Long ago, Moneyin in Namtu Township, Shan State (North), was a secluded region with poor transport and armed insurgency reigned supreme there.

After 1988, the Tatmadaw government managed to make peace with armed groups and expedited projects for all-round development of the regions across the nation. As part of the plan, it constructed roads and bridges to form a network of transport facilities covering the whole country along with dams wherever necessary and possible. So far, it has constructed 219 dams, including Zeechaung Dam in Kyauktaw Township, Rakhine State, that was inaugurated recently.

Conserve the environment

There exist atmosphere, water, land, forests, mountains and natural resources including human beings in the environment of all living things. So there must be better environment for mankind to earn their living.

Forests and trees not only provide useful materials for man but also make temperate climate. They also serve as natural habitat for birds and beasts. The people thus have to carry out the tasks on reforestation and maintenance of ecosystem.

In Myanmar the government conserves water, land, forests and natural resources. It also protects reserved forests, wildlife parks and natural lands in accord with the forest law. The Ministry of Forestry in cooperation with local people is establishing firewood plantations, watershed areas and special teak plantations.

The government is also establishing watershed plantations for development of natural forests and greening of Bago Yoma where teak grows well. In Hlegu Township, there are Paunglin, Mahuya and Kalihtaw Reserved Forests. There are Ngamoeyeik Creek, Mahuya Creek and other creeks in its environs. In these reserved forests, teak, oil eugenia, Thitseint, Pyinkadoe, Sit, Mau, Pyinma and Padauk are grown. Every household in the township participates in the tasks for growing of teak and other hardwood plants on a manageable scale.

Forests and trees including teak and Pyinkadoe are vital for progress of the national economy and they serve the greening of the regions. Therefore all the local people are to actively take part in the government's endeavours for conserving the environment.

No sign Iraqis will ask US to stay

BAGHDAD, 11 March—Despite ongoing violence, the Iraqi government is unlikely to ask American troops to remain in the country beyond a 2011 departure deadline, the top US military commander in Iraq said on Tuesday.

But Iraqi leaders must decide whether to waive an approaching end-date — 30 June—and allow combat soldiers stay in urban flashpoints like Mosul where al-Qaida and insurgents continue to threaten security, Gen Ray Odierno said.

“I think that the Iraq leadership is focused on that this ends in 2011,”

Odierno said in an interview with The Associated Press.

“The progress we’re making now and what I see today, I say that I don’t see anything that would have us have to re-negotiate in 2011,” he said. “But again, I never say never.”

The four-star general, sitting in his office in one of Saddam Hussein’s former palaces, spoke broadly about Iraq’s tenuous security as the US military ratchets back its role in the war that began six years ago this month.

As he spoke, a suicide bomber attacked Sunni and Shiite tribal leaders and high-ranking security officials who were touring a market about 15 miles away in the town of Abu Ghraib. Dozens died.

Under a 1 Jan agreement, US military bases and posts are supposed to be out of Iraqi cities after 30 June, clearing the way for Iraqi forces step up their own security missions. President Barack Obama has ordered an end to all American combat operations in Iraq by September 2010. All US soldiers are scheduled to leave Iraq by the end of 2011.

Climate scientists predict one-metre sea level rise by 2100

STOCKHOLM, 11 March — Climate scientists warned on Tuesday that sea level rise could exceed one meter by 2100 if governments fail to control global warming effectively, said reports from Copenhagen.

"The upper range of sea level rise by 2100 could be in the range of about one meter, or possibly more," said a statement released by climate scientists at a three-day gathering in Copenhagen from Monday in preparation for the UN Climate Change Conference due in December in Denmark.

The estimate almost doubles the projection of 18 cm to 59 cm by the end of the century made in previous studies.

"In the lower end of the spectrum it looks increasingly unlikely that sea level rise will be much less than 50 cm by 2100," the statement said.

"This means that if emission of greenhouse gases is not reduced quickly and substantially, even the best case scenario will hit low lying coastal areas housing one in ten humans on the planet."

Taleban say Obama's call on moderates "illogical"

KABUL, 11 March—Afghanistan's Taleban on Tuesday turned down as illogical US President Barack Obama's bid to reach out to moderate elements of the insurgents, saying the exit of foreign troops was the only solution for ending the war. Obama, in an interview with the New York Times, expressed an openness to adapting tactics in Afghanistan that had been used in Iraq to reach out to moderate elements there.

