of nearly 8,000 earlier in the outbreak.

Expert warns China may miss last chance to tackle aging population

BEIJING, 10 March—China will pay dearly if it does not act now to build up an old-age social security system, as its population aged 80 or above will hit 83 million by 2050, a population expert has warned.

“The proportion of working people to retirees is still low at the moment, if we missed the chance, we will pay a dear cost,” Ma Li, vice director of China Population and Development Research Center, told Xinhua Tuesday.

China formally became an aged society in 2000, when the population aged 60 or above accounted for 10 percent of its 1.3 billion people.

With an annual growth rate of 3.7 percent, China's population aged 80 or above will reach 22 million by 2020, and 83 million by 2050, according to Ma, a deputy to the 11th National People's Congress (NPC), China's legislative body.

In contrast to developed countries, China entered the aged society while it is still a developing country, said Ma, on the sidelines of the NPC annual session in Beijing.

“China is not yet ready for the aged society. It does not have a complete old-age social security system.

There are not enough resources. Fiscal support is scarce. And the risk is ever rising,” said Ma. The lawmaker said China must act now to set up an old-age social security system that covers both rural and urban population.

Such a system should be based on the care of the old people by their families, backed-up by community-level services networks and with old folks homes as a supplement, he said.

Scholes lays out the formula to beat Inter

MANCHESTER, 10 March—Paul Scholes believes Manchester United will beat Inter Milan in Wednesday's Champions League last 16 second leg if they follow the formula that saw off Barcelona last season.

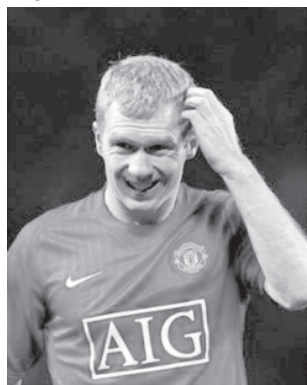

Sir Alex Ferguson's team held Inter to a goalless draw at the San Siro two weeks ago, just as they did when they faced Barcelona at the Nou Camp in the semi-finals last year.

The Premier League champions returned to Old Trafford to finish the job against Barca with a hard-fought 1-0 victory and Scholes is confident they can do the same against Jose Mourinho's Italian outfit.

"It probably was the perfect way to play a home leg after a goalless draw," Scholes said.

"We did well to get the draw in the first place because Barcelona is such a tough place to go, then we defended really well and got the goal at home, which, in a European tie, was ideal. We will take that again on Wednesday."—Internet

Saha can't wait for FA Cup clash with 'amazing' United LIVERPOOL, 10 March—Everton striker Louis Saha believes his side can shock Manchester United in the FA Cup semi-finals despite the amazing form of his former club.

Saha scored the winner in Sunday's quarter-final against Middlesbrough at Goodison Park and Everton were paired against United in the draw for the last four. The France star admitted the prospect of facing a United team on course for a remarkable clean sweep of five trophies in one season is daunting, but he is convinced Everton can win at Wembley next month.

"The semi-final draw with Manchester United is obviously extra-special for me, of course, because I used to play for them and this will be a very big moment for me," he said.—Internet

Cole ahead of schedule after knee surgery

LONDON, 10 March—Chelsea midfielder Joe Cole believes he is ahead of schedule in his recovery from the knee surgery that prematurely ended his season.

Cole ruptured his anterior cruciate ligament in Chelsea's 4-1 FA Cup win over Southend in January and needed an operation that ruled him out for the rest of the campaign.

But the 27-year-old England star is confident he can return to action in time for the start of next season after making a good start to his rehabilitation.

"I am ahead of schedule," Cole told Chelsea TV. "The physios are really happy with me and how I feel at the moment is how I am supposed to be feeling."

"There is obviously a bit of muscle wastage in the legs so I am working on that but I am pleased."

"There was always in my head a dream of a possible Champions League or FA Cup Final but the physios put the kibosh on that every time I mention it."

"So my comeback target is going to be pre-season for the start of next season."—Internet

Cisse tells Sunderland to get a deal done

SUNDERLAND, 10 March—France striker Djibril Cisse admits Sunderland's failure to tie up a permanent deal to sign him from Marseille is starting to affect his form.

Sunderland are unwilling to agree a transfer with Marseille until they are certain of avoiding relegation because the global financial meltdown, which has weakened the value of the pound, has made the fee more expensive.

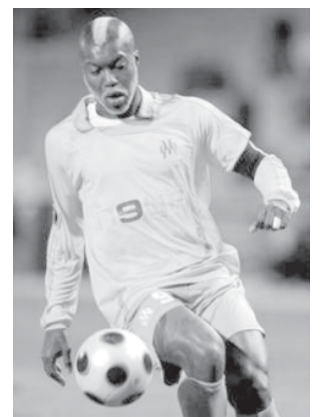

But Cisse, who has scored 10 goals for Sunderland this season, wants to commit himself to the Black Cats and feels he has been left in limbo.

"It is not nice to worry about where I am going to be in a few months. It is not just affecting me, I have family and children to think about. It is really annoying me, to be honest," Cisse told the Sunderland Echo on Monday.

"I would like to know as soon as possible where I'm going to be next season but it is not me who decides. The board must make a decision."

Adebayor to miss Roma clash

Togo striker Emmanuel Adebayor

LONDON, 10 March—Arsene Wenger has admitted Togo striker Emmanuel Adebayor will miss Arsenal's Champions League tie with Roma on Wednesday but the Gunners manager hopes Ivory Coast defender Kolo Toure will be fit.

Adebayor has been sidelined for a month after suffering a hamstring injury in the goalless Premier League draw with Tottenham and will not travel to Italy for the last 16 second leg clash as Arsenal try to hold onto their one-goal lead.

Although Toure missed Sunday's FA Cup victory over Burnley with a minor injury, Wenger believes he has a good chance of recovering in time.

"Adebayor definitely won't be able to play, but I will wait to see what the report is on Kolo before I decide what my starting XI will be," Wenger said.

Despite Adebayor's absence, Wenger will have more attacking options after Eduardo and Theo Walcott played against Burnley.
