Carry out environmental sanitation activities for health and fitness

Each and every one needs to be healthy and fit and to enjoy longevity. The Ministry of Health is providing health care services with added momentum for the people to live a long life and be free from diseases.

As health activities are a national concern, all are to take part in the drive for personal hygiene, environmental sanitation and availability and use of clean water while living a healthy life in line with the notifications of health.

In Myanmar, the environmental sanitation and personal hygiene activities have been launched for decades. The public health care services cover treatment and prevention. Prevention of diseases can be carried out through personal hygiene, environmental sanitation and use of clean water.

The national environmental sanitation week is designated from 4 to 10 April. Mass activities on the use of clean water, consumption of wholesome foods, personal hygiene and clean toilets will be carried out extensively during the week.

At present, the people and social organizations together with the health staff are actively participating in the tasks for the people to be free from diarrhea and related cases, use of fly-proof latrines and environmental sanitation.

With this end in view, the entire people are to constantly practise personal hygiene such as washing hands with soap, partaking wholesome foods, systematic disposal of leftovers and engaging in environmental sanitation activities. Only then, will they be able to live a long life and be free from diseases.

US troop surge could harm Afghan civilians

KABUL, 3 April — The imminent deployment of extra US troops to insurgency-torn Afghanistan will likely lead to increased fighting and more civilian casualties, aid agencies warned NATO leaders on Friday. In a report entitled “Caught in the Conflict,” released as the alliance’s leaders met in Strasbourg, the 11 agencies called for “a truly comprehensive strategy for the long-term reconstruction and stabilisation of Afghanistan.”

NATO leads a nearly

62,000-strong military force fighting a Taliban-led insurgency in Afghanistan and Washington has pledged 21,000 extra soldiers this year and is mulling 10,000 more as part of efforts to tackle the militants. “There is a likelihood that the deployment of more troops will lead to more fighting and that civilians will be caught up in those hostilities,” Oxfam head of policy in Kabul, Matt Waldman, said on Thursday ahead of the report’s release.

“So that is why we are calling for military forces to do everything possible to minimise the harm that they cause to civilians, whether it is in air strikes or in ground operations,” Waldman told reporters.

Last year was the deadliest of the insurgency spearheaded by the Taliban, who were removed from government in a US-led invasion in late 2001. Nearly 2,200 civilians were killed, a 30 percent increase on the previous year, according to the United Nations.—Internet

Gunman kills at least 13 in hostage attack

NEW YORK, 3 April—A gunman has killed at least 13 people, seriously injured five others and taken up to 41 people hostage in Binghamton, New York state.

US news channel Fox News is reporting 15 dead in the attacks, quoting Federal and other official sources. ABC also says at least 26 people are hurt.

Latest reports say two Asian males were taken from the scene with their hands bound, suggesting the gunman may not have been working alone.

US news source WGBH said police are looking for a third suspect in connection with the shooting.

US officials said at least one man, believed to be in his 20s, was armed with a high-powered rifle at the American Civic Centre building at about 10.30 local time (3.30pm BST).

Police fire tear gas at NATO protesters

STRASBOURG (France), 3 April — Police fired tear gas at rock-hurling protesters Friday on the eve of a NATO summit—the first real confrontation after hours of mostly small, scattered and peaceful rallies.

Police said that several hundred protesters started to burn a makeshift barricade of slats of wood and trash bins on a road leading to a camp of demonstrators in the Strasbourg neighborhood of Neuhof.

Some of the protesters said they were frustrated about the large police presence in the French city and across the Rhine river in the German cities of Kehl and Baden-Baden, where President Barack Obama and German Chancellor Angela Merkel met.

Some 15,000 German police—including 31 riot squads — and 9,000

Iraqi officer, gunman killed in clash in Baghdad

BAGHDAD, 3 April — An Iraqi Army officer and a gunman were killed in fighting in western Baghdad on Thursday, an Interior Ministry source said.

The clash erupted when two gunmen were about to hurl a hand grenade at a passing Iraqi Army vehicle near al-Rwwad intersection in Mansour district, prompting the soldiers to trade fire with the attackers, the source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

The clash resulted in the killing of an Army officer and a gunman, while the soldiers arrested another gunman, the source said.