"This does not require any response or reaction for this is illogical," Qari Mohammad Yousuf, a purported spokesman for the insurgent group, told Reuters when asked if its top leader Mullah Mohammad Omar would make any comment about Obama's proposal. "The Taleban are united, have one leader, one aim, one policy...I do not know why they are talking about moderate Taleban and what it means?"

In Iraq, the use of Sunni Muslim community leaders to employ their people to patrol their neighbourhoods has been credited as one of the main reasons behind sharp falls in violence. Obama did point out that compared to Iraq, the situation was more complex in Afghanistan, where nearly 70,000 foreign troops, 38,000 of them American, are due to be joined in coming months by another 17,000 US soldiers.—MNA/Reuters

Israel-Lebanon borders stable despite attacks

UNITED NATIONS, 11 March—Southern Lebanon and northern Israel have experienced their longest period of stability in many years despite the violations of a 2006 cease-fire during the recent war in Gaza, the UN's special coordinator for Lebanon said on Tuesday. The cease-fire between Israel and Hezbollah militants "continues to hold" but much remains to be done to fully implement Security Council resolution 1701 that ended their 34-day conflict, including disarming Hezbollah and all other militias, Michael Williams told reporters after a closed-door briefing to the UN Security Council.

In a report to the council, Secretary-

General Ban Ki-moon condemned the firing of rockets from southern Lebanon toward Israel during the Gaza conflict as "serious violations" of the cease-fire resolution. The fact that Israel returned fire without prior warning to UN peacekeepers in southern Lebanon is also "a cause of serious concern," he said.

"On the positive side, the resolution has continued to ensure a cessation of hostilities between the parties and the longest period of stability that south Lebanon has known in decades," he said. "There is a stability on Israel's northern border which it has not known since the 1980s."—Internet

UN experts to investigate secret US jails

GENEVA, 11 March—Two UN human rights experts said on Tuesday that they would conduct a global investigation of secret detention centres used by the United States and other countries in their counter-terrorism efforts. The yearlong investigation is aimed not only to clarify facts, but also to ensure that such secret jails would not be used in the future, according to Manfred Nowak, UN envoy for torture, and Martin Scheinin, UN envoy for human rights and counter-terrorism.

Addressing the UN Human Rights Council, the two experts described secret jails as "one of the most horrendous practices" adopted by intelligence services.

There was "credible" evidence that the United States had transferred terror suspects for interrogation at secret detention centres in the Middle East, Eastern Europe and Asia, they said.

In many cases states receiving detainees had "reportedly engaged in torture and other forms of ill-treatment," they said. Scheinin welcomed US President Barack Obama's decision to close the Guantanamo Bay detention centre, but he said scrutiny of the US counter-terrorism policy would not be relaxed.—Internet

Moneyin in Namtu Township, Shan State (North), has been enjoying the taste of peace. Moneyin Dam constructed at a cost of about K 1690 million was put into service on 31 May 2008. With a maximum water storage capacity of 25,900 acre feet, the 1700 feet long and 100 feet high earthen type facility is on the Namhsuan Creek. The dam also can generate 2.2 million kilowatt hours a year. Now, No (4) secondary canal of the dam has been dug, thus increasing the irrigated area of

there has been a 20 miles long motor road between Lashio and Moneyin, and local people have broadened their horizons a lot. Now, they grow vegetables in addition to monsoon and summer paddy. We will grow rubber in the deforested areas and on barren hills round."

Farmer U Aung Pa of Weiknan Village in Moneyin said, "Previously, rainwater was the only source to grow paddy. Now, we are very pleased that we can grow summer paddy in addition to monsoon with the water from the dam."

Farmer Daw Shwe Sar of Weiknan Village said, "We had never grown summer paddy previously. But, now we can grow summer paddy due to the dam."

It is indeed very challenging to reclaim farmlands following the construction of a dam, especially in mountainous regions like Shan State (North). Now, Moneyin Dam has emerged in Namtu Township, Shan State (North), and local farmers have enjoyed higher living standards due to enthusiasm of local farmers, the supervision of Commander Maj-Gen Aung Than Htut of North-East Command, hard work of service personnel, and the government's benevolent attitude toward the people.

Ultra-thin chip embedding for wearable electronics

BRUSSELS, 11 March — At the Smart Systems Integration Conference in Brussels (Belgium), technologists from IMEC and its associated laboratory at Ghent University present a new 3D integration process enabling flexible electronic systems with a thickness of less than 60 micrometer.

This ultra-thin chip package (UTCP) technology allows integrating complete systems in a conventional low-cost flex substrate. This paves the way to low-cost, unobtrusive wearable electronics for e.g. wearable health and comfort monitoring.

