Apply mass media to serve interest of the nation

The 14th founding anniversary of the Myawady Television was marked the other day along with the prize-presentation for outstanding staff, the best manuscripts of Myawady and Ngwetayi Magazines and Myawady Colour Photo Contest at MWD station in Hmawby Township.

Today the people and the Tatmadaw are working hard for building a peaceful modern developed democratic nation. Some countries with the technological superiority are employing the media to influence their targeted countries in the economic, social, cultural, literary and art fields.

Ignoring the developments of Myanmar, certain nations are using the media as a weapon to mislead the international communities into misunderstanding Myanmar. Moreover, certain foreign broadcasting stations are airing fabricated stories to weaken national solidarity, to break up the Union Spirit and to undermine stability of the State.

Therefore, it is necessary to wage counter-media attacks to refute such fabricated stories and protect the people. Among the media, television and periodicals are the most effective means of communication in information and education. Television is the most effective media among the people.

Myawady Television that plays a vital role in the mass media always discharges duties of broadcasting authentic news in time, entertaining and educating the people.

STRASBOURG, 5 April—The leaders of NATO member states have agreed here on Saturday to relaunch talks with Russia in the framework of the NATO-Russia Council (NRC), suspended by the alliance unilaterally after the Russia-Georgia military conflict. “Despite our current disagreements, Russia is of particular importance to us as a partner and neighbour,” they said in a declaration issued at a two-day summit marking the 60th anniversary of the bloc.

They said that areas of common interest between NATO and Russia lie in the stabilization of Afghanistan, efforts toward arms control and disarmament, the fight against the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, anti-terrorism and fighting drugs-trafficking and anti-piracy operations off the coast of Somalia.

The leaders said that they would “assess possibilities for making (the NRC) a more efficient and valuable instrument for our political dialogue and practical cooperation.

“We want to step up practical cooperation in the NRC,” NATO Secretary General Jaap de Hoop Scheffer told a Press conference after the summit.

Palestinian killed after attacking Israeli border police

JERUSALEM, 5 April—A Palestinian woman was shot dead on Saturday afternoon after she opened fire on Israeli Border Police in southern Israel.

According to Israeli Police Commissioner David Cohen who held a Press conference at the scene, a Palestinian woman armed with a rifle arrived around 2 pm local time at the Israeli Border Police base near the Shoket Junction between Beersehbha and Arad.

The woman then opened fire at the policemen. A guard at the entrance of the base averted her arm, and she fired into the air. An Israeli Border Guard officer who arrived at the scene shot and killed her.

Israeli police sappers used a robot to detect any explosives on the woman’s body, finding none.

Israeli police suspected the woman had infiltrated Israel from the South Hebron Hills area in the West Bank, Ha’aretz daily reported on its website.

“I’m calling on the public to be alert and inform police about every suspicious occurrence,” Cohen said.

Earlier Saturday, the spokesperson of Israel Defence Forces confirmed that its forces have killed two militants who were planting bombs near the security fence between Israel and the Gaza Strip. —Internet

Obama welcomes IOC Evaluation Commission to Chicago

CHICAGO, 5 April — US President Barack Obama issued a welcome on Saturday to the International Olympic Committee (IOC) Evaluation Commission members who are visiting Chicago as part of an official visit to assess the city's bid to host the 2016 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The president's greetings came in a video that was played as the IOC's Evaluation Commission began hearing presentations on the city's plan by officials of Chicago 2016. Chicago is President Obama's recent hometown, and he is a strong and long-time supporter of the city's bid for the 2016 Games.

In the message, Obama praised Chicago as "most American of American cities". He said the city "reflects the decency, honesty, and generosity of our people; a city of broad shoulders, big dreams, and a bright future".

The IOC evaluation team including 13 members arrived in Chicago on Thursday, kicking off the inspection tour on proposed Games sites in Chicago and question bid team officials about their proposal. Grant Park, where a large victory celebration was held after Obama's election in November, is a venue site under Chicago's plan.

Chicago is the first stop on the evaluation committee's itinerary. The delegation later will visit Tokyo, Rio de Janeiro and Madrid. The decision on the site for the 2016 Summer Olympic Games will be made in Copenhagen on 2 Oct, 2009.

Prices for world's cheapest gas may be going up

CARACAS, 5 April, — Venezuela has the planet's cheapest gasoline: At 12 cents a gallon (3 cents a liter), it costs about 30 times less than bottled water.