Three civilians were also wounded by the fire exchange, the source added.

Despite security gains in recent months in Iraq, there are still sporadic bombings targeting US troops, Iraqi security forces and civilians, which shape setback to the Iraqi government.

Palestinian kills Israeli teenager with pickax

BAT AYIN, 3 April—A Palestinian killed an Israeli teenager with a pickax and seriously injured a 7-year-old boy in a rampage through this West Bank Jewish settlement on Thursday, posing an early test for the country's new hard-line government.

Israeli media broadcast pictures of the body of 13-year-old Shlomo Nativ, bespectacled with long sidecurls and a large skullcap worn by observant Jews. The images also showed the red pickax on the ground with drops of blood splattered on a road.

The attacker escaped the scene and Israeli troops, joined by bearded settlers armed with automatic rifles, were conducting a manhunt in the area. In the nearby Palestinian village of Safa, troops searched houses and rounded up residents in a schoolyard. The military said all roads around the settlement of Bat Ayin were closed.

The settlement is notorious in Israel for being the base of the so-called "Bat Ayin Underground," whose members were arrested over a botched 2002 bombing on an Arab girls' school in Jerusalem. The wounded boy's father, a member of the underground, is currently serving a 15-year sentence for his involvement in that bombing attempt.—Internet

Wildfires burn about 34 homes in South Texas

DALLAS, 3 April—Blustery weather that rolled across Texas on Thursday apparently downed power lines, sparking a fire that destroyed about 34 homes in a small town near Lake Corpus Christi, authorities said.

One volunteer firefighter was burned and two other people suffered minor injuries in the afternoon fire that burned 175 acres in Lagarto in southern Live Oak County, the Texas Forest Service said.

A spokeswoman at the Live Oak County Sheriff's Office said not all of the homes that burned were occupied. Three shelters were set up, and the Coastal Bend-Texas Chapter of the American Red Cross had set up a command centre to assess what people needed.

Lewis Kearney, spokesman for the Texas Forest Service, said the fire was 60 percent contained Thursday night and power lines downed by the winds were the suspected cause. Ten vehicles were destroyed in the blaze.—Internet

Filipino Red Cross hostage freed, two others alive

MANILA, 3 April—A Filipino Red Cross worker freed by al-Qaeda-linked militants on Thursday after 10 weeks of captivity in a southern Philippine jungle told a government official that the remaining Swiss and Italian hostages were alive but tired and in danger.

The unexpected release of Mary Jean Lacaba and news that her colleagues have not been killed came after the Abu Sayyaf militants threatened to behead one of the hostages on Tuesday because Philippine forces refused to withdraw from the surrounding area.

Abu Sayyaf gunmen handed over the 37-year-old Lacaba in the jungles near Indanan township on Jolo Island without any ransom payment, government negotiator Lady Anne Sahidulla said. Lacaba was taken in a wheelchair to a Jolo military hospital, looking weak and confused amid the frenzy over her release. Marketers bullish on China's recovery

BEIJING, 3 April—Top marketers based in China believe that the country's economy will recover more quickly than the West, and is likely to turn around by 2010, according to a survey conducted by market research firm Millward Brown-ACSR and communications agency Hill & Knowlton.

The survey of 59 chief marketing officers and senior marketing directors (85 percent of whom are from multinationals) indicated that cautious optimism exists in marketing departments, with 75 percent of correspondents believing the economy would return to a booming state next year, as Chinese consumers had been less affected than those in the West.

Senior management expressed more confidence (81 percent) than other levels (71 percent) about the country's economic recovery by 2010.

The findings also showed that overall marketing budgets in 2009 will not be reduced, even though the pressure to cut costs is mounting in boardrooms worldwide.

Sixty-three percent of interviewees said they will increase or maintain their marketing spending this year compared to 2008, while only 18 percent indicated that their budgets would be cut by over 20 percent.

The survey also revealed that "retaining existing clients" was the top priority for marketers (50 percent), while "retaining talented employees" was of the least importance (5 percent).—Xinhua

Researcher says China plays more active, constructive role in world

STOCKHOLM, 3 April — A senior Swedish researcher said China has played a more active and constructive role in world affairs in recent years.