For the integration, the chip is first thinned down to 25 micron and embedded in a flexible ultra-thin chip package. Next, the package is embedded in a standard double-layer flex printed circuit board (PCB) using standard flex PCB production techniques.—Internet

New genre of sugar-coated 'quantum dots' for drug delivery

BERN, 11 March — Scientists in Switzerland are reporting an advance that could help tap the much-heralded potential of "quantum dots"— nanocrystals that glow when exposed to ultraviolet light—in the treatment of cancer and other diseases.

They are publishing the first study showing that giving quantum dots an icing-like cap of certain sugars makes these nanoparticles accumulate in the liver but not other parts of the body. That selective targeting could be used to deliver anti-cancer drugs to one organ, without causing the body-wide side-effects that occur with existing cancer drugs, they suggest.

Their study is in the Feb. 18 issue of the Journal of the American Chemical Society, a weekly publication.

New fish discovered in Antarctic Ocean

BARCELONA, 11 March — The new species of Antarctic fish, Goszytonia antarctica, has been discovered at a depth of 650 metres in the Bellingshausen Sea in the Antarctic Ocean, an area which has not been studied since 1904 and where the fauna is "completely" unknown. Jesús Matallanas, the Spanish researcher responsible for the find, collected four specimens of the new species during Spanish Institute of Oceanography (IEO) campaigns in the southern hemisphere summers of 2003 and 2006.

"The study of the biodiversity of the Bellingshausen Sea has been systematically ignored by international projects because it is quite inaccessible and its beds are not mapped", SINC was told by Jesús Matallanas, the study's main author and researcher from the Autonomous University of Barcelona (UAB).

The work, which appears in the journal Polar Biology, is based on the IEO's Bentart-03 and Bentart-06 campaigns, in which Matallanas participated as an expert in taxonomy of Antarctic fish.—Internet

Blood, ultrasound tests catch ovarian cancer

WASHINGTON, 11 March—Blood tests and ultrasound scans can catch deadly ovarian cancer at the most early and treatable stages, British doctors reported on Tuesday, saying it may finally be possible to screen women for the disease.

Their study of 200,000 women who used both tests together caught 90 per cent of ovarian cancer cases, while using ultrasound alone each year caught 75 per cent.

Nearly half the cases were in the early stage I or stage II phases, when the cancer has not spread far and can sometimes be cured.

As there is no current good test for ovarian cancer, having a reliable screening test could save many lives, Ian Jacobs and Usha Menon of University College London reported in the journal Lancet Oncology.

“The initial findings of this long-term study are encouraging, particularly because almost half of the ovarian cancers detected were at an early stage (stage 1), when survival rates can be as high as 90 per cent,” Peter Reynolds of Britain’s Ovarian Cancer Action said in a statement.

Ovarian cancer is one of the most deadly cancers, in part because the symptoms are so vague that women often are not diagnosed until it is too late. It was diagnosed in more than 21,000 women in the United States in 2008 and killed more than 15,000; in Britain it affects about 7,000 women a year and kills more than 4,000.—MNA/Reuters

Thailand’s cabinet approves $2b loans plan

BANGKOK, 11 March—Thailand’s weekly Cabinet meeting on Tuesday approved a plan to borrow foreign loans worth of two billion US dollars to finance investments in mega projects in a bid to boost the domestic sluggish economy.

It is expected that the Thai Government will be able to withdraw the loans from the three institutions during the third quarter of this year.

India to deploy space-based surveillance systems

NEW DELHI, 11 March—India is mulling to deploy space-based surveillance systems to counter any threat posed to its indigenous ballistic missile defence (BMD) system, a top Indian Defence official said on Monday night.

“We are certainly looking to develop space-based surveillance capabilities for the BMD. Indian Space Research Organization (ISRO) is working on the project,” Indian Air Defence Programme Director V. K. Saraswat told the media.

He also said that to tackle enemy attack, missiles with a striking range of over 6,000 kilometres and hypersonic interceptor missiles will have to be developed for the phase II of the air defence programme.

In the phase I of its air defense programme, India had successfully tested the BMD system in November 2006 outside atmosphere at a 48-kilometre altitude and inside atmosphere at an altitude of 15-kilometres in December 2007.

India last week successfully testfired its indigenous ballistic missile shield in the eastern state of Orissa. The interceptor missile was fired from the Wheeler Island off the Orissa coast and destroyed the “enemy” missile at an altitude of 80 kilometres.—MNA/Xinhua

Malaysia announces $16.2b stimulus package

This was the second economic stimulus package introduced by the Malaysian Government since November last year. “I am pleased to announce that the government will implement a Stimulus Package totalling ringgit 60 billion...over two years, 2009 and 2010,” Najib said.