But falling oil income and sagging crude output could soon mean a pinch at the pump in oil producing countries like Venezuela, where hefty government subsidies have for decades guaranteed cheap fuel.

Iran is already cutting back, while Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez has revived talk of a price hike for the first time in 12 years — a politically unpopular move that two decades ago sparked deadly riots in Caracas.

"One day, prices will need to be adjusted," Chavez warned recently in a televised speech. "We're practically giving away gasoline."

To spread wealth and buy support, many oil producing nations subsidize fuel for domestic consumption. Gasoline sells for as little as 39 cents a gallon (10 cents a liter) in Iran, 60 cents a gallon (16 cents a liter) in Saudi Arabia, and $1.52 a gallon (40 cents a liter) in Iraq, where prices were ratcheted up following the US invasion.

The global economy has crashed, however, and so has the price of oil. The same countries that used billions from crude exports to subsidize gasoline at home, even as prices hit record highs elsewhere in the world, are now under tremendous strain.

Iran, with the world's fourth-largest oil reserves, reduced its most heavily subsidized monthly ration by 20 percent to 26 gallons (100 liters) per car in March. Malaysia, where subsidies ensured some of Southeast Asia's cheapest gasoline, increased prices by 40 percent to $3.31 a gallon (61 cents a liter) last year, sparking nationwide protests. Net fuel importers Indonesia, Taipei and India also reduced subsidies.—Internet

World pays greater attention to China's role

LOS ANGELES, 5 April — A US economist lauded China's role in the G20 Summit, saying other countries were paying greater attention to what China has said and done.

In an interview with Xinhua on Friday, James Barth, a senior economist at the Milken Institute, an independent think tank, said when China was speaking about the role of the world currency, US Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner retreated what he said because China is so important in helping fund the US deficit.

China is a key player in what is happening to interest rate and financing the deficit in the United States, Barth said. The United States needs to cooperate with China, and China also needs to work with the United States in tackling the current financial crisis, he said.

Regarding China's concern over its losses in investment in US assets, Barth argued that the US treasury securities are among the safest in the world today, adding if China invested in other assets, the situation could be worse. He also noted that it is clearly not in the interest of China, nor the US, nor the world economy if China moves too quickly to try to re-balance its portfolio.—Internet

Chinese student injured in US shooting in stable condition

BINGHAMTON, 5 April— A Chinese student injured in Friday's shooting in Binghamton was still being treated in a local hospital but in stable condition without life danger, Chinese diplomats said on Friday.

Liu Junhua and Wang Tao, consuls of the Chinese Consulate General in New York, arrived in Binghamton on Friday night and visited the injured student at Lourdes Hospital.

The student was shot in the right arm and right leg and was given a surgery in the afternoon, Liu said, without disclosing a name or any other personal information. The student was doing well after the surgery and remained in clear consciousness with no difficulty of expressing himself, he said.

Liu said the young Chinese was tak-

Three more bodies recovered in NE China flooded colliery

JIXI, 5 April—Three more bodies in a flooded coal mine have been recovered as of Sunday morning in northeast China's Heilongjiang Province, raising the death toll to five, local authorities said.

Rescuers have saved four miners as of 7 am and are searching for another seven trapped underground.

The accident occurred at about 5:30 am on Saturday when 22 miners were working beneath Jinli coal mine in Jidong County, Jixi City. Six escaped, said Jixi city government.

About 4,000 cubic metres of water had gushed into the shaft and it will take workers about three days to pump out the water, said Wang Guangyue, vice mayor of Jixi.

Rescuers are using six pumps to get the water out.

An initial investigation showed that improper operation by workers might be one of the causes of the accident, said Li Yubao, head of the coal industry administration of Jixi.

The coal mine, owned by a local company known as Tianyuan Company, is a legal undertaking capable of producing 40,000 tonnes of coal a year. It was said to have resumed coal production without a prior approval as required, according to the city government.—Xinhua

New Yorkers stage second day protest on Wall Street

NEW YORK, 5 April — Thousands of New York protesters marched for the second day in a row on Wall Street Saturday, calling for an end to the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and more government aid for struggling working people, local TV channel NY1 reported.

The group United for Peace and Justice organized the event, which started at noon. The marching protesters carried signs and puppets and chanted as they went down Broadway, walked past the New York Stock Exchange, and ended up in Battery Park.

They also walked past companies that took federal money, including American International Group (AIG), which drew controversy for giving company executives bonuses after it received federal bailout money.

