Comrades,

Our patriotic Armed Forces rose from a state of foreign dependence to launch a revolution together with the people, relying on no one but itself for the first time 64 years ago today in the history of the independence struggle.

Comrades,

Our Armed Forces was formed with the aim of achieving independence, which was considered to be the first, the second and the third priority at the time. The aim of our Armed Forces today is to defend our independence and sovereignty from all attempts at manipulation through political, economic, ideological, military and other means.

Aim of Armed Forces

Thus, the immediate task before us is the building of a strong and capable modern patriotic Armed Forces that can ensure total all-round defence and protection of our independence and sovereignty.

Comrades,

In material terms, the modernization and development of the Armed Forces depend on the financial resources available to the State. But at the same time, ongoing efforts must be made in matters of morale, to ensure mental fortitude, good discipline, staunch loyalty, unity and the possession of the Three Capabilities, through the Four Major Tasks of Armed Forces Building.

Carry on serving national interest upholding the four oaths

Having born out of the independence struggles, the Tatmadaw was formed with offspring of the people who are imbued with patriotism and nationalistic spirit.

Since its inception, the Tatmadaw has been well-disciplined and organized. So, it has become strong day by day. As each and every Tatmadaw member constantly abides by the military rules, military laws and military codes of conduct, the Tatmadaw has won the love and respects of the people.

With the fine traditions in the course of the history, the Tatmadaw has sacrificed a great number of lives, blood and sweat for the perpetuation of independence and sovereignty. At present also, it is steadfastly safeguarding the lives and property of the entire national people.

Nowadays, the Tatmadaw is discharging the three main duties, namely, the national defence duty, the training duty and the public welfare duty while actively participating in the process of building a peaceful, modern and developed nation together with the people.

The active participation of the Tatmadaw in the national defence duty and the public welfare duty is inspired by its innate ability to serve the people's interest based on patriotism and nationalistic spirit. From the period of independence struggle up to date, the consolidation and unity among the Tatmadaw and the people has gone down in the annals of Myanmar history.

With the fine traditions of the Tatmadaw that never betrays the national cause in the course of the history, each and every Tatmadaw member is to carry on serving the national interest upholding the four oaths towards the State and the people.

Obama to order modest increase of troops in Afghanistan

WASHINGTON, 27 March—US President Barack Obama will announce a modest increase of 4,000 more troops to Afghanistan as he unveils a new Afghan strategy Friday, US officials said Thursday.

The new troops will be deployed to that country later 2009 and will be assigned to train local police and security forces, the officials were quoted by the web site of the Washington Post as saying.

That increase will raise US troop levels there to 61,000-65,000 troops, doubling America's military presence from last December.

The White House announced earlier in the day that the president will announce the strategy on Friday after two-month internal consultations.

The strategy for Afghanistan is expected to include the contents of increasing US troops, expanding Afghan security forces, and appealing for cooperation from "moderate" insurgents, sources closed to the consultations said.

US watchdog says billions of US aid wasted in Iraq

WASHINGTON, 27 March — About three billion US dollars to five billion US dollars in US aid for rebuilding Iraq has been wasted since 2003, and similar problems will likely haunt development in Afghanistan, a top US watchdog said on Wednesday.

Stuart Bowen, the US special inspector general for Iraq reconstruction, told Congress that sums wasted on ill-designed or failed projects in Iraq translate into 15-20 per cent of the 21-billion-US-dollar Iraqi Relief and Reconstruction Fund set up by Congress after the 2003 US-led invasion.

Bowen, who appeared before the House of Representatives Armed Services Committee, did not give specific examples but faulted an ad hoc US approach that sought to modernize every aspect of Iraqi society from banking to traffic laws, poor security and a lack of structure for mobilizing resources.

The figures were the result of about 135 audits conducted by Bowen's team in recent years.