The newly-unveiled pro-growth mini package included a fiscal injection of 15 billion ringgit, 25 billion ringgit as guarantee funds, 10 billion ringgit as equity investment, seven billion ringgit as private finance initiative and off-budget projects, and three billion ringgit in tax incentives.—MNA/Xinhua

Study shows Smallpox vaccine good for biological attack

HONG KONG, 11 March—A smallpox vaccine appears to be effective in a trial in Japan, with none of the serious side effects that are linked to earlier tests, researchers said.

Although smallpox was eradicated worldwide in 1979, scientists in countries such as Japan and the United States are still trying to develop vaccines in case the virus is ever used in a biological attack.

“Developing a vaccine that is safer than first-generation vaccines yet highly immunogenic is crucial to constructing a prevention plan in the event of a bioterrorist attack,” wrote the authors of the study, which was published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

In the trial, scientists tested a smallpox vaccine which was first given to infants in Japan in the 1970s. They gave single shots of the LC16m8 vaccine - which uses a live, attenuated virus — to 3,221 participants from the Japan Self-Defence Forces between 2002 and 2005, wrote the researchers, led by Tomoya Saito of Keio University in Tokyo.—MNA/Reuters

Safety violations kill six at Mongolia coal mine, investigators say

HOHHOT, 11 March — Safety violations led to the deaths of six coal miners in the northern Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region, a team investigating the accident told Xinhua on Wednesday. The miners were killed by coal gas poisoning at the Luxinju Coal Mine on Monday, the investigators said.

Four people responsible for the tragedy, who were taken into police custody on Tuesday, admitted that the privately-owned facility, although licensed, had been ordered to suspend production until safety requirements were met.

Six of the 15 miners on duty died in the accident, which occurred at about 10:20 pm on Monday. Six others escaped safely. The three injured miners are still hospitalized.

He Ping, one of the mine's deputy heads, acknowledged that he signed the suspension notice issued by the coal mining administration of Jungar Banner on 15 Dec the investigators said. The order was issued because of inadequate ventilation and lack of safety training for miners. The local production safety bureau found miners did not wear personal oxygen tanks when working and some even smoked.

However, the investigators said, the owners ignored the order because they wanted to take advantage of rising coal prices.

Pregnant women with migraines at higher vascular diseases

BEIJING, 11 March—Women who suffer migraines during pre-gnancy are at a heightened risk of getting various stroke and vascular diseases, said a US population based case-control study on Wednesday. The findings, which were published in this week's issue of BMJ, an international general medical journal, found that pregnant women with migraines are 15 times more likely than other women to suffer a stroke, twice as likely to have heart disease and three times more likely to have blood clots and other vascular problems during pregnancy.

"Good prenatal care is essential. Women with persistent and severe migraine during pre-gnancy should be aware of their risk factors, such as high blood pressure, high cholesterol, diabetes, history of blood clots, heart disease and prior stroke," the study's lead investigator, Dr Cheryl Bushnell, a neurologist at Wake Forest Baptist Medical Center, said.

"There also seems to be a relationship between migraines and preeclampsia, one of the most common and dangerous complications of pre-gnancy," added Bushnell. Bushnell and her colleagues analyzed data from 33,956 pregnant women diagnosed with migraine.

Cocaine-carrying plane crashes in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, 11 March—A plane that was carrying more than 2 tons of cocaine crashed on Tuesday in northern Honduras, killing the pilot, Honduran authorities said.

Authorities estimate the plane was carrying about 2,200 lbs (1,000 kilos) of cocaine, although all but 220 lbs (100 kilos) of the drug burned in the crash, Vice Minister of Security Mario Perdomo said.

Perdomo told reporters that two US Drug Enforcement Administration helicopters were pursuing the aircraft, which went down near El Negrito town in northern Honduras.

Perdomo said the plane left Venezuela and was heading to Honduras' Bay Islands, a transit point for US-bound cocaine.

Later Tuesday, US Embassy spokeswoman Ledy Pacheco denied that US aircraft had been pursuing the plane but said the DEA did help Honduras authorities locate the plane.

Progress in Mexico drug war is drenched in blood

MEXICO CITY, 11 March—Headless bodies in Tijuana, kidnapped children in Phoenix and shootouts on the streets of Vancouver: These are the unwanted byproducts of progress in the Mexican drug war.