"Over the past 10 years, China has increasingly emphasized multilateral relations with other countries," Linda Jakobson of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI) said in an interview with Xinhua on Wednesday. Jakobson said China now seeks to solve problems and important matters on the world stage through multilateralism. She said China does not wish to see the formation of G2 with the United States. "China relies on multilateral diplomatic policy. Of course the China-US relationship is very important. But it's just one part of China's international foreign policy," she said.

On the current global financial crisis and climate change, Jakobson said these matters would increase China's desire to rely on multilateralism. As to China-Africa relations, she said Africa is China's new platform for playing its global role. Although China needs natural resources and new export markets, most African governments appreciate the help from China as it treats African countries equally, she said. Jakobson emphasized China tries to find a balance in its relationship with all countries. — Xinhua

Currency basket can replace US dollar, says UN advisor

BEIJING, 3 April—A UN advisor has suggested that a basket of currencies — including a regional currency in Asia - could replace the US dollar in shaping the global financial system.

"I think China should play a cooperative role with Japan, South Korea and other Asian countries to introduce a regional currency while the world is trying to replace the old reserve currency system," Jeffrey Sachs, special advisor to UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon, told China Daily on Wednesday. Sachs is also professor of Columbia University.

He said China's central bank governor Zhou Xiaochuan has come up with an innovative idea to introduce a global currency in an effort to redefine the rigid global financial regime, which has undergone no major change since World War II.

"However, I think the US dollar, British pound, euro and a regional currency in Asia can shape a basket of global reserve currencies with their own special drawing rights," said Sachs, who is with the UN delegation attending the G20 summit.

He believes the US's previous supply side monetary policies and the US dollar's monopoly were the roots of the financial crisis.

However, Sachs was more reserved about the idea of introducing a global currency to replace the US dollar and said China should cooperate with Japan, South Korea and some other countries.—Xinhua

German car sales soar 40% in March

BERLIN, 3 April—Car sales in Germany, the world's automobile-making giant, soared 40 percent year-on-year in March, said an official data released on Thursday.

Germany's VDA automobile federation said the new car sales rose to 401,000 in March in the biggest car market of Europe compared to the same month last year.

This is the biggest boost since 1992, according to VDA.

The figure shows an upbeat sign that the world auto industry maybe recovering from a collapse that has forced job cuts and plant closures.

The rise of the sales was partly thanks to the German governmental stimulus funds, which was earmarked earlier in January for used car replacement, totaling 1.5 billion euros (1.98 billion US dollars).

The premium programme is a part of broader economic stimulus package in boosting the gloomy automobile industry. The programme is designed to underpin new car sales, with buyers getting a bonus of 2,500 euros if they scrap a car that is at least nine years old.—Internet

Tough laws against biker gangs passed in Australia

SYDNEY, 3 April—Tough new anti-terrorism style laws allowing biker gangs to be outlawed have been rushed through an Australian state parliament amid growing fears of gang warfare.

The crackdown follows escalating violence sparked by the fatal bludgeoning of the brother of a Hells Angel at Sydney Airport last month, which was followed by reprisal shootings and bomb threats.

Under the laws passed by the upper house of the New South Wales state parliament around midnight Thursday, police will be able to apply for a motorcycle gang to be declared a criminal organisation by a judge.

Once declared, members of the gang found to be associating with one another could be jailed for up to two years.

Two Komodo dragons kill man in eastern Indonesia

Two Komodo dragons mauled a fruit-picker to death in eastern Indonesia, police and witnesses said on Tuesday, the latest in a string of attacks on humans by the world's largest lizard species.

Police Sgt Kosmas Jalang said 31-year-old Muhamad Anwar was attacked on Komodo, one of four islands where the giant reptile is found in the wild, minutes after he fell out of a sugar-apple tree on Monday. He was bleeding badly from bites to his hands, body, legs and neck after two lizards, waiting below, attacked him, according to a neighbour, Theresia Tawa. He died at a clinic on the neighboring island of Flores soon after.