Bowen said reconstruction in both Iraq and Afghanistan suffers because the United States has no established framework for relief and contingency operations. — MNA/Reuters

Israel successfully tests anti-rocket system

JERUSALEM, 27 March—Israel's Defence Ministry says it has successfully tested a high-tech system designed to intercept incoming rockets.

A ministry statement says the Iron Dome system successfully intercepted rockets in tests carried out this week. The statement called the tests a "milestone" in the system's development.

Defence officials said on Friday that this was the first time the system had intercepted rockets in a test.

The system fires missiles that home in on incoming short and medium-range rockets of the type fired by Palestinian and Lebanese militants. Millions of Israelis are now in range of rockets fired by Hamas and Hezbollah.

Israel is spending more than $200 million on the system, which is supposed to be operational in 2010.

Nine police killed in southern Afghanistan

KABUL, 27 March—The Interior Ministry says militants have killed nine police officers in southern Afghanistan.

The ministry says in a statement the officers were attacked in Helmand Province's Nahri Sarraj district on Thursday. It blamed the "enemies of Afghanistan" for conducting the attack, a common reference to Taliban militants.

Lightly armed police bear the brunt of militant attacks across the country.

Southern Afghanistan is the center of the Taliban insurgency, where thousands of new US troops will be joining the fight later this year.

BEIJING, 27 March—As of the end of 2008, China had spent 181.5 billion yuan (26.5 billion US dollars) in dynamic investment, and 122.9 billion yuan in static investment, on the Three Gorges Hydropower Project on the upper reaches of the country's Yangtze River.

The project is now in its final stage in both construction and resettlement. The government is still working on guidelines for carrying out long-term follow-up programs that are aimed at ensuring a stable life for the more than one million resettled people, protecting the environment and preventing geological disasters in the area.

According to the official, after nearly 17 years of construction, the Three Gorges Reservoir is now able to hold water that's 175 meters high. All 26 generators, 700,000 kw each, were put into operation in November.

China expresses "resolute opposition" to US military report

BEIJING, 27 March — China on Thursday expressed its opposition to a new report by the US Defence Department on China's military strength.

"We have lodged solemn representations to the US side," Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Qin Gang told a regular press conference when asked to comment on this annual report.

The report continued disseminating the "Chinese military threat" theory, severely distorted the facts and interfered in China's internal affairs, Qin said.

"China unswervingly sticks to a path of peaceful development and pursues a national defense policy which is purely defensive in nature," he said, noting that China is devoted to safeguarding world peace and stability.

"We urged the US side to respect this basic fact," he noted.—Xinhua

At all times, you Comrades should be making an effort to accomplish the Four Major Tasks, building your Units through training, through when the Tatmadaw unavoidably had to assume State power, the nation had fallen into a state of serious deterioration. The stability of the State, community peace and tranquillity, and the rule of law had collapsed and the people were finding their very survival threatened through no fault of their own. No one but the Tatmadaw had the capability to bring such a situation under control.

Immediate action

Thus, the

Tatmadaw initially had to restore the stability of the State, community peace and tranquillity and the rule of law. While meeting the livelihood requirements of the people expeditiously on the one hand, immediate action was taken to clear up blockages in the transportation system and restore its safe and smooth functioning. Moreover, to achieve national reconciliation, a welcoming hand was extended in good faith and with goodwill to armed dissident groups that had appeared since independence was gained, in order to facilitate their return to the legal fold.

Comrades,

As the previous Constitution was no longer in effect, the Tatmadaw strove for the emergence of a new Constitution appropriate to the democratic system and the market economy that the people aspired to and capable of defending and protecting the causes of non-disintegration of the Union and non-disintegration of national solidarity.

National Convention

For this purpose, the representatives of political parties and the elected representatives were consulted, and taking their opinions into account, the National Convention was convened with delegates from every township in the country, including the delegates of the national groups, farmers, workers, intellectuals and professionals, civil service personnel and other invitees.