Protesters were reportedly expressing concerns about President Barack Obama's plan to remove troops from Iraq and relocate them to Afghanistan. Everyone who attended the protest agreed that they were very concerned about the current state of the country, NY1 said. Hundreds of angry New Yorkers on Friday protested against the bailout of Wall Street and banks, urging the US Government to care more about the people who need jobs and medical care.

Crime decreases in Chicago in first three months

CHICAGO, 5 April — Crime decreased in Chicago, the largest city in US Midwest with homicides dropping almost 21 percent for the first three months this year compared with the same period last year, Chicago police said on Friday.

Arabic inscriptions of Spain's Alhambra decoded

MADRID, 5 April — For centuries visitors to the Alhambra fortress-palace in Granada, built by Spain's medieval Moorish rulers, have wondered what the thousands of Arabic inscriptions that are carved into its walls and ceilings mean.

Now researchers, armed with modern technology such as digital cameras and 3D laser scanners, have embarked on a mission to catalogue and decipher for the first time all the words that adorn Spain's most-visited tourist attraction.

And what they have found so far is that, contrary to what was widely believed, verses and poetry represent only a tiny minority of the messages in classical Arabic that cover the Alhambra, Europe's jewel of Muslim architecture.

"They do not make up not even 10 percent of what has been studied so far," said Juan Castilla an investigator with the School of Arabic Studies at Spain's Higher Scientific Research Council which is directing the project.

Instead the phrase that appears most frequently is the motto of the Nasrid dynasty that ruled Granada from 1238 until the Spanish reconquered the city in 1492: "There is no victor but Allah."

"It is repeated hundreds of times," said Castilla, whose team has so far de-

Sri Lanka says 111 Tigers killed in fresh fighting

COLOMBO, 5 April — Sri Lankan troops advancing on the last remaining pockets of rebel resistance killed at least 111 Tamil Tigers in separate ground and sea clashes on Saturday, the military said.

Security forces recovered the bodies of 93 Tigers killed at Puthukkudirippu while another 18 guerrillas perished in a separate sea battle on Saturday, military spokesman brigadier Udaya Nanayakkara said.

"It is one of the biggest blows for the Tigers recently," Nanayakkara said referring to the military drive to crush Tigers who have been confined to a narrow strip of coastline in the district of Mullaitivu for several months.

He said troops had also captured a 130 mm artillery gun which had been used by the Tigers to attack security forces moving in on them.

There was no immediate comment from the Tigers. The assault has pushed the rebels into a 20-square-kilometre (eight-square-mile) patch of land in Mullaitivu.

Earlier in the day, the navy's special boat squadron sank one vessel belonging to the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) while two others were destroyed by ground troops when they tried to beach, the military said.

Five children, father die in murder-suicide

GRAHAM, 5 April — A father apparently shot to death five of his children, ages 7 to 16, at their mobile home and then killed himself near a casino miles away, police said on Saturday.

Ed Troyer, a spokesman for the Pierce County Sheriff, called it a domestic violence situation and a murder-suicide.

"We believe they all died of gunshot wounds," Troyer said.

Police found the father's body early Saturday in his still-running car near the Muckleshoot Casino in Auburn, about 30 miles south of Seattle. He had apparently killed himself with a rifle, although no note was left in the car, Auburn Police Sgt Scott Near said.

Later in the day, Pierce County deputies checked the mobile home, which is about 20 miles southeast of the casino, and found four of the children dead in their beds and the fifth in the bathroom.

Neighbours in the Deer Run mobile home park, a neat, well-kept community nestled among towering evergreens, were shocked and weeping at the news.

"How could something like this happen?" asked Mary Riplinger, whose kids were playmates of the slain children. "Everyone's asking: Why did he do it? It's not right."

The mother of the victims was not at home, Troyer said. Deputies were called to the mobile home after a relative stopped by and saw a child lying motionless on a bed through a window, but couldn't get anyone to answer the door.

22 St Mary students cram into phone booth

Teams of students competed to fit as many bodies as possible into a phone booth at St Mary's College of California in the United States on Wednesday.

They have done something their predecessors famously did 50 years ago: twenty-two students cram into a phone booth.

A half-century ago, Life magazine published a now-famous photograph of 22 St Mary's students stuffed into a phone booth, a popular college stunt in the 1950s. Current students matched the number in the 1959 image, though they failed to break the campus record of 24 set in 1984.

Save South Africa's penguins — give them a home

Nesting in the sparkling sand, preening on the rocks and darting through the waters, the penguins on the southern tip of Africa are the ultimate crowd-pleaser. But crisis looms.