Attacks on humans by Komodo dragons — said to number at less than 4,000 in the wild — are rare, but seem to have increased in recent years.

An 8-year-old boy was killed in 2007 — the first recorded deadly attack on a human by one of the endangered lizards in three decades. A park ranger narrowly survived after one of the animals entered his hut last month and started biting his hands and legs.

APACE: Looted Chinese relics should return home

BEIJING, 3 April — The two looted Chinese bronze sculptures that were auctioned in Paris should return to its motherland, head of a European art protection organization said here on Thursday.

Relative Chinese authorities should negotiate with the current owners of the two looted bronzes and some French companies so that they could buy the cultural relics and donate them back to China, said Bernard Gomez, president of the Association for the Protection of Chinese Art in Europe (APACE), after APACE signed a memorandum of cooperation with the National Treasure Funds of China (NTFC).

Both side pledged to adopt proper, reasonable and legal means to get the two animal heads back to China, as well as explore a new way for the return of looted Chinese cultural relics through international civil cooperation, according to the memorandum.

Niu Xianfeng, deputy director of NTFC, praised APACE for its consistent support for helping China to pursue looted cultural relics.

China has repeatedly demanded the return of the sculptures looted when the Old Summer Palace (Yuanmingyuan) was burned down by Anglo-French allied forces during the Second Opium War in 1860. However, Christie's held the auction after a court in Paris turned down a motion by Chinese lawyers to stop the auction.

US immigration officials sued for abusing civil rights

LOS ANGELES, 3 April — Civil rights groups announced on Thursday they have sued the Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency in federal district court for detaining immigrants in egregious and unsanitary conditions in Los Angeles. The lawsuit filed on 1 April said detainees at the Los Angeles facility have no soap, drinking water, toothpaste, toothbrushes, sanitary napkins, changes of clothing or showers.

The lawsuit, filed by the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) of Southern California, the National Immigration Law Centre and the Law firm of Paul Hastings, Janofsky and Walker

LLP, also charged that the unsanitary conditions have led the ICE to deprive immigrants of due-process rights such as accessing to mail or attorneys while in detention. The announcement came on the same day when two US House subcommittees held a joint hearing to examine civil rights abuses committed by state and local police functioning as federal immigration agents.

MIT researchers make virus battery

WASHINGTON, 3 April — For the first time, MIT researchers have shown they can genetically engineer viruses to build both the positively and negatively charged ends of a lithium-ion battery, according to a study released on Thursday in the online edition of journal Science.

The new virus-produced batteries have the same energy capacity and power performance as state-of-the-art rechargeable batteries being considered to power plug-in hybrid cars, and they could also be used to power a range of personal electronic devices, said Angela Belcher, the MIT materials scientist who led the research team.

The new batteries could be manufactured with a cheap and environmentally benign process: The synthesis takes place at and below room temperature and requires no harmful organic solvents, and the materials that go into the battery are non-toxic.

In a traditional lithium-ion battery, lithium ions flow between a negatively charged anode, usually graphite, and the positively charged cathode, usually cobalt oxide or lithium iron phosphate. Three years ago, an MIT team led by Belcher reported that it had engineered viruses that could build an anode by coating themselves with cobalt oxide and gold and self-assembling to form a nanowire.

In the latest work, the team focused on building a highly powerful cathode to pair up with the anode, said Belcher, the Germeshausen Professor of Materials Science and Engineering and Biological Engineering in MIT. Cathodes are more difficult to build than anodes because they must be highly conducting to be a fast electrode. However, most candidate materials for cathodes are highly insulating (non-conductive).

UN chief calls for greater efforts to help people with autism lead full lives

UNITED NATIONS, 3 April—UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon on Thursday called for intensifying global efforts to ensure that the estimated 67 million people worldwide with autism can benefit from the supportive environment they need to reach their full potential and contribute to society.

In a message marking World Autism Awareness Day, which falls on Thursday, Ban said the growing international chorus of voices calling for action to enable children and persons with autism to lead full and meaningful lives.

"This is not a far-off dream; it is a reality that can be attained by promoting positive perceptions about autism, as well as a greater social understanding of this growing challenge," he said.