The National Convention started out with momentum and achieved initial successes, but had to be suspended subsequently for a variety of reasons. The Tatmadaw always kept the National Convention in mind. In order to utilize the available time for the benefit of the nation rather than letting it go to waste, the goal of building a peaceful, modern developed nation was implemented through ceaseless efforts.

Comrades,

Under the 3 major projects that the Tatmadaw has been carrying out, which are the Border Areas and National Peoples Development Project, the 24 Special Regions Development Project and the Rural Areas Development Project, the infrastructures for the economy, transportation, health, education, etc. have been constructed all over the country to an extent that is out of proportion to the 20-year period in which it has been accomplished. Such effective and expeditious implementation is the result of strong cooperation among the 3 principal pillars: the Government, the People and the Armed Forces.

administration, through welfare and through morale.

Comrades,

We must be combat-ready forever to defend the nation and protect the life and property of the people. To be combat-ready, we must have military awareness at all times and engage in continuous training.

Main duties

In addition, as true patriot soldiers, we have to uphold the public interest and serve the people not only by taking responsibility for national defence but also through participation in national development activities. These are our main duties.

Comrades,

In every national emergency, our Tatmadaw always stands steadfastly in front of the people to defend and protect them. In 1988

United strength

Another clear instance of the united strength of the Government, the People and the Armed Forces can be seen in the expeditious and effective relief, resettlement and rehabilitation in the aftermath of the disaster brought about by the Cyclone in 2008. I would like to stress that in our country, the unity—of the Government, the People and the Armed Forces—is the enabling factor for success.

Comrades,

At present, the new National Constitution has been adopted with the overwhelming support of the people. In 2010, elections will be held in proper order for the various Hluttaws to be formed in accordance with the new Constitution.

Transition to new system

In such a period of transition to a new system, all manner of political parties are likely to appear, reflecting diverse beliefs and political arrangements.

In our country, parliamentary democracy was practised in the post-independence period. The political parties in those days were the major established parties that played prominent roles in the independence struggle.

A view of the history of politics in our country reveals that splits in organizations and political parties were common and almost routine rather than unusual or unexpected occurrences.

Comrades,

The Young Men's Buddhist Association (YMBA), which played a prominent role in the national movement, was formed in 1906 and achieved national coverage in 1920 with its transformation into the General Council of Burmese Associations (GCBA). But in 1922, the GCBA first split into the 21-member faction led by U Ba Pè and U Maung Gyi, and the faction led by U Chit Hlaing, U Pu and U Tun Kyaw.

After further splits in the GCBA, the Doh Bama Asi Ayone was formed in 1930. In turn, the Doh Bama Asi Ayone split into the Thakhin Kodaw Hmaing faction and the Thakhin Ba Sein faction in 1938.

The Pyithu Yèbaw group formed in 1945 later split into the White Faction and the Yellow Faction. The Burma Communist Party with its roots going back to the Doh Bama Asi Ayone also split into Red Flag and White Flag factions in 1946.

Similarly, the Anti-Fascist People's Freedom League (AFPFL) expected to last at least 40 years and possibly much longer at the time of its formation in 1945 split amid deep controversy after only 13 years in 1958. The Pyi Daung Su Ah Phwe Gyoke (Pa Hta Sa) that appeared in 1960 after the AFPFL split also faced the problem of factionalism with conflicts between U, Bo and Thakhin factions. After that the danger of disintegration of the Union became a serious threat to our country.

Political parties need to have their campaigns...

Comrades,

The root causes that underlay the rise of fractious sectarianism and the proliferation of splits are found to be the incentives that the colonialists provided to expand their sphere of influence, the wedges of instigation and incitement that they drove in a well-planned manner among colleagues, the arrogance born of overestimating oneself, personal rivalries and underestimating others, jealousies, suspicions and grudges.

Some parties looked to foreign countries for guidance and inspiration, followed the imported ideologies and directives irrationally under foreign influence and carried out purges against fellow party members, which inevitably led to their demise. There were also many others that brought misery on themselves by aping the practices of countries with divergent development and dissimilar backgrounds. Power struggles were also seen to be a source of disunity.