Short of food, exposed to predators and the African sun, their numbers are plummeting. But salvation may rest in a simple manmade solution — housing for penguins.

worked well on a more distant penguin island in South African waters, and wildlife rangers are eager to see whether the boxes recently installed on Boulders Beach, where tourists can watch the birds up close, will prove equally attractive.

Anti-NATO protesters burn buildings in French city

STRASBOURG (France), 5 April — Anti-NATO protesters set ablaze a hotel and other buildings near the river Rhine on Saturday and riot police fired volleys of teargas to try to control an upsurge of violence on the fringes of a NATO summit.

Masked youths threw petrol bombs, smashed windows and ransacked shops, forcing massed ranks of police into retreat in the eastern French city of Strasbourg before they regrouped and tried to seize back control. French police and fire services helped to extinguish the fires, which gutted several low-rise buildings and ravaged an IBIS hotel. Residents said it took some time for the fire services to arrive.

The worst of the violence was centred close to the French side of the Bridge of Europe — a road link over the river Rhine which connects France with Germany.

The bridge is five kilometres (three miles) from the conference centre where 28 NATO leaders, including US President Barack Obama, were meeting, and a pall of black smoke was clearly visible from the summit venue.—MNA/Ruters

US military removes lawyer from Guantanamo case

WASHINGTON, 5 April — The US military has removed a Navy defence lawyer from the case of a young Canadian terrorism suspect being held at the Guantanamo prison camp, a military official said on Saturday.

Navy Lieutenant Commander William Kuebler had been serving as chief defence counsel for Omar Khadr, the last citizen of a western country held at the US naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Kuebler was removed from the job on Friday because his supervisor "believed it was in the absolute best interests of the client", Michael Berrigan, principal chief defence counsel for Guantanamo, said by email. Taking Kuebler off the case was "necessary to pursue a client-centered representation in full cooperation with" Khadr's Canadian defence team, Berrigan added.

Khadr was captured at age 15 and is accused of murdering a US soldier with a grenade during a firefight in Afghanistan in 2002. His lawyers have argued that he was a child soldier conscripted by his late father, an al-Qaeda financier, and that any prosecution should take place in regular US or Canadian courts. Khadr is now 22.

Kuebler has been outspoken on behalf of Khadr and last August sued Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper in a bid to force him to intercede with Washington on Khadr's behalf. US President Barack Obama has pledged to shut down the Guantanamo prison camp that was widely seen as a stain on the United States' human rights record and a symbol of detainee abuse and detention without charge under the administration of George W. Bush.

Obama now must decide what to do with Khadr and other detainees still at Guantanamo. Kuebler was reassigned to a job within the Navy's judge advocate general corps, Berrigan said. Kuebler, in an e-mail on Saturday, said "unfortunately I am unable to comment right now."

Gunman 'lying in wait' kills three Pittsburgh officers

PITTSBURGH, 5 April—A gunman wearing a bulletproof vest and "lying in wait" opened fire on officers responding to a domestic disturbance call on Saturday, killing three of them and turning a quiet Pittsburgh street into a battlefield, police said.

Police Chief Nate Harper said the motive for the shooting isn't clear, but friends said the gunman recently had been upset about losing his job and feared the Obama administration was poised to ban guns. Richard Poplawski, 23, met officers at the doorway and shot two of them in the head immediately, Harper said. An officer who tried to help the two also was killed. Poplawski, armed with an assault rifle and two other guns, then held police at bay for four hours as the fallen officers were left bleeding nearby, their colleagues unable to reach them, according to police and witnesses. More than 100 rounds were fired by the SWAT teams and Poplawski, Harper said. The three slain officers were Eric Kelly, 41, Stephen Mayhle, 29, and Paul Sciuillo III, 37. Kelly had been on the force for 14 years, Mayhle and Sciuillo for two years each. Another officer, Timothy McManaway, was shot in the hand and a fifth broke his leg on a fence.—INTERNET

Evacuation ordered as Chile volcano erupts again

SANTIAGO, 5 April—Chile's Llama volcano, one of the most active in South America, spewed out a river of lava more than 1,100 yards long on Saturday in a fresh eruption, prompting officials to order dozens of people to evacuate.

Llama, which lies in Chile's picturesque lake region about 435 miles south of the capital Santiago, erupted on 1 January, 2008, and has belched rock and ash sporadically since then.

The lava and hot gases from the latest eruption are melting snow on the sides of the volcano, and authorities say some towns are in danger of being hit by mudslides.