On 18 December, 2007, the General Assembly designated 2 April as World Autism Awareness Day in order to galvanize global efforts to promote greater understanding about the disorder which affects tens of millions around the globe.

This year's observance is being marked with lectures, briefings, screenings, musical performances, video conferences, art installations and other activities carried out by the UN family and its partners.—Internet

Size counts in the sunny side of life

BEIJING, 3 April—Large, colourful and flashy — sunglasses fashion this summer is definitely conspicuous. "Colourful frames are hot, as are frames with way-out patterns, like spider webs, peace signs or skulls," says Gabriele Gerling of Germany's Central Association of Opticians in Dusseldorf.

Retro is the catchword nowadays but not just from the 1950s and '60s; everything from the 1930s to the 1970s is represented.

What all new styles have in common is the extra large format. Oversized, visually striking sunglasses are setting the tone, according to Berlin eyewear specialist Kerstin Kruschinski.

"The large lenses protect the eyes and the sensitive thin skin around the eyes," says Kruschinski. In this way, the glasses help prevent early development of wrinkles and conceal, when necessary, the aftermath of a long night of partying.

UK study finds bird can "read" human gaze

WASHINGTON, 3 April—We all know that people sometimes change their behaviour when someone is looking their way. Now, a new study released on Thursday in the online edition of US journal Current Biology, shows that jackdaws — birds related to crows and ravens with eyes that appear similar to human eyes — can do the same. "Jackdaws seem to recognize the eye's role in visual perception, or at the very least they are extremely sensitive to the way that human eyes are oriented," said Auguste von Bayern, formerly of the University of Cambridge and now at the University of Oxford. When presented with a preferred food, hand-raised jackdaws took significantly longer to retrieve the reward when a person was directing his eyes toward the food than when he was looking away, according to the research team led by Nathan Emery of the University of Cambridge and Queen Mary University of London. The birds hesitated only when the person in question was unfamiliar and thus potentially threatening.—Internet

Astronauts may need more intense workouts to maintain muscle fitness in space

WASHINGTON, 3 April—A new study published on Thursday in the The Journal of Applied Physiology suggests that astronauts need to modify their workouts to avoid extensive muscle loss during missions onboard the International Space Station (ISS).

The latest NASA-sponsored research from Indiana-based Ball State University's Human Performance Laboratory (HPL) suggests that changes are needed to optimize the in flight exercise regimen for astronauts to improve their muscle performance while in space for extended stays.

Average stays on the ISS run about six months, and preservation of crewmember health in zero-gravity environments is paramount for safety and mission success. Since exercise is the primary course of action to protect the cardiovascular system, bone, and skeletal muscles, astronauts need to find the optimal exercises to stay fit.

The findings of the Ball State study were based in part on muscle biopsies taken from the astronauts, the first time this procedure has been allowed on crewmembers who have completed long-flight missions, according to

Scott Trappe, HPL director.

Working with NASA, Marquette University's biological sciences department in Wisconsin, Wyle Integrated Science and Engineering Group in Houston, and the Medical College of Wisconsin, Trappe found that even while the crewmembers exercised, they still lost an average of 15 percent muscle mass and 20 to 30 percent loss of muscle performance.—Internet

Mitsubishi raises output target for electric car

TOKYO, 3 April — Mitsubishi Motors Corp will increase production of its planned electric vehicle after orders for its first 2,000 cars were quickly filled, a spokesman said on Friday.

Japan's No 4 automaker aims to roll out the "i MiEV" zero-emissions car for leasing in Japan by July. The first year's planned production of 2,000 units has already sold out with Japanese corporate leasers, including utility Tokyo Electric Power Co and convenience store chain Lawson, said company spokesman Kai Inada.

Due to the strong interest, Mitsubishi Motors is raising its output of the model for 2010 from 4,000 to 5,000 units, he said. Mitsubishi Motors plans to sell the i MiEV — which can be recharged from a regular home socket — in Europe through Peugeot Citroen PSA in 2010, and sales to individual consumers in Japan are planned for 2011. The potential growth of such "green" cars is offering a glimmer of hope for the world's automakers, which are struggling to cope with plunging auto demand caused by the global economic slowdown and credit crunch.—Internet

GlaxoSmithKline seeks new approval for breast-cancer drug

TRENTON, 3 April — GlaxoSmithKline PLC on Wednesday applied for approval in the US and Europe to sell an existing breast-cancer drug as a first-line treatment.