After a split, different factions gave free rein to their feelings of hurt and resentment, accusing and attacking each other until reconciliation was no longer practical. In addition, the fear of persecution after a defeat led the losing factions to go underground. As you Comrades are aware, the evil practice of going underground was a great detriment to the nation. These are the lessons for us to learn.

Comrades,

In the post-independence period, disunity in our country led to numerous instances of armed opposition among national groups, which was detrimental to our country.

So, in our time, political parties need to have their campaigns grounded in a commitment to non-disintegration of the Union and non-disintegration of national solidarity as well as in the Union Spirit. It is also necessary to refrain completely from undermining the Constitution that has been adopted by the people.

Blessing of the government

Incidentally, I would like to request those who will be involved in organizing work for parties to refrain from inciting unrest, to avoid personal attacks and smear campaigns against other parties and to find unity in diversity by practising tolerance, forgiveness and understanding toward one another. Everyone following such ways and means of mature party organizing work will receive the blessing of the government. I would like to point out that this will ensure democracy does not collapse before it becomes established as a strong democracy.

Democratization process

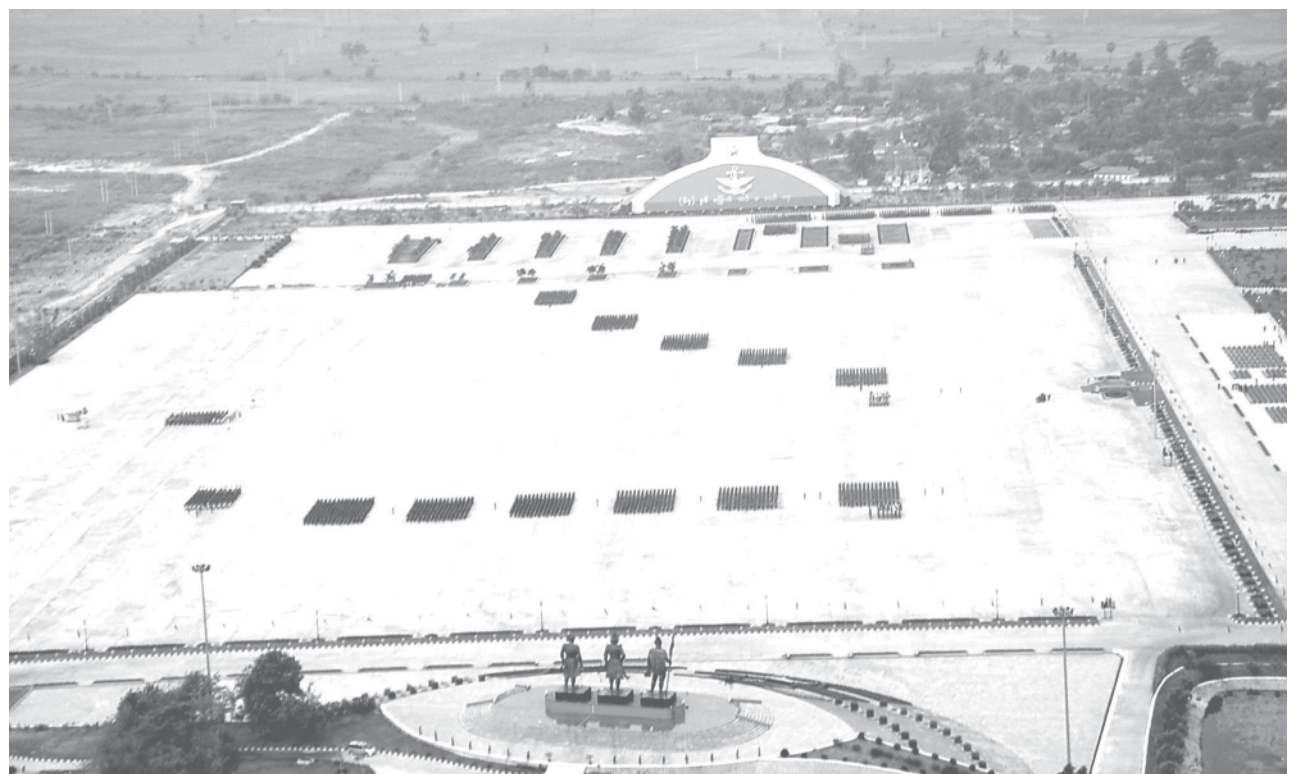

In the democratization process, given that the kind of well-established mature democracy that is the end result of two or three centuries of development cannot reasonably be made to appear overnight, all-round consideration and thoughtful action will be advisable. Democracy in Myanmar today is at a fledgling stage and still requires patient care and attention. As a Myanmar proverb puts it, a recently dug well cannot be expected to produce clear water immediately; understanding the process of gradual maturity is crucial, as is contributing to it through concerted constructive efforts in an environment of peace and tranquillity.

Comrades,

In conclusion, our Tatmadaw not only has the duty of national defence but it has to uphold the public interest and contribute to it. The building of a strong capable modern patriotic Armed Forces is an imperative. Serving the public interest has to continue through nation-building efforts initiated by the Government, the People and the Armed Forces with joined hands after the unavoidable assumption of State power by the Tatmadaw. We have to ensure that the practice of democracy in the country does not affect non-disintegration of the Union and non-disintegration of national solidarity. I would also like to urge you to make concerted efforts together with the government and the people, never losing sight of the national goal of building a peaceful modern developed nation. With this, I conclude my speech.—MNA