"We are going to start the evacuation of some people who live in sectors that are particularly vulnerable to the risk of ... avalanches of mud due to melting snow," Johaziel Jamett, head of the early warning center at the National Emergency Office, told Reuters.

"It is a spread-out population. We are talking about a few dozen people, not a massive evacuation," he said.

US police hunt for motive after immigrant kills 13

BINGHAMTON, 5 April—US police on Saturday sought to uncover why a jobless immigrant snapped, going on a murderous rampage in the center where he learned English, mowing down 13 people before killing himself.

The bespectacled gunman at the heart of the tragedy in the quiet New York town of Binghamton was identified as Jiverly Voong, 41, of Vietnamese descent, who until early March had been taking classes at the American Civic Association.

Early Friday Voong, who had legally changed his name from Wong, donned body armor, blocked the centre's back doors with his car and then burst into the front of the building in a hail of gunfire, police said.

Without uttering a word, Voong shot two receptionists, killing one, then strode into a classroom where an English lesson was being held and shot dead another 12 people, injuring three more, before turning the gun on himself, police chief Joseph Zikuski said.

The alarm was raised by the surviving receptionist, hailed as a hero by the police chief, who played dead after being shot in the stomach. She then crawled under her desk to call 911 on her cell phone.

She and the other three injured were on Saturday still being treated in hospital. Two were in a critical condition.

As West warms, some fear for tiny mountain dweller

SALT LAKE CITY, 5 April—The American pika — a short-legged, hamster-sized fur ball that huddles in high mountain slopes — isn't built for long-distance travel. So as the West's climate warms, the tiny pika has little choice but to scurry a little farther upslope to beat the heat.

Problem is, in some places, they've run out of room to run, according to scientists. Without cool rocky refuges, the finicky pika can't survive. Soon, if conservationists have their way, the pika could be the first species in the lower 48 states to get federal endangered species protections primarily because of the effects of climate change.

"It's feeling an exaggerated brunt of global warming," said Greg Loarie, an Earthjustice attorney involved with lawsuits to get the pika protections. "Unlike others, it can't move north. It's stuck." The US Fish and Wildlife Service is scheduled to decide by 1 May whether to take an in-depth look at the pika — a diminutive relative of the rabbit that inhabits 10 Western states — and whether it may need to be on the endangered species list.

The polar bear is already listed because of threats of global warming. The pika could be next. And more petitions naming climate change as a cause of species decline are likely in the coming years, said Dan Ashe, science adviser to the head of the Fish and Wildlife Service. "It's like the 'check engine' light that comes on in your car. It tells you something's going on here," Ashe said.

Shrinking airlines park more planes in the desert

MARANA, 5 April—Old jets come here, empty engine pods shrink-wrapped in white, tall red tails fading to pink in the desert sun. More will come soon. Some will never fly again.

Airlines have announced plans over the past year to take 1,700 planes out of service as fewer people fly. United Airlines is retiring all 94 of its Boeing 737s by the end of this year, and Northwest Airlines has cut its old DC-9 fleet by about a third.

The number of planes in storage has jumped 29 per cent in the past year to 2,302, according to aerospace data firm Ascend Worldwide. That includes 930 parked by US operators alone.

Eventually, some will be sold, some scrapped, some will sit at desert facilities in southern California, Arizona, and New Mexico. But at the moment, their number is growing faster than expected. The banking crisis has made it very difficult to get loans to buy aircraft, and the drop in commodity prices has gutted their scrap value. That makes for busy times at facilities like Evergreen Maintenance Centre near Marana. Its super-sized hangar fits a 747, and there are plenty of active planes on hand, including one 747 used to test Pratt & Whitney engines and another converted to fight forest fires.—Internet

Road accidents kill over 15,000 in China in Q1

BEIJING, 5 April—China saw 52,661 road accidents in the first quarter, which left 15,464 people killed and 63,102 injured, according to the Ministry of Public Security. The figures dropped by 16.4 per cent, 4.3 per cent and 14.1 per cent respectively year-on-year, the ministry said on its website. The accidents also resulted in 200 million yuan (29.4 million US dollars) direct economic loss, down 25 per cent, the ministry said. According to the ministry, public security departments nationwide intensified efforts to straighten out activities in violation of traffic regulations during the Spring Festival holiday period and in following months, resulting in drop of traffic violations featured by speeding, drowsy driving, drunk driving and overloading of passengers.