The British pharmaceutical company's Tykerb was approved here two years ago as part of a treatment for most women with advanced breast cancer that wasn't stopped after chemotherapy and other drugs. It's also been approved for that use in the 27 European Union countries and several others. Tykerb, a pill that is more targeted than chemotherapy, had sales of $189 million last year. Approval as an initial treatment likely would boost that sharply.

Tykerb is currently approved for women with advanced breast cancer that is HER2-positive, meaning the cancer cells have more of the HER2 protein on them than healthy cells.

GlaxoSmithKline now is seeking to market it as an initial treatment for advanced breast cancer that is hormone-sensitive. About two-thirds of breast cancers are hormone sensitive, meaning they are fueled by the estrogen the body makes.

Ice-free Arctic summers likely sooner than expected

WASHINGTON, 3 April — Summers in the Arctic may be ice-free in as few as 30 years, not at the end of the century as previously expected, according to a study released by US National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA). The updated forecast is the result of a new analysis of computer models coupled with the most recent summer ice measurements.

"The Arctic is changing faster than anticipated," said James Overland, an oceanographer at NOAA's Pacific Marine Environmental Laboratory and co-author of the study, which will appear

Friday in Geophysical Research Letters. "It's a combination of natural variability, along with warmer air and sea conditions caused by increased greenhouse gases."

Overland and his co-author, Muyin Wang, a University of Washington research scientist with the Joint Institute for the Study of the Atmosphere and Ocean in Seattle, analyzed projections from six computer models, including three with sophisticated sea ice physics capabilities.

That data was then combined with observations of summer sea ice loss in 2007 and 2008.—Internet

Nanjing among three cities bid for 2014 Youth Olympics

GENEVA, 3 April — The International Olympic Committee said on Thursday that three cities, including China's Nanjing, pose to be the candidates to race for the staging right of the 2014 Summer Youth Olympics.

Nanjing joins Mexico's Guadalajara and Poland's Poznan to be in the running, as the other three countries that originally expressed interest to the IOC, namely Indonesia, Morocco and Turkey, have dropped out.

The bid cities must now submit detailed bid files by Sept. 4, with the IOC executive board to make a short list in December and the full IOC membership to vote on it in Vancouver before the Winter Olympics open in February 2010.

The 2014 event is scheduled to take place over 12 days with up to 3,500 athletes aged 14-18 competing in as many as possible of the 26 official Olympic summer sports.

Singapore, which beat Poznan in the bidding, will host the first Summer Youth Games in 2010, while the first Winter Youth Olympics is scheduled for 2012 in Innsbruck, Austria. —Xinhua

Lincicome's 66 good for lead at Kraft Nabisco

RANCHO MIRAGE, 3 April — Brittany Lincicome never saw a 66 coming in the first round of the Kraft Nabisco Championship.

Likewise, defending champion Lorena Ochoa wasn't expecting to open with a 73 when she headed out onto the same desert course where she was 11 strokes better three years ago. "It was surreal, really," Lincicome said after taking the lead in the first LPGA Tour major of the year Thursday with her 6-under 66 at Mission Hills.

Pushed along by playing partner Ji Young Oh in a round she likened to match play, Lincicome hit 16 greens in regulation. Oh hit 14 greens and was tied for second at 67 with Angela Stanford and Brittany Lang. Lincicome, whose best finish in a major was a tie for second here two years ago, was thinking that something around par would have made for a good day.

"If you would have told me that this morning I would have taken it and ran," she said about her 66. "Obviously it's a major, so it's going to be playing long.

The rough is going to be thick. Even par or 1 or 2 under I would have been completely satisfied."

While Lincicome and Oh fought it out, Ochoa struggled with her driver.

The top-ranked Mexican star started on the 10th tee and was 2 under at the turn before carding three bogeys and no birdies on the front nine.