Zambia and Namibia face worst floods in 40 years

LUSAKA, 27 March—Zambia and Namibia face their worst floods in at least 40 years as rains swell the Zambezi River to record levels, destroying crops and swamping whole villages, disaster officials and aid workers said on Wednesday.

Zambia has put its air force on standby to airlift people to safety and Namibia has declared a state of emergency in flood-hit areas as waterways burst their banks in the narrow Caprivi Strip between Zambia and Botswana.

Some 400,000 people have been affected on both sides of Namibia's border with Angola alone, the international Red Cross movement said, adding that the number was likely to rise. —Internet

US economy sees quicker decline

LONDON, 27 March—The US economy shrank at a faster pace than previously estimated in the final three months of 2008.

US GDP contracted at an annualized rate of 6.3%, worse than a previous estimate of 6.2%. The rate of decline was the steepest since early 1982.

For 2008 as a whole, the economy expanded 1.1% in 2008, the weakest rate of growth since 2001.

However recent data has been less downbeat, with improved home sales and factory orders.

Economists had been expecting an even sharper contraction of 6.5%.

"I think people realize the economy seemingly fell off the cliff in the fourth quarter," said Doug Bender, managing director of McQueen, Ball & Associates, pointing out that the decline has continued this year.

Ban calls for global coop in fighting tuberculosis

UNITED NATIONS, 27 March—UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon Tuesday called on all countries in the world to work together and fight against tuberculosis (TB) amid the spreading financial crisis. In a message marking World TB Day, Ban said although strides have been made on combating TB, the pace of the disease's decline is "far too slow", with the contagium still claiming a life every 20 seconds.

He underlined the need to prevent infection, to detect cases at an early stage and to provide treatment for all. Vietnam to increase steel import tariffs

HANOI, 27 March —Vietnam's Ministry of Finance decided to increase import tariffs on certain steel and iron products in a bid to help domestic steel producers boost their consumption the local newspaper Vietnam Economic Times reported Friday.

Accordingly, the tax rate of 8 per cent will be imposed on steel ingot instead of 5 per cent. Import duties on finished products including rolled and barred steel will also rise 12 per cent to 15 per cent. Though local steel producers have continuously slashed prices, sales have still been slow due to low demand and the flood of imports with cheaper prices. The new tax rate will take effect as of 1 April.