Black women at risk of deadly breast cancer type

BOSTON, 5 APRIL — This type of breast cancer is more deadly, in part, because it does not possess receptors for the hormones estrogen or progesterone, nor a protein called HER2. This means that women with these “triple-negative tumors” cannot be helped by drugs that target estrogen and progesterone — including tamoxifen and aromatase inhibitors — or by the anti-HER2 therapy Herceptin.

“The higher prevalence of triple-negative breast tumors in black women in all age and weight categories likely contributes to black women’s unfavorable breast cancer prognosis,” Dr Carol Rosenberg from Boston University School of Medicine noted in comments to Reuters Health.

“The reasons explaining this finding are not certain, but it is possible that black women may be at intrinsically greater risk of these more aggressive tumors,” she added.

Rosenberg and colleagues studied 415 women with breast cancer. Thirty-six percent of the women were white, 43 percent were black, 10 percent Hispanic and 11 percent of “other” races. Forty-seven percent of the women were obese.

Most of the breast tumors (72 percent) were estrogen receptor-positive and/or progesterone receptor-positive; 20 percent were triple-negative and 13 percent were HER2-positive.—Internet ANCHORAGE, 5 April—The Mount Redoubt volcano in Alaska has had another large eruption after being relatively quiet for nearly a week.

The Alaska Volcano Observatory in Anchorage says the volcano about 100 miles southwest of the city erupted early Saturday.

Serena slumps to new tennis queen Victoria

MIAMI, 5 April—Belarussian teenager Victoria Azarenka clinched the first major title of her career by beating top seed and world number one Serena Williams 6-3, 6-1 in the Miami WTA hardcourt final.

Williams, bidding to claim a record sixth title and third in a row, was badly affected by a left thigh injury which got worse as the match progressed. Despite the defeat, the American was already assured of hanging on to her world number ranking for the 71st week of her career.

It was a poor quality final. The players reached 3-3 in the first set before Serena, who had defeated sister Venus in the semi-finals, began to feel her thigh which was heavily bandaged and which was also supporting her knee. From that point on, the reigning US and Australian Open champion managed to win just one more game.

University of Computer Studies (Lashio) creates learning opportunity for local national youth

Article: Htein Lin (Myanma Alin); Photos: Aung Than (Mingala Taungnyunt)

For modernizing and developing a nation, the national education promotion and development of human resources are basic requirements.

In the 21st Century, the new generation youth across the nation have to pursue the higher education to be able to catch up with the developing modern technology.

Nowadays, the government had designated 24 special development regions and opened universities in those regions for ensuring equitable opportunities for new generation youth to pursue higher education and for developing human resources in the regions.

In doing so, Lashio is one of the major towns in special development regions. At present, local youth have opportunity to pursue higher education as Lashio University, University of Computer Studies and Technological University have been opened there.

While visiting Lashio, the news crew of the Myanma Alin Daily had an interview with Principal Dr Daw Nan Soe Soe Aung of University of Computer Studies (Lashio).

She explained, "The construction of University of Computer Studies (Lashio) started on 4 September 2000 and it is located on 53 acres of land near the level crossing of Lashio-Mandalay railroad and

Lashio-Namtu motor road in Shan State (North). The university is providing honour's course, M.I.Sc (Thesis), M.I.Sc (Course Work), M.C. Tech (Thesis) and M.C.Sc (Thesis) courses in addition to first year, second year and third year courses to the students. A total of 207 students are attending the courses under training of 43 faculty members."

Thanks to utmost efforts of the government, development gap will be bridged throughout the nation. Actually, the simultaneous improvement of all States and Divisions will expedite development momentum of the whole nation.

She further explained, "The stake driving ceremony for construction of three-storey building of University of Computer Studies (Lashio) was held on 112 acres of land near Mehan Village of Lashio Township, Shan State (North) on 12 June 2007 with a view to enabling the local students to study the advanced computer science. As the construction tasks have completed nearly cent per cent, the building will be opened soon."

With regard to opening a computer university in Lashio, the principal said, "I am a native of Lashio. In my childhood, peace and tranquillity could not be restored in the region. We had bitter experience on general deterioration and instability. Since peace and stability has been restored, we have to lead the local new generation youth to pursue the modern technology and to become outstanding youth."

In another interview with a student who came out from the classroom during the interval time, he said, "My name is Maung Win Ko Ko. I live in Muse. I am taking the first year course. Before construction of this university, my brothers and sisters went to Mandalay for pursuing education. Now, I am pleased with gaining the opportunity to attend the university in Lashio that can shrink the distance compared with the past."