Del Potro stuns Nadal at Miami ATP Masters

MIAMI, 3 April — Juan Martin del Potro shocked world number one Rafael Nadal in the quarter-finals of the Miami ATP Masters 1000, downing the top-seeded Spaniard 6-4, 3-6, 7-6 (7/3).

In the semi-finals, the sixth-seeded Argentinian will face world number four Andy Murray of Britain, who beat eighth-seeded Spaniard Fernando Verdasco 6-1, 6-2. Nadal, who won his sixth Grand Slam title at the Australian Open, also won the first Masters 1000 crown of the year at Indian Wells in March.

He had won all four of his previous meetings with del Potro without dropping a set - including a quarter-final victory at Indian Wells. But before a raucous, largely pro-del Potro crowd the Argentinian fought back from 0-3 down in the third set to prevail in the tiebreaker.

"Today, I did everything," del Potro said. "I served very good, and hit with my forehand with big confidence." "To beat Rafa, you have to be in good shape in every part of your game, and today I did a great job." —Internet

Mourinho wants records

MILAN, 3 April — Inter Milan manager Jose Mourinho said in a remarkable interview Wednesday he feels like the "Robin Hood" of the club, whom he plans to leave and then lead a Spanish club to title glory.

Mourinho, who led Chelsea to the English Premier League title in 2005 and 2006, is confident his side will win this year's Italian league crown. And if they do, he said it would allow him to then focus on achieving a rare feat of winning championship titles in the "three most competitive football leagues in the world".

"Now we are going to win the title," said the Portuguese, speaking to Italia1 television channel

Inter Milan manager Jose Mourinho.

Wednesday. "And then we'll sit down to consider the future." Despite having another year on his contract, he added: "Once my experience with Inter comes to an end I hope to go and coach in Spain because my aim is to win league titles in the top three competitive leagues in the world. All that's missing is La Liga (Spain)."

Inter currently have a seven-point lead over Juventus in Serie A.

Furious Bruce rounds on Zaki

WIGAN, 3 April — Wigan manager Steve Bruce said Thursday he was at the "end of my tether" with Amr Zaki after the on-loan Egypt forward failed to return on time from international duty for the fourth time this season.

Zaki was due back in Wigan on Tuesday, more than 36 hours after Egypt's game against Zambia. His compatriot and fellow striker Mido made it back on time but repeated attempts by Wigan to contact Zaki came to nothing.

Bruce, who said he intended to impose a heavy fine on Zaki, did not have his mood improved by the arrival of a fax from the Egypt team doctor saying the forward had a hamstring injury. But the standard scan detailing the extent of Zaki's injury did not accompany the fax.

Serena beats Venus to set up Azarenka title clash

MIAMI, 3 April — Serena Williams assured herself of some more time atop the world rankings and gave herself a shot at a record sixth Miami title Thursday with a three-set victory over her sister Venus in the ATP and WTA hardcourt tournament here.

Serena, who claimed her 10th Grand Slam title at the Australian Open in January, evened her career head-to-head record against her elder sister at 10 wins apiece with a 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 victory. "I definitely knew about it," Serena said of her head-to-head record against her sister. "It's definitely good to even it up. I would love to be in the lead again."

She'll seek a third straight Miami title, and sixth overall, when she tackles 19-year-old Victoria Azarenka of Belarus in the final. The two met in the Australian Open quarter-finals, when a distraught Azarenka retired with a stomach ailment while leading 6-3, 2-4. —Internet

No fine for outspoken Podolski after Ballack row

BERLIN, 3 April — Striker Lukas Podolski has escaped a German Football Federation (DFB) fine despite his on-field spat with captain Michael Ballack in the 2-0 win over Wales, it was revealed Thursday.

Ballack and Podolski clashed in the second half of the World Cup qualifier at Cardiff's Millennium Stadium on Wednesday, but despite the Bayern Munich star arguing fiercely with his captain, the DFB will not fine the 23-year-old. Germany coach Joachim Loew revealed the argument erupted when Ballack gave Podolski a tactical instruction and laid the blame firmly at the striker's door.