Two Afghan farmers shot dead by NATO-led troops

KABUL, 27 March—NATO-led troops shot dead two Afghan farmers who were watering their land in east Afghanistan, a police chief told Reuters on Wednesday.

Afghan President Hamid Karzai has said civilian casualties are the biggest cause of tension between him and his Western backers, who have about 70,000 troops in Afghanistan fighting a Taliban-led insurgency.

The two Afghans were killed late on Tuesday just outside Khost city, east of the capital Kabul, provincial police chief Abdul Qayum Baqizoi said, adding they were innocent civilian farmers tending their land.

Study says very hot tea may cause throat cancer

LONDON, 27 March—Drinking hot tea may cause throat cancer, Iranian researchers said on Friday, suggesting people should let steaming drinks cool before consuming them.

Previous studies have linked tobacco and alcohol with cancer of the oesophagus, and the research published in the British Medical Journal suggests that scalding beverages may also somehow pave the way for such tumours.

Drinking very hot tea at a temperature of greater than 70 degrees Celsius was associated with an eight-fold increased risk of throat cancer compared to sipping warm or lukewarm tea at less than 65 degrees, the researchers said.

Reza Malekzadeh of Teheran University of Medical Sciences and colleagues studied the tea-drinking habits of 300 people with oesophageal cancer and another 571 healthy men and women from the same area in Golestan Province in northern Iran.

That region has one of the highest rates of throat cancer in the world but smoking rates and alcohol consumption are low, the researchers said. Nearly all the volunteers drank black tea regularly, consuming on average more than a litre each day.—MNA/Reuters

NZ climate good for long life

WELLINGTON, 27 March—New Zealand's climate is much better than Australia's when it comes to living a long life, according to research from a study of frogs.

Victoria University of Wellington has revealed that the tiny Maud Island frog, a threatened amphibian, can reach the grand age of 37, the oldest recorded age of any frog out of captivity, the New Zea- land Herald reported on Friday.

Professor Ben Bell, a researcher on the study, said similar long lives could be seen in other animals in Godzone.

"In frog terms, it's very comfortable here and it helps them to live longer. Australia has some amazing frogs that do very interesting things, but I don't know of any as long lived as these ones.

"Animals tend to do this in New Zealand, live for a very long time, like the geckos and the tuatara and the frogs are just following suit," Professor Bell said.

"There's something about the very comfortable climate, the few extremes in weather, that works for them and allows them to just keep on going."

"Washington post" "New York Times" seek new cost cuts

New York, 27 March—Two of the most respected US newspaper publishers. The Washington Post Co and The New York Time Co, are embarking on new cost cuts in the face of dramatic declines in advertising revenue.

The Time said it laid off 100 workers and is cutting non-union salaries. It is also asking unionized employees to accept similar concessions to avoid layoffs in the newsroom.

The Post is offering a new round of buyouts to newsroom, production and circulation employees, and said it could not rule out laying off staff.

"This was a very difficult decision to make," said a memo signed by Times Chairman Arthur Sulzberger Jr addn Chief Executive Janet Robinson. "The environment we are in is the toughest we have seen in or years in business."

The moves come as a host of other US newspaper publishers have reduced staff, declared bankruptcy or shuttered once-vaunted newspapers, as readers seek news online and elsewhere and as the recession crimps advertising spending.

UN report warns on threat of triple crises to Asia, Pacific

UNITED NATIONS, 27 March—A UN report released here Thursday warned that when most countries are focused on fighting the worst economic crisis in decades, two other longer-term crises, food-fuel price volatility and climate change, should not be forgotten.

"Food-fuel price volatility and climate change are converging with the present economic crisis to create what is now being referred to as the triple threat," said the Economic and Social Survey of Asia and the Pacific 2009, a publication of a UN's regional arm—the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and Pacific (ESCAP).