While the headline-grabbing chaos creates the appearance of a drug trade escalating out of control, evidence suggests Mexico's cartels are increasingly desperate due to a cross-border crack-down and a shift in the cocaine market from the US to Europe.

Those pressures are forcing Mexico's criminal networks, once accustomed to shipping drugs quietly and with impunity, to wage ever more violent battles over scraps and diversify into other criminal enterprises, including extortion and kidnapping for ransom on both sides of the US border.

"This is not reflecting the power of these groups," Attorney General Eduardo Medina Mora told The Associated Press in an interview. "This is reflecting how they are melting down in terms of capabilities, how they are losing the ability to produce income."

Garcia has a shot at No 1 in the world

DORAL, 11 March—For the first time in his career, Sergio Garcia has a mathematical chance to be No 1 in the world. Tiger Woods has been atop the world ranking for the past 144 weeks — dating to 12 June, 2005 — and his 21.542 points were more than twice his nearest challenger after winning the US Open in June.

But he missed the next eight months following knee surgery, and while Garcia has only won twice since then, the Spaniard has been runner-up four times, including two FedEx Cup playoff events and the PGA Championship. Garcia, who was 16.278 points behind Woods after the US Open, trails him by a mere 1.59 points. To become No 1 in the world, Garcia would have to win the CA Championship and have Woods finish 27th or worse.—Internet

Technological University in Lashio with equitable learning opportunity

Article: Htein Lin (Myanma Alin); Photos: Aung Than (Mingala Taungnyunt)

The main building of Technological University (Lashio).

With the aims of ensuring equitable creation of learning opportunities across the nation and turning out the qualified human resources in the respective regions, the government upgraded 49 science and technological colleges to the universities established in 24 special development regions of the nation as of 20 January 2007.

Technological University (Lashio) was one of these upgraded universities. The facility was opened as Government Technical Institute on 27 December 1999. It was upgraded to the technological college on 10 September 2001. On 20 January 2007, the facility became a technological university.

Technological University (Lashio) is located near Hopaik Village, north of Lashio and east of Lashio-Hsenwi Road. It is a three-storey building built on 36 acres of land. During the visit to Lashio, the news team of the Myanma Alin Daily arrived at Technological University in Lashio to observe the learning opportunity for higher education of the local youths.

We had an interview with Principal Dr U Zaw Min

Oo of the university. He said, "A total of five courses are being conducted at Technological University (Lashio). These courses are the Civil Engineering Course, the Electrical Communication Engineering Course, the Electrical Power Engineering Course, the Mechanical Engineering Course and the Machine Tools Engineering Course. Raul 'sorry' after Anfield humbling

MADRID, 11 March—Real Madrid captain Raul apologized to his side's fans following their Champions League exit at the hands of Liverpool, describing the 4-0 Anfield mauling as his "most painful" defeat in the competition.

Raul's Real were humbled at Anfield.

Raul was little more than a helpless bystander as Liverpool swept aside nine-time winners Madrid in comprehensive fashion thanks to two goals from captain Steven Gerrard, another from former Atletico Madrid striker Fernando Torres and a late fourth from substitute Andrea Dossena. That four-goal demolition completed a 5-0 aggregate victory for Rafael Benitez's men and meant Madrid failed to get beyond the last 16 stage for the fifth successive year. "They (Liverpool) were better in every respect.

Once again we are out of the Champions League," said Raul, who has won three Champions League crowns and played well over 100 matches in the competition.

"We had high hopes for the match, but all that remains is to congratulate Liverpool because they've shown themselves to be a better team. There are no excuses."—Internet

Rising sea levels set to have major impacts around the world

COPENHAGEN, 11 March — Research presented March 10 at the International Scientific Congress on Climate Change in Copenhagen shows that the upper range of sea level rise by 2100 could be in the range of about one meter, or possibly more. In the lower end of the spectrum it looks increasingly unlikely that sea level rise will be much less than 50 cm by 2100.

This means that if emissions of greenhouse gases is not reduced quickly and substantially, even the best case scenario will hit low lying coastal areas housing one in ten humans on the planet hard.

Dr John Church of the Centre for Australian Weather and Climate Research, Hobart, Tasmania, Australia and the lead speaker in the sea level session, told the conference, "The most recent satellite and ground based observations show that sea-level rise is continuing to rise at 3 mm/yr or more since 1993, a rate well above the 20th century average. The oceans are continuing to warm and expand, the melting of mountain glacier has increased and the ice sheets of Greenland and Antarctica are also contributing to sea level rise."—Internet