"If the captain gives a player a tactical instruction, then that player must obey," said Loew. "That is absolutely clear. Lukas has to listen to an experienced player like Michael Ballack." Ballack and Podolski exchanged heated words on the Cardiff pitch and the spat was only ended when Germany defenders Per Mertesacker and Philipp Lahm intervened while Loew then immediately replaced Podolski. —Internet

Ecuador buys seven helicopters from India

QUITO, 3 April—The Ecuadorean Air Force said Thursday it has bought seven helicopters from India transporing personnel and rescue operations. Of the seven choppers, one will be exclusively used by Ecuadorean President Rafael Correa, news reports said.

Five of the seven HAL helicopters, Dhruv, are being assemble in the air base of Taura, in Guayaquil. The choppers were bought from the Indian company Hindustan Aeronautics Limited at a cost of 50 million US dollars. The helicopters have the capacity of carrying 15 passengers and can fly a maximum altitude of 21,000 feet.

The training to fly the helicopters will take some three months, and two Indian pilots will stay in Ecuador for two years to train the pilots according to Rodrigo Bohorquez commander of the Ecuadorean Air Force.—MNA/Xinhua

Central Institute of Transport and Communications in Meiktila turning out competent workers

Article & Photos: Ko Tin Hlaing (Meiktila)

Today, all the ministries are striving for all-round development of the Union of Myanmar. In doing so, the Ministry of Rail Transportation is carrying out the construction of new railroads for ensuring secure and smooth rail transportation. Moreover, emphasis is being placed on import of new locomotives and new carriages, construction of new cargo coaches and providing of driving courses for automobiles and locomotives.

In this regard, opening of the training schools is one of the important tasks for ensuring the secure and improved transportation.

Mollusks taste memories to build shells

SCIENCE DAILY, 2 April—University of California, Berkeley, graduate student Alistair Boettiger has amassed a beautiful collection of seashells, but not by combing the beach. He created them in his computer.

By adjusting nine parameters in a single equation, a computer model can generate patterned shells (right example in each pair above) that closely resemble real mollusk shells.

He and George Oster, a UC Berkeley biophysicist, along with University of Pittsburgh mathematical neuroscientist Bard Ermentrout, have written a computer program that generates the complex patterns of seashells using simple principles developed to explain how the brain works and how memories are stored.

The "neural net" model explains how mollusks build their seashells based on the finding that the mollusk's tongue-like mantle, which overlaps the edge of the growing shell, senses or "tastes" the calcium carbonate layer laid down the day before in order to generate a new layer.

"The pattern on a seashell is the mollusk's memories," said Oster, a professor of environmental science, policy and management and of molecular and cell biology. "The shell is laid down in layers, so the mantle is sensing the history of the mollusk's 'thoughts' and extrapolating to the next layer, just like our brains project into the future."

DNA analysis uncovers prehistory Norwegian red deer

OSLO, 3 April—For his doctoral thesis, Hallvard Haanes discovered that Norwegian red deer are genetically different from other European red deer, due to their historical distribution. However, a century ago, red deer were imported from continental Europe to the island of Otterøya in Namsos, and these imported deer have created hybrid forms with the Norwegian red deer on the island.

These hybrids have only to a modest degree become integrated with the rest of the Norwegian red deer population. Red deer colonised Norway after the last ice age. Since then the population has been isolated from the rest of Europe, and on several occasions their numbers were reduced so dramatically that the genetic makeup became altered and genetic diversity was lost.—Internet

Huge population of rare dolphins discovered

DHAKA, 3 April — The Wildlife Conservation Society (WCS) has just announced the discovery of a huge population of rare dolphins in South Asia—but warns that the population is threatened by climate change and fishing nets.

Using rigorous scientific techniques, WCS researchers estimate that nearly 6,000 Irrawaddy dolphins, which are related to orcas or killer whales, were found living in freshwater regions of Bangladesh's Sundarbans mangrove forest and adjacent waters of the Bay of Bengal—an area where little marine mammal research has taken place up to this point. Prior to this study, the largest known populations of Irrawaddy dolphins numbered in the low hundreds or less.

Each discovery of Irrawaddy dolphins is important because scientists do not know how many remain on the planet. In 2008, they were listed as vulnerable in the IUCN Red List based on population declines in known populations.—Internet