It said the triple crises are "interlinked and are reinforcing the impacts of each other," noting that the number of the poor in Asia and the Pacific, already two thirds of the global total, is likely to increase as a result of the economic crisis and rising unemployment.

The survey, released in over 20 cities across the region and in New York and Geneva, provides a regional perspective as well as country-specific analyses, and outlines ways in which economies in the region can move forward towards a more inclusive and sustainable development path.—Internet

Gere tours Galapagos, meets unique tortoise

Richard Gere may be adopting a new cause: the preservation of the Galapagos Islands.

Robot fish developed by British scientists are to be released into the sea off north Spain to detect pollution. The carp-shaped robots, costing 20,000 pounds ($29,000) apiece, mimic the movement of real fish and are equipped with chemical sensors to sniff out potentially hazardous pollutants, such as leaks from vessels or underwater pipelines.

Galapagos National Park spokeswoman Vanessa Garcia says that during a visit to the Ecuadorean islands, he offered to speak out publicly for their conservation.

The Galapagos are home to unique animal and plant species and were a living laboratory for Charles Darwin. But conservationists say they are threatened by development and tourism.

The 59-year-old star of "Pretty Woman" and "Chicago" is touring the archipelago with his wife and son. Ecuadorean TV shows Gere meeting Lonesome George, believed to be the last living member of the Geochelone abigdoni tortoise species.

Gere is an outspoken advocate for human rights in Tibet and other causes.

Python swallows 12.8-pound dog

An Australian woman said a python slithered onto her property and swallowed her 12.8-pound dog.

Patty Buntine said she became concerned on Wednesday when her Maltese terrier mix, Bindi, did not show up for breakfast at 7 am in her Katherine, Australia, home, the Northern Territory News reported Monday.

"She was always there so I got worried and went to look for her," she said. "I went around the side of the house and that's when I found the snake. It couldn't move and had its head up in a striking position. "It's belly was bulging — it looked like a great big coconut was inside it. I knew straight away that it had ate Bindi," she said.

Snake catcher David Reed of Reedy's Reptiles came to Buntine's home to collect the reptile.

"I've had a lot of calls about dogs that have been bitten by snakes, and I have even had an olive python that had eaten some new-born puppies, but never one like this," Reed wrote on his Web site, www.reedysreptiles.com.

World's oldest champagne opened

The world's oldest champagne, bottled before Victoria became Queen, is still drinkable, with notes of "truffles and caramel", according to the experts.

An "addictive" bottle of 1825 Perrier-Jouet was opened at a ceremony attended by 12 of the world's top wine tasters.

Their verdict: the 184-year-old champagne tasted better than some of its younger counterparts.

There are now just two 1825 vintage bottles left - and Perrier-Jouet has no plans to open them soon.

The wine and champagne experts convened at the winemaker's cellars in Eprenay in France, for a "once in a lifetime" tasting of the 1825 champagne - officially recognised by Guinness World Records as the world's oldest.

The 184-year-old cork was in good condition, helping to preserve the wine.

Ancelotti almost certain to stay, says Galliani

ROME, 27 March — AC Milan coach Carlo Ancelotti will almost certainly be staying at the club according to vice-president Adriano Galliani.

Speculation in the Italian press has long linked Ancelotti with a move to Spanish giants Real Madrid but Galliani said that would not happen. However, he said Milan would wait until they knew for sure which European competition they were playing in next season before beginning their summer shopping.

"It's 99.99 percent certain he will stay. All transfer dealings will begin the day when we know exactly what competition we'll be in," said Galliani. "I think and I hope it will be the Champions League. As for Ancelotti and Real I'm not worried."

McManus ruled out for Scots

GLASGOW, 27 March — Celtic captain Stephen McManus has lost his battle to be fit in time for Scotland's World Cup qualifier against Holland. The centreback, a first-choice for his country when fit, has been struggling with an ankle injury and had been rated only a 50-50 chance for the match in Amsterdam on Saturday evening.

The Scots remain hopeful he will be available for Wednesday's group nine match against Iceland at Hampden but he will not travel to Amsterdam, said Steven Pressley, one of manager George Burley's assistants. "Stephen did some light running today and was still feeling his ankle," Pressley reported.

Scotland's coaching staff have now seen five players pull out of the match against the Dutch since the start of the week with McManus joining his Celtic team-mate Paul Hartley, Rangers defenders David Weir and Kirk Broadfoot and the Derby winger Kris Commons on the sidelines.

There was good news however on Thursday concerning the condition of captain Barry Ferguson, who has been given the green light to play in Amsterdam after recovering sufficiently from bruised ribs.

Pressley said: "Barry Ferguson came through the late running okay and we are confident that he should make Saturday's game."

Loew recalls Enke and Gomez back for Germany

BERLIN, 27 March — Germany coach Joachim Loew said on Thursday he is set to recall goalkeeper Robert Enke and striker Mario Gomez for Saturday's World Cup qualifier against Liechtenstein in Leipzig.

Germany top Group 4 with nearest rivals Russia four points behind, but Loew knows his side can ill-afford to drop points either on Saturday or on April 1 against Wales in Cardiff before they travel to Moscow in October.

Back-to-back home defeats at the hands of England and Norway recently mean Germany need a convincing win at Leipzig's Zentralstadion to stay on course for South Africa next year.

Having recovered from a broken hand, Hanover's Robert, 31, is back in goal while an ankle injury to Bayern Munich's Miroslav Klose means Stuttgart's Mario Gomez will partner Bayern's Lukas Podolski up front. "Robert has showed good form in recent weeks and we trust him," said Loew in Wednesday's press conference. —Internet

Schalke parts company with Dutch coach Rutten

BERLIN, 27 March — German side Schalke 04 said on Thursday that they had parted company with their Dutch coach Fred Rutten.

Mike Buskens, Youri Mulder and Oliver Reck, all members of the club's backroom staff, will take charge of training.

Earlier Thursday, the 46-year-old Rutten said he had expected to leave the struggling Bundesliga side at the end of the season.

Rutten had a contract with Schalke until 2010 having only taken over as trainer of the Royal Blues in July 2008, but the club are eighth in the table and have been blighted by erratic form this season. —Internet

Beckham will play minder for fiery Rooney

LONDON, 27 March — David Beckham is ready to act as Wayne Rooney's minder to keep the fiery England forward out of trouble.

England coach Fabio Capello called Rooney a "crazy man" following the Manchester United star's petulant red card for throwing the ball at the referee against Fulham last weekend. Capello's joke hid concern that a lack of individual discipline could damage England's hopes of a successful World Cup campaign in South Africa next year.

Rooney has often struggled to control his temper with England and was sent off for stamping on Ricardo Carvalho in the 2006 quarter-final defeat against Portugal. He was also substituted by Sven Goran Eriksson after losing his rag in a friendly against Spain in 2004.

Beckham knows from personal experience how the red mist can descend quickly on the pitch following his costly red card for kicking Diego Simeone in the 2002 World Cup defeat to Argentina. The on-loan AC Milan midfielder is a more mature figure now but he knows it is essential that Rooney retains his fire or he will become a less dynamic player.

Captain Ballack urges Germany to raise their game

BERLIN, 27 March — Germany captain Michael Ballack on Thursday urged the Euro 2008 finalists to raise their game for Saturday's World Cup qualifier against Liechtenstein to banish the memories of their recent defeats.

The 32-year-old Chelsea star is demanding a raised effort in Leipzig from his side who have lost their last two home games: a 2-1 defeat to England last November and a 1-0 defeat to Norway in February. Germany have not suffered back-to-back home defeats since 1956 and Ballack says only a convincing win over Liechtenstein, ranked 151st in the world, will suffice.
